Spring weather wasn't last year's long and cool and snow hit the Moscow area over the weekend. Weather forecasters predict that rainy and cloudy conditions will continue to prevail in the Northwest throughout the week. Unusually warm days have also been hit by the local monster thunderstorms.

Sexual behavior to be discussed

Human normal and abnormal sexual behavior will be described by Dr. William H. Masters and V. E. Johnson, of the Stanford University Medical School, in the series of symposia on the Sexual Behavior of the Human Male, to be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in the Student Union Ballroom. The Masters-Johnson studies of normal sexual behavior were considered by the American Medical Association committee on human sexuality as constituting the definitive work on the subject.

Students attending the symposia will have the opportunity to see the work which constituted the basis for the reports which have been distributed to the American Medical Association committee on human sexuality. They will also have the practical and theoretical aspects of sexuality to discuss.

Joint Finance Committee submits $6 million budget

Official considering annual catalog move

Contemporary university officials are presently considering the possibility of publishing a new catalog every other year. The production of an annual catalog entails a considerable amount of work recommended by the Council of University Presidents, and was last published in 1970.

Before the Finance Committee consisting of President Idaho's L. D. Decker, Vice President for Finance and Treasurer Joel W. Parks, and student officers, the possibility of publishing an annual catalog every other year was discussed.

Decker explained that the committee had the following reasons for publishing an annual catalog every other year: cost, length of time the catalog is in use, and timing of the catalog publishing cycle.

The committee considered the possibility of publishing an annual catalog every other year to reduce costs and improve the quality of the catalog.

Controversy of Bill on Rights reactivates Idaho organization

The controversy for Rights, a group that first united in opposition to the spring opening of the Idaho Penitentiary at McCall, Idaho, is back in the spotlight again.

The group, which is composed of local citizens and members of the Idaho State University faculty and students, is again organizing to protest the opening of the prison.

The group is composed of local citizens and members of the Idaho State University faculty and students, who are determined to oppose the opening of the prison.

Their main goal is to prevent the opening of the prison.

They believe that the prison is unnecessary and that the state should use the money for other purposes.

Academic freedom? or just lip service

Editor, the Argonaut:

This letter is in no way an attack on an individual with whom I may disagree. The individual in question is, of course, a faculty member and should be protected under the law. I do not believe that any individual should be denied the right to make statements that I disagree with. However, I do believe that the university should be able to rectify the situation if it is detrimental to the university.

The university has a responsibility to protect the rights of its students, faculty, and staff. This includes the right to express opinions, even those that are unpopular. However, the university also has a responsibility to ensure that its members do not violate the rights of others. In this case, the faculty member may have violated the rights of others.

I urge the university to take action to correct this situation. This includes ensuring that the faculty member does not violate the rights of others and that the university's policies are followed.

The university is a place of learning and growth. It is important that the university be a safe and supportive environment for all its members. I urge the university to take action to ensure that this is the case.

Sincerely,

"Phantom of Opera" shown on Friday 13

Approximately 1888 students, faculty members and students of the city's Opera, all went to the SFOOKY Theater on Friday the 13th to view "Phantom of the Opera," the stage version of the hit movie, starring Brian Reaves, assistant director of development.

The client actor was present at the show and thanked the students for their participation in the project. He then took the stage to introduce the cast and discuss the making of the film.

President Harting emphasized the importance of supporting the arts in the city of Hollywood. She encouraged the students to continue their support of the arts in the future.

The event was a huge success and many of the students expressed their gratitude to the cast and crew for their hard work and dedication.

Honor society announces increase in fellowships

The deadline for applications by Phi Kappa Phi Chapters, which may submit one application each, is March 1, 1978. The deadline for applications by the Phi Kappa Phi Foundation is also March 1, 1978.

The Phi Kappa Phi Foundation has awarded 10,000 fellowships to students since its inception in 1963. The fellowships are intended to support students in their academic pursuits.

The Phi Kappa Phi Foundation offers three types of fellowships: the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Fellowship, the Phi Kappa Phi Foundation Fellowship, and the Phi Kappa Phi Development Fellowship.

The Phi Kappa Phi Honor Fellowship is awarded to students in the upper 1% of their class. The Phi Kappa Phi Foundation Fellowship is awarded to students in the upper 2% of their class. The Phi Kappa Phi Development Fellowship is awarded to students in the upper 3% of their class.

High-school jazz bands plan to attend festival

Fifteen area high school jazz bands have indicated plans to attend the March 11 University of Idaho Jazz Festival at Moscow.

Spokeman said five bands from Idaho, four from Washington and four from Oregon have definitely accepted. Two bands from high schools in Great Falls also have indicated they will participate.

“Anyone who grows up from the Northwest knows he is spoiled,” Spokeman said of the area's bands. “They're really great musicians and will be a source of pride.”

Spokeman said that bands from Idaho, Washington and Oregon are already taking steps to attend.

