Education Measures Are Principle Tie-Ups In State Legislature; “Board Of Regents” Bill Remains

TOUCHY SCHOOL FORMULA PROPOSAL AWAIT ACTION

Utah legislators are Beta action on a tough school formula that is a key to more education and the economy, said Utah

There were no major changes in the bill as it reached the Governor’s desk yesterday, with the Legislature in recess until tomorrow.

Governor Peterson had previously indicated that he would sign the bill if it were passed without major changes. The bill, Senate Bill 50, is now law and will take effect in the next school year.

In other legislative action, the Senate passed the Governor’s 1979-80 budget, which includes $1.7 billion for education, and the House passed a bill authorizing the Governor to borrow up to $1 billion for school construction.

In addition, the Senate passed a bill authorizing the Governor to issue $500 million in bonds to finance construction of new schools.

The Governor has said he will sign the budget bill, which will provide an additional $200 million for education.

The Governor also signed a bill authorizing the Department of Education to provide technical assistance to schools and districts.

Traffic Changes-Students Know

Operations Council needs to keep the students informed about traffic changes in the campus traffic and parking regulations.

The latest University Bulletin and the A.S.U.I. handbook only partially outline the traffic and parking rules and are too vague for day-to-day use. The yellow flyer published by the Office of Automobile Registration and available at the Information Security Center lists of the regulations, but it does not take care of the recent modifications.

The Administration is pleased with the new parking zone, and it should be.

A committee, appointed by the Operations Council, came up with a workable solution to a difficult and pressing problem with the following number of cars arriving on campus each year.

But the zoning system was initiated before students returned to the campus last fall and variations to the original plan have been necessary. For example, as 8th Street running in front of the Life Sciences Building has been reviewed and as two-hour parking for off-campus students is to follow a sticker. The area is listed in the flyer sheet only as a two-hour parking zone.

This change and others have been sent to the Plant Security forces who follow these rules when enforcing and regulating the traffic flow and the parking zone.

The students however do not have the above official communication with Operations Council, which makes the new rules. The result is that a student unknowingly commits a violation by parking where the new regulations may be are to be.

There have been several modifications to the parking regulations during the year, and no doubt there will be more. Financial Vice President R. A. Dick recognizes that while the present system is basically sound "it needs to be reviewed." And, Francis Perriman, who administers the traffic tickets at the Information Center, admits: "We have bugs in it."

Dick has said that the students will be notified of any major change and that the recent modifications have "got them around by word of mouth."

However, a ticket resulting from not being informed of the recent "minor changes" amounts as much against a student’s record as a violation from a "major change." It is fair to say that the students who are officially notified of all official edicts which modify the existing traffic and parking code. Even an official announcement in The Intercollegiate Kate, a student newspaper would suffice. J. E.

Parking Ticket Appeal Possible; Unhappy "I" Driver Recipe Listed

By JIM HEREND

A recipe for an unhappy student driver—Take a parking car, add a student policeman, complete with都不能法o, and stir the campus parking regulations. Stir vigorously with a splash of human nature. (Apples are not called for.)

An explanation of why a citation was issued and a appeal to the parking office of the Student Information Center seems to satisfy most of those unhappy student drivers, according to Traffic officials.

Those students who are still not satisfied may appeal the ticket received on their appeal to the Student Information Center. However, the judicial board members are aware that some student drivers are aware of the appeal avenues to avoid having to pay a fine.

A student who receives a ticket may appeal it in writing or by phone, according to the Student Information Center. Students must submit their appeals to the Student Information Center within seven days of receiving the ticket. Appeals must be in writing and must be accompanied by a proper justification for the appeal.

The judicial board, when reviewing an appeal, will give the student an opportunity to present evidence and make a case as to why the ticket was issued. The student will be notified of the outcome of the appeal within 10 days.

If the student is dissatisfied with the outcome of the appeal, he may appeal to the Municipal Court.

"Try To Reason..." is the way to reason with the student policeman and the traffic ticket.

"I tell them that they can appeal it if they want to. They can appeal it, and if they still don't have a ticket, they don't have to have it," Deputy said. "They can appeal it, and if they still don't have a ticket, they don't have to have it."

"We must have appeals—it's the only way to keep the student drivers happy, and we have to have appeals," Deputy said. "We must have appeals—it's the only way to keep the student drivers happy, and we have to have appeals.
