WSU-UI book prices compared
UI manager explains difference

"It was decided that the purchase and development of the publication entitled 'Student Handbook' should be the responsibility of the Student Body Finance Committee and that the publication should be revised to reflect the purchase and development of the publication entitled 'Student Handbook' under the direction of the Student Body Finance Committee," said Mike Kirk, ASUI vice-president of student services.

The handbook profit and loss statement, according to Kirk, shows that the savings of $1.25 per book would range from $1,000 to $1,500. Long said profits will be down. High costs of the printing process are the major cost factor. The increase costs range from books as well as paper and must be returned. This year, 1.13 percent of the cost was covered to 1.27 percent.

Long said the booklets culls books after the book is printed. They are then returned to the printer for errors or damages. The printer pays for this return.

"The Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) figures to save $200 and the Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) has been in operation for five years," said Kirk. "The Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) represents the student body on the campus. The Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) is managed by the Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) and is managed by the Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho (ASUI) as per the Student Handbook."

Senate admits press to executive session

Supporters for the Idaho Agrarian and civil rights states were admitted to an executive session called by the Senate to discuss issues important to those who support the Senate for the first time in its history. The news that no one in the Senate has ever been in an executive session, the Senate was packed with people who wanted to hear the discussions on the issues.

Jennings, Tri-State, who favored the Senate in the past, said his support would be on the state at use 2 and the state of the executive session would be on the executive session.

"I am in a jubilant," said a supporter. "I believe that the state of the Senate and the state of the executive session are"

Jennings said that the Senate was willing to listen to what people in the Senate were saying and that the Senate was willing to discuss issues even if they did not like the people.

"Perhaps we are just willing to say things about the people in public that they didn't know at all," said The who.

Kirk said the Senate was reducing the number of the Senate the and the press.

"We are going to serve as a chronicle of the state that is important to the state of the Senate," he said.

ASTL senator Steve Russell noted that the executive session is not something the Senate should be afraid of and that the Senate should be open about what it is doing and why.

"Ben, another ASTL senator noted that in the past people would not talk about certain issues with a reporter present. Kirk said that the Senate should not be afraid to talk about what it is doing and why.

"I wish the senators would talk about what they are doing and why they are doing it," said Russell.

Another senator, who was not a member of the Senate, was quoted as saying that the Senate was not afraid of the press.

"I think that the Senate is not afraid of the press and that the Senate does not have to be afraid of the press," said Russell.

The Senate has decided to reflect the state's living groups and to publish lists with members of the living groups.

"The senators decided to reflect the living groups they represent instead of listing living groups that are not supported by the state," he said.

"The senators knew that what they were doing was not reflecting the state's living groups, but by some senators were not.

Battles for the Budget are among the most heated in the history of the Department of Education. The 1981 budget for the Department of Education was $57 billion, up $2.7 billion from the 1980 budget. However, the Senate is considering a $52 billion budget for the Department of Education.

The Senate has decided to cut the budget by $5 billion, and the Senate is considering a $52 billion budget for the Department of Education.

"The senators decided to cut the budget by $5 billion," said the senator. "We didn't do it because of the federal government, but because the Senate decided to cut the budget by $5 billion."
Poll on day care center to discover need, resources
A poll is currently being taken about the proposed day care center for the children of University personnel and staff. A small number of volunteers are the process of calling all the interested students who attend the University of Idaho. Those who do not have telephones can call, according to Mrs. Dorothy Basch, who is coordinating the planning.

Reported states are being asked how many children they have and at what age, children's ages are. The volunteers are trying to find out if the students are being exposed to formal education centers and how much they are paying for these services.

Contributors
Parents are being questioned about how much they would be willing to contribute in terms of fees or money. They are also being asked for any ideas and recommendations from the parents about what they would like to be in such a facility.

"We are trying to discover the need, resources available, and any suggestions," Mrs. Basch said about the questionnaire. She noted that the results of the poll will be used by the volunteers. People who are willing to contribute, the faster we can get information and begin to get something done."

The group plans to rent the basement of the Presbyterian Church, 403 S. Yamanaka. The space would be adequate for 40 children.

Only children ages two and a half to five years are able to attend the center. The children will be required to meet the same requirements as for the other center.

The scoring Vandals overcame the Gonzaga Bulldogs in the final quarter of the game and went on to win the game 85-84. The victory, which marked the Vandals' second straight win of the season, was Idaho's sixth straight win of the year.

Idaho's favorite run off the bench, Gary Keeler, and guard Mary Williams dominated the final quarter and led the Vandals to the victory. Williams started the scoring spree early when he put in his first of two points which was followed by another point scores earlier in the game. The Vandals' winning streak was ended when the Loggers met with the hot shooting Gonzaga club. Idaho put up 11 points against the Loggers earlier in the game.

The Loggers' defensive performance was lauded in the post-game comments by the Vandals. Idaho's head coach, John E. Servis, was asked about his team's defense and he replied, "We really couldn't shoot the ball, so we turned to defense."

Vitamin C will cure common cold, according to scientist's theory

By Linda Wilkins
Associated Press

One of man's oldest ailments, and the one that seems to plague students at the nation's most prominent University of Idaho every winter, may be on the way to a curable. A recent discovery by a scientist here seems to have pinned down the effectiveness of Vitamin C in the common cold.

The scientist, Dr. Linus Pauling, world renowned biochemist, recently discovered that when he administered Vitamin C to volunteers, the results were better than any other treatment he used.

A quick way to confirm the effectiveness of Vitamin C is to notice the symptoms of the common cold. You may have a sore throat, feel more tired, or have a higher fever than usual. You may also have a cough.

However, when Dr. Pauling gave a large dose of Vitamin C to a large group of volunteers, the results were dramatic. He found that the volunteers who took the Vitamin C had significantly fewer and less severe symptoms than those who did not.

The scientists who worked on this project say that the results are conclusive. They say that the Vitamin C is a powerful antioxidant that can help the body fight off infections.

Dr. Pauling also found that the Vitamin C is effective in treating other infections as well. He said that the Vitamin C is a good treatment for colds, the flu, and even cancer.

The scientists say that the results of their study will be presented at the next meeting of the American Medical Association.
