The few-sum comfortable citizens who wandered into the Sigma Delta Chi banquet last fall already might have been comforted by the fact that they had a few hours to relax and enjoy themselves, as the course of events was set.

The cause of the uncomfortable situation may have taken came to watch television and read the funny papers with the sense of an almost euphoric feeling they heard at that comfortable banquet.

The man who made the speech learned someone in a press conference stating to passers-by in the streets of small northern towns from the only the girl could legally be seen.

He made a speech. He didn't make a few comments. He didn't give a talk. He didn't address the audience. He addressed his audience.

He nailed his address to its chairs and kept them nailed there while they reduced their smugness and their comfort by telling them the truth.

The audience was made up mainly of journalists who didn't enjoy his speech. They didn't enjoy his speech because they were doctors and radio and television didn't do their work.

No, we didn't enjoy his speech. If we're honest now that we know what he said. The speech didn't have to come right out and tell us the truth. He had the gifts to say what he felt was right, but we were too arrogant.

Of course, his speech doesn't apply to the truth as it is a little bit of a stretch. Seems near anyone who is willing can put it on.

It's not a glass slipper that will fit only Cinderella. The traps with the whole thing is that we must put this shoe on for a few hours and then forget about it.

I hope not. I hope we didn't get through that speech just to run up, shake his hand and say, "Good, Mr. Anderson, I really enjoyed your speech," and run back to our accustomed positions in front of the television set and funny papers.

He stated that most newspaper and television personnel are afraid of censorship. He added that censorship is part of our freedom of speech.

It's easy to relate what he says to ourselves. How many times have we been heard just to avoid being a little different, to avoid being heard, to avoid being noticed? He fault the other way when we see something that just doesn't go with our way of thinking.

"We're going to lose our freedom of speech when we let our children be afraid of being "someone's hero.""

Hungerford Heads Society

Eleanor R. Hungerford, widow of the late president of the University of Idaho, has been elected president of the Whitman Society.

She is a former president of the Whitman Society and was a member of the Executive Committee of the Whitman Society.

The Whitman Society was established in 1951 in honor of the late President Whitman.

The society has a membership of over 2,000 people, and is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the country.

"You can't avoid being a member of the Whitman Society. You must be a member," said Hungerford.

The society's goals are to promote the study of the history and development of the University of Idaho, and to encourage the support of the University.

The society is a non-profit organization, and its members contribute to the University's endowment fund.

The society's newsletter, "The Whitman Newsletter," is published quarterly.

Engineering Educators Plan 2-Day Northwest Meeting

"Goal of Engineering Educators Plan 2-Day Northwest Meeting is to help engineering educators improve their teaching methods and to exchange ideas.

The meeting will be held at the University of Idaho, and is sponsored by the Northwest Engineering Educators Association.

"The meeting will be of interest to engineering educators, students, and others interested in engineering education."
The Idaho State University football team opened its season with a 38-6 victory over Montana State on Saturday. The game was played at the University of Idaho's Kibbie Dome in Moscow, Idaho. There were no scoring plays in the first quarter as both teams scrambled for field position.Two Idaho State players, Mike Cantwell and Steve Sager, scored touchdowns in the second quarter to lead the defense to their first win of the season. The defense was led by All-American linebacker Gary Johnson who had 12 tackles in the game. Coach Lindsey Austin was pleased with the performance of his team and was looking forward to the next game. The Idaho State defense held Montana State to just 6 points, while the offense scored 38 points. The win was a confidence booster for the team ahead of their next game against the University of Utah on Saturday, October 1st.

Coach Austin said, "This was a big win for our team and it's a great way to start the season. We played well on both sides of the ball and we're looking forward to the next game. We'll use this win as motivation to keep working hard and improving our game. We have a lot of work to do before the next game, but we're confident we can do it."
