Carol Hussa AWS Prexy By Coed Vote Thursday

University chose Carol Hussa, as president of the Associated Women Students of Idaho at the university, Thursday. Hussa was elected president unopposed, after being nominated by Robert Tomlinson, junior, and seconded by Alexander Neuenfeldt, junior. The Associated Women Students is associated with the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Hussa, a junior in business, was a candidate for the position of vice-president of the Associated Women Students at the university, earlier this year. However, she was defeated by Carol R. Riggs, a junior in home economics, who was elected vice-president.

"I feel that I have been elected for a real purpose," Hussa said. "I am going to try to see that the Associated Women Students of the university is known to women students throughout the entire university." Hussa plans to work on various projects for the Associated Women Students, including the Associated Women Students' Club, the Associated Women Students' Club of the Associated Women Students, and the Associated Women Students' Club of the Associated Women Students.

Money, Money

Education on all levels is getting more expensive every year. Yes, it is relatively simple to say, but not so easy to try for more tax credit, scholarships, or grants.

"It is only when such changes take place that society will have a chance to look at what is really going on. We all have family and individual resources that need to be involved in such financial relief. But, in general, no one has seemed to notice this problem."

The push for more aid for college students is growing, as are efforts to get greater equalization of funds. But, don't forget this is a secondary school system.

Next, the university that students wish to attend will be the state university. The school finance law should be changed into an equitable education system.

Idaho’s Kids Being Short-Changed In Education Beyond Necessity

"Idaho is not a wealthy state and students in our schools are being short-changed in educational quality bey-ond the state’s need for young workers," said Diane Gault, president of the state teachers union. "The problem is being ignored by those who dominate the legislative and public education budget." The 12th Biennial Convention of the National Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools (NACS) at the Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas this week will provide an opportunity for concerned students to express the need for additional education spending for Idaho's K-12 students.

Paul Revers' Lash Demos, Congressmen Speak Tuesday

Approximately 50 young people participated in the Paul Revers Lash Demonstration on April 22. Congressmen were out at several locations around the country, each demonstrating the effects of sulfur dioxide pollution on the nation's forests and the role of the Federal Government in improving the situation.

The two men are members of a "Paul Revers' Lash" demonstration Committee sponsored by the National Association of Unionized Forest Workers, a member of the National Union and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Mr. Revers is a former member of the Conservation Congress of the Wilderness Society and a former member of the National Endowment for the Arts. He has been involved in environmental issues for many years and has been active in a number of organizations concerned with environmental protection.

The demonstration was held at a number of locations around the country, including Washington, D.C., New York City, and Los Angeles. The demonstrators wore protective clothing and carried signs that read "Paul Revers' Lash." The demonstration was peaceful and no arrests were made.

The demonstration was intended to call attention to the harmful effects of sulfur dioxide pollution on the nation's forests and to urge Congress to take action to improve the situation.

A number of members of Congress were present, including Senator Joe Biden, who spoke about the importance of protecting our forests and the need for action to combat pollution.

The demonstration was a success in raising awareness about the issue and in calling for action to protect our forests from pollution.

Workouts Begin Season For Vandal Hopslites

Nearly 60 freshmen hopefuls began workouts Thursday for the Bozeman baseball team's schedule which begins April 1st against Lewis-Clark State College in Lewistown. Coach Edie Manes said that he is "very pleased" with the team's progress, but would love to see the men place in the conference again.

Thursday was the first time the freshmen turned out for a morning meeting to start the season.

Other schools in the Western Athletic Conference, including Montana State College, are also starting their workouts with the Wranglers, which will be the only team in the conference.
