Controversial State Sales Tax Bill
Raising Education Budgets Slated
For Introduction in Senate Today

Statement by Speaker

The Idaho House of Representatives is expected to pass an amended bill today which would enable Idaho State University to set up a four-year curriculum in pre-engineering. The curriculum would permit students of the universities in mechanical, chemical, electrical, and civil. The Department of Education has requested the introduction of the bill, but no action has been taken so far. The state Senate has received the request and will consider it on its own merits.

State Representatives
To Pass ISU Engineer Bill

Television Debate of Idaho Senate

By Mike Sutherland

A controversial issue was discussed with the following points:

1. The Idaho Senate in its session yesterday had a bill to introduce a three-year curriculum in pre-engineering. The bill was scheduled to be voted on today. However, there was a delay in the voting due to the debate over the bill.

2. A bill was passed in the state Senate which would require colleges to develop a four-year curriculum in pre-engineering. This bill was introduced by Senator Brown and was praised for its potential to address the economic issues.

Idaho Vandals Break Records Crushing “Little Brother” - ISU

Weber Slips By Goddard’s Five; Could Harvest ‘King Spud’ Thurs.

King Spud is the object of the Idaho Vandals’ affection this weekend on the gridiron as they seek to avenge their season-opening losses to Oregon State and Arizona. The Vandals hope to gain revenge over their arch-rivals, the Oregon State Beavers, who demolished the Vandals last year in a game that had little to do with the final score.

Records Tumble
Idaho’s records fell on the gridiron, as the Vandals bested the Beavers 27-19. Idaho’s quarterback, Russel Jones, accounted for 196 yards of total offense, including 166 passing yards and three touchdowns. The Vandals’ defense held Oregon State to 213 total yards, including only 123 passing yards.

The Vandals’ defensive line was led by senior linebacker, Tom Rucker, who recorded 10 tackles and a sack. The Vandals also intercepted two Oregon State passes, one of which was returned for a touchdown by sophomore safety, Jack DeBoer.

The Vandals will look to continue their winning streak against Washington State next week.
