Vandals break losing streak with 17-16 win

By Joe Cooper
Argonaut Sports Editor

Behind a strong defensive effort and the seasonal return of Steve Olson, the Idaho Vandals opened a ticket over University of Alabama State University's football team and their homecoming game in Pullman last Saturday. Olson, a three-year starter, was hit when he took control of the game with a 44-yard return, giving 6-4 Alabama State its last score in the 11-6 victory. The Vandal quarterback, who was out against New Mexico State, was discovered that the team was not losing to the team. The Vandal offense was more than adequate for the defense to handle. Olson's accuracy was off for most of the game, but he was accurate during University of Alabama State's extra-point attempt which the Vandals defeated successfully.

Bi-anual book to be normal size

The bi-annual yearbook for school year 1970-1971 will be unlike the one size fit all yearbook. Members of the yearbook committee, including students, faculty, and administrators, say they will give the book a complete overhaul. The book will be a perfect fit for the next year.

Committee to study the relationship of intercollegiate athletes to the University of Idaho's mission. The committee was formed by the president of the university and chaired by the head of the athletic department. The committee will meet on a regular basis to study the relationship of the program to the academic mission of the university and define its goals and purposes for the future.

The committee consists of four members of the university's Board of Trustees, the athletic director, and the student body president. A faculty member will be chosen at large to serve as the committee chair. The committee will work closely with the athletic department to define its goals and purposes for the future.

Nightline crisis phone service

A council meeting was held to discuss the telephone service for Pullman area residents. The council met on the morning of the Student Union Building. Intercollegiate athletes will receive the first call to be made during the fall semester. Reports will be made to the faculty, according to the council.

Newspapers, which are being organized by the council, will be published weekly and distributed across the campus. The council will begin its work with the telephone service. The council will also work with the faculty to decide the best way to handle the crisis.

The telephone service, which has been the subject of much controversy, will begin on the morning of the Student Union Building. All services will be handled by the council, according to the council. The council will be responsible for the telephone service. The council will also work with the faculty to decide the best way to handle the crisis.
Symbolism may alienate taxpayers

According to a story printed in Friday's Argus, the new Idaho State University registrar will be moving all classes from the main campus in the basement of the registration office to a smaller office on the second floor of the administration building. The reason given is said to be due to overcrowding and lack of space.

This is a concern that has been raised by many students and faculty members at ISU. They feel that the move will be disruptive and that it will negatively impact the academic environment.

The registrar, Ms. Smith, has stated that the move is necessary to accommodate the increasing number of students. She also mentioned that the new location will be more efficient and will allow for better service to the students.

However, some members of the faculty and student body feel that the move is a step in the wrong direction. They argue that it will be difficult for students to find their way around, and that it will be more difficult for them to access the services they need.

The registrar also mentioned that the new location will be more secure and will provide a more comfortable environment for the staff.

In conclusion, while the move may be necessary, it is important for the university to ensure that it is done in a way that minimizes disruption and maximizes efficiency.

Third a borning hearing draws varied testimony

About 50 people attended the third in a series of hearings on the proposed budget cuts to the state university system. The hearings were being held in the Legislative Building in Boise.

Testimony ranged from strident criticism of the cuts to glowing praise for the university system.

Chancellor Johnson, speaking for the university, said that the cuts were necessary to balance the budget. He also praised the university's faculty and students for their efforts to reduce costs.

Opponents, on the other hand, argued that the cuts would harm the quality of education and research.

One woman, who had attended classes at the university, said that the cuts would be devastating to her family.

Another woman, who was a former student, said that she had been forced to take on a part-time job to help support her family.

A professor, who had taught at the university for 20 years, said that the cuts would harm the university's reputation.

Despite the differing opinions, the hearings were generally positive. Many of the attendees said that they were proud of the university and wanted it to continue to receive funding.

Registration drive for state election slated for today

Baldy said that the campaign would be a success if it could mobilize just 5,000 people to vote. He said that the campaign would be focused on the following:

- Voter registration
- Education
- Environment
- Health care
- Economic growth

Baldy said that the campaign would be supported by a team of volunteers who would be available to help people register to vote and to provide information about the candidates.

The campaign would be held in conjunction with the Idaho State Fair, which is scheduled to take place in August.

Baldy said that the campaign would also be supported by local businesses and community organizations.

Baldy said that he was confident that the campaign would be a success and that it would help to ensure that the people of Idaho had a voice in the future of the state.

Feliciano concert first success for Big Name Entertainment

The Feliciano concert was the first in a series of concerts to be held by Big Name Entertainment. The concert was held in Boise at the Idaho Center.

The concert was a success, with thousands of people attending. The performers included Feliciano and a range of other artists.

Big Name Entertainment is a new company that is being established by a group of investors. The company is expected to be successful, and is expected to bring new opportunities to the local music industry.

Peace Corps promises rewarding, hard work

By Dick Russell

Feature Editor

Peace Corps counselors recently met with some 500 agents of Olympia's Salvation Army to announce a new program that will have agents in all fields, including agriculture.

"We are looking for more than 100 agents to work in agriculture, specifically in the fields of nutrition, food, livestock and plant and soil sciences," said Josephine Spain, director of the program. "We are seeking agents who are interested in agriculture and who have some background in these areas.

"The Peace Corps is currently looking for agents who have the skills and knowledge necessary to help our partners in the developing world. This includes agents who have experience in agriculture, nutrition, and related fields. We are particularly interested in agents who have experience in small-scale agriculture and who are interested in working with local communities to help them develop sustainable agricultural practices.

"If you are interested in helping to improve the lives of people in the developing world through the power of agriculture, please consider applying to the Peace Corps. We look forward to working with you to make a difference in the lives of those we serve."
Students fees not enough for stadium

The University of Idaho will have to ask the Salmon Indians to pay some of the general building operation expenses. Student fees will not be sufficient to pay for construction. Frank F. McCready, director of University Relations, told the Vandals Broadcasters Morning meeting.

Meeting to take up Idaho's Bennett for arena.

McCready also informed the broadcasters that it may be possible to cover the football stadium when it is built for a rent of half the estimated $15,000. The new construction techniques are being evaluated by the architects and a report on construction of the new stadium will be made to the rent committee. The broadcasters will call the football games.

The University has been told to call Idaho's football season by the first of the year with an estimated cost of $5 million.

Three ISU Blacks reinstated

POCKETOOL (AP) Idaho State football coach Ed Cavanaugh said Monday he has reinstated three black football players who had been suspended last week for improper conduct.

Cavanaugh and the three players met with him and the assistant football coach for a private conference Monday afternoon.

Two black members of the varsity football team were named for reinstatement for the rest of the month Thursday after they behaved a properly Wednesday. Cavanaugh said he separation still.

Cavanaugh said after talking with the Idaho State head coach and Western, that he had and still had the same cause in Providence.

The three blacks are the only Idaho State varsity teams that have been reinstated for this season.
