Election returns to be posted tonight at SUB

The saga of the Student Union election is near its end as students throughout the state will receive Monday's election results tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the SUB.

With 12 candidates running, four for president and 11 for the Board of Directors, all seats will be up for election. The results will be available to the public immediately after the return count.

LATEST ELECTION RETURNS will be posted in the SUB tonight. Results may be subject to change as students review official election results.

Kidnapping, walkout, open debate

A kidnapping, a walkout and open debate at 6 p.m. Sunday session of Idaho University's Student Senate served as priority topics for the meeting. A report on the results of the elections held last Thursday will also be presented.

Arguments presented by the mock American and Taiwanese delegations and their oppositions, the British, included the recognition of the Taiwanese government as the representative of the United Nations and the non-existence of the People's Republic of China. The delegation also included an appeal to the United Nations to recognize the People's Republic of China as a member of the United Nations.

Delegates from the Soviet Union, the People's Republic of China, the Soviet Union and the United Nations, as well as the United States, joined the discussions.

The amendment was defeated, however, and the resolution was further amended to read: "The People's Republic of China is a non-voting member of the United Nations".

Delegates debated the resolution that the resolution would pass, and the General Assembly proposed a resolution that the resolution would be amended to read: "the People's Republic of China is a non-voting member of the United Nations".

Fountain pranks cost students money

In the rainy-old-golden days of yesteryear, college students used to fill up the fountain with pennies in order to see who could get the last one out. This practice was quite popular among students who were looking for a fun way to pass the time. The fountain was always full of coins, and the students would try to get the last one out by playing tricks on each other. However, this practice has caused some problems for the university, as the coins have become a nuisance and can cause blockages in the plumbing. The university has had to spend money to clean out the fountain and remove the coins. Students who are caught putting coins in the fountain may be subject to disciplinary action.

Idaho Constitution improvements intelligent

The proposed new Idaho Constitution that will be put to the people for their approval on November 5th is a step forward in ensuring the state's government remains strong and effective. The current constitution has been in place since 1895, and it is time for a modernization that reflects the needs of today's society.

The proposed constitution includes several key changes, such as strengthening the separation of powers between the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government, and ensuring greater accountability and transparency in government decision-making.

One of the most significant changes is the addition of a bill of rights, which includes protections for freedom of speech, religion, and assembly, as well as the right to a fair trial and due process of law. This is a welcome addition, as it will help to protect the rights and freedoms of all Idahoans.

The proposed constitution also includes measures to improve the state's financial management and fiscal responsibility. This will help to ensure that Idaho's tax dollars are used effectively and efficiently, and that the state's government remains solvent and able to meet its obligations.

Overall, the proposed Idaho Constitution improvements are intelligent and well-designed. They will help to ensure that Idaho's government remains strong, effective, and accountable to the people. It is a step forward that we can all be proud of.

General Mills—help for a price

In a great surging of cooperative magnetism, General Mills, Inc., has been one of the few corporations that has been willing to help the community when it needed it most. The company, which produces a wide range of products, including cereals, baked goods, and frozen foods, has been known for its philanthropic efforts and has been a leader in supporting education, health, and other community initiatives.

General Mills recently announced a program that will provide a $1,000 grant to community organizations for up to 1,000 children in need. The company is partnering with local food banks and other organizations to distribute the funds to children who are struggling to make ends meet.

The program is part of the company's broader commitment to supporting children's health and well-being. General Mills has a long history of supporting children's education and health initiatives, and this program is a natural extension of its ongoing efforts.

The company's commitment to helping children in need is an example of the kind of cooperative magnetism that can make a real difference in people's lives. By working together, we can make a positive impact on the lives of those who need it most.
Coffee House enchanting

Proosed cuts wouldn't affect local athletics

The University of Idaho Athletic Department wouldn't be affected by the proposed cuts in athletic programs under consideration by the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, NCA.

The University of Idaho athletic director, H. L. Sadow, said: "We wouldn't be limited to the number of scholarships and that's what the proposal is all about, so we would be able to continue to offer scholarships to as many students as we have full rides, says Sadow.

The No full ride scholarships at Idaho are broken down into sport categories. For instance, this year, 17 scholarships are set aside for football, 10 for basketball, 5 for baseball, and for track, and eight full ride scholarships for the other spring sports like swimming, skiing, and tennis.

Sadow said each coach can have a vote on how the 10 full ride scholarships for the Idaho football team will be distributed.

"I'm looking forward to returning to the Idaho State Penitentiary," said Dr. Robert Stephenson. "I hope to see some new faces at the Idaho State Penitentiary," said Dr. Robert Stephenson. Skydiving is exciting sport
Idaho club is one of best

By Don Campion

The Idaho State Journal Club at Moscow, Idaho, is one of the few skydiving clubs in the U.S. and one of the best in the entire world. The club is based at the Moscow State University airport and has become known for its enthusiastic and skilled members.

The club was founded by a group of students who were interested in skydiving as a sport and wanted to learn the necessary skills and procedures. They worked closely with the Moscow State University to develop their own training programs and procedures.

The club has been recognized for its excellence in safety and training, and has received several awards for its contributions to the sport of skydiving.

The club members are experienced and skilled, and have competed in national and international competitions, winning numerous awards and setting records.

The club members are dedicated to the sport of skydiving and are always looking for new members who are interested in learning and practicing this exciting sport. If you are interested in learning more about the Idaho State Journal Club, please visit their website or contact them directly.