General Studies draws 28 this semester

Twenty-eight students have enrolled in General Studies for the spring semester. The program was begun this fall and is designed to make it possible for students to complete various majors before deciding on the course of study desired by the University they should select. Fourteen of these students are enrolled in the program. Of these, some were selected because of uncertainty about their objectives, while one was on probation and one was disqualified. Several students in the latter group have been deferred temporarily pending further effort before re-enrollment. The program is open to all freshmen who have completed at least 12 semester hours and have a grade average of at least 1.5. Normally, students in academic difficulty may not register for the General Studies Program in any of the University's colleges unless they have a grade average of at least 1.5. An academic difficulty is defined in accordance with the following criteria: a. The student must register in a course for which no credit may be applied toward the degree, b. The student must register in a course which is not required for the degree, c. The student must register in a course which is not offered in the department in which the student has a major, and d. The student must register in a course which is not offered by the college in which the student has a major.

Professor Dr. John M. Hoffmann, chairman, of the department, suggested this meeting was not an important event. "This meeting gave a real indication of the problems faced by the department," Hoffmann said. "The problems are real and need to be addressed."

Some members of the audience were concerned about the impact of these changes on other programs. "If these changes are implemented, it will affect other programs as well," one member said. "We need to be aware of the implications of these changes."
Parachute club establishes as U of I organization

A group of University of Idaho students has been flying through the air at 120 miles per hour since a year ago last September. It all started with an interest in parachuting which started the Parachute Club. The club now has $200 worth of equipment, regular use of a plane, and the regular riggers (two of the original six), licensed by the Federal Aviation Administration.

There are about fifteen active members, with "active" referring to those who jump just about every day that weather conditions permit. There are twelve "members" in training now, and the club plans to start a new class at the Naval Depot. There is a five-week period to conduct training. Currently in this period are exiting the plane, landing, emergency measures, packing parachute, and basic knowledge about the equipment.

The student is taken up to jump. In the first few jumps, a static line is tied for his protection; this is a line from the plane to the parachute that prevents the jumper from being in the air for four seconds, opening his chute. "Some guys just forget to pull the rip cord," explained Mike Christe, one of the newer riggers. "We don't know exactly why, but it has happened." The maximum rate, however, is very low. On the national scene, there are less than ten cancellations per year out of about 3,000 jumps. This is apparently caused by the number of commitments or poor training.

Val Gardiner, both (AP) — Billy Kidd, in his last race as an amateur, ever the United States in its first combined slalom and giant slalom Monday by finishing first for the third time in the downhill behind surprise winner Bernhard Russi of Switzerland. Kidd beat Russi by three-tenths of a second and the Italian by one second in the final event of the World Ski Championships.

Kidd, the one of the U.S. men's squad, entered the final race as one of the favorites for the combined title after placing fifth in the giant slalom and third in the special slalom earlier in the week. Best time 3:27:50. He tied for third last U.S. showing the hard work of the Olympics in 1982 as the Americans captured four medals, two of them silver.

Russi, 36, had just completed his 12th season, leading the world in the slalom with 8-9 points. His finish Sunday was his 16th world cup victory of the season, though he is second behind Rusell in the overall standings.

Immediately after his victory, Kidd announced he was dropping out of amateur-skiing.

Idaho junior now working at research institute

The University of Idaho student, Kevin Quinn, will present a seminar on the use of renewable energy sources as a potential solution to the energy crisis. The seminar will be held in the Engineering Building on Monday, September 11, at 3:00 PM. Quinn is a senior in Electrical Engineering and has been working on the project for the past year. The seminar is open to all students and faculty and will be held in the Lecture Hall.

The University of Idaho has established a new research institute, the Idaho Energy Research Institute (IERI), to promote research and development in the field of renewable energy. The institute is funded by the Department of Energy and has been established to address the growing concern over the depletion of fossil fuels.

The seminar will cover the various renewable energy sources, including solar, wind, and bioenergy, and will discuss the potential and challenges associated with each. Quinn will also present his research on the use of solar energy for heating and cooling applications in buildings.

The seminar will be followed by a Q&A session, and attendees are encouraged to ask questions and engage in discussion. The seminar is free and open to the public, and light refreshments will be served.
If housing not available in fall, WSU students may reside at U of I

Idaho Falls

Two hundred Washington State University students may be housed at the University of Idaho later this fall due to a recent housing crisis on the Pullman campus. William Pollock, director of housing and food services at WSU, confirmed the news. This is likely despite the addition of new dormitory facilities and the availability of on-campus apartments.

Robert Partin, U of I advisor of housing and food services, said the agreement was made last week. The students will reside in the University of Idaho dormitories, which are currently full. The agreement is in response to a housing crisis at WSU.

Partners said the housing arrangements were made to ensure that students who were already enrolled at WSU could continue their studies. The agreement includes the availability of available on-campus apartments. It was formalized by the University of Idaho and the WSU administration.

The agreement comes as a result of the University of Idaho's housing crisis, which has left many students without housing. The University of Idaho has been working to address this issue, and the agreement provides a temporary solution.

It is important to note that this agreement is only a temporary solution. The University of Idaho is working on finding permanent solutions to address the housing crisis. The University of Idaho and the WSU administration will be working together to ensure that students have access to safe and affordable housing.

WSU Co-ed housing possible by next fall says housing official

More on living arrangements are expected to be made as the fall term approaches. The University of Idaho is working with the WSU administration to address the housing crisis. The University of Idaho is committed to providing safe and affordable housing for all students. They are working with the WSU administration to ensure that students have access to the resources they need to succeed.

Students are encouraged to check with their respective universities for more information on housing arrangements. The University of Idaho and the WSU administration are working together to ensure that students have access to the resources they need to succeed.
