The Golden Fleece
By Jason

The school has one poetry reading lesson it should consider from the pages laid out by the old boys who will soon step down to being just plain-students. Closed nights have a purpose. The next year&'s seniors will get one for all-campus events. Saturday night's Junior-Senior Night (it used to be a Prom) failed miserably. Part of the blame should be chalked up to poorly laid pines and a too-animal, semi-formal in the air.

Perhaps more of the blame should be laid to too much competition from activities on the same night. This problem used to be stimulated automatically when closed nights were declared for the big all-campus events.

Tie, Tie, TIC

'TIC sounds more like a hag than someone to whom Idaho males address their letters when they think about a fiancee. But looking around campus at midnight may help you to determine the person you want to see. This is one of the liveliest groups around. Sometimes.

It seems that some living groups don't get consistant on the basis of campus activities. (Yes, they do, this is a legitimate gripe, sometimes.) But some of the living groups have as much as 30 to 40 per cent of singles.

While some people would like the singles more willing to get a seat on TIC Board, others feel that the single-who's-weary-at the time of the TIC Board might be in need of a seat on TIC Board. As a result, the grades for the election are not facing off.

In The Same vein

Honest Abe and his buddies at Lindley Hall just wouldn't listen to reason last Wednesday. They've got a complex over there and are trying to carry the campus crusader on their shoulders.

1st Place Won By Engineers

A University student won first place in the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers "Three-Week" Project Competition. Three undergraduates at the University of Texas-Houston were selected from over 100 applicants to receive a $100 prize for their project, "A Project of the Future." The members of the Texas University senior group, which competed in the competition, were: William J. Miller, a sophomore electrical engineering major; John A. Taylor, a junior chemical engineering major; and Charles T. Johnson, a junior electrical engineering major.

The position of Director General is to be a separate area and the year and selection will be placed on their applications with no accounting in business.

A message of importance to sophomore men

If you've got what it takes

To be an Army Officer

You may qualify for this new on-campus training program

A new Army ROTC program starts this summer for sophomore men who apply by April 15. An interview will be held.

If you're a sophomore now attending one of the 27 colleges and universities that offer Army Officer training - you may go to one of these schools next fall. You may qualify for the new Army ROTC program.

This program - designed especially for college men who have not taken Army ROTC during their first two years - will allow you to study this field training this summer, beginning June 1. You'll have an opportunity to become educated in a new field, to develop your leadership skills, to become an active citizen.

The ROTC training is a part of a larger program to develop leaders in society. It is designed to help you become a leader in your community, to become a leader in your school, and to become more involved in the world of tomorrow.

Students interested in this program should contact their college ROTC office for more information.

Mike Davis, 22-year-old Chicago man, was the only one of the 10 finalists of the "I've got what it takes" campaign to receive a $100 prize for being selected as a "leader of the future." The contest was sponsored by the national headquarters of the Army ROTC program.

Mike Davis, a sophomore at the University of Illinois, was selected as the only finalist from the group of 10 students who applied for the prize. He has been actively involved in ROTC activities and has been recognized for his leadership abilities.

The Army ROTC program is a service-oriented organization that provides leadership training and education to college men and women.

Swim Coach Returns To Polo Vault, Eyes Olympics

In pursuit of his goal, the current NCAA indoor pole vault champion will bring to a special event at the Banana Belt in Lewiston this Saturday.

Junior Reberger, a member of the Idaho physical education staff, who aspires to swimming, coaching, and possibly pole vaulting, is scheduled to be the star of the event.

In October Reberger set a vaulting record of 10' 3" indoors in 2-7711 Center. The vaulting event is set to begin at 7:30 p.m., with the event concluding at 10 p.m.
