House sets 18 as adulthood

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho House has swung open its side of the barroom doors to the state's 18 year olds, but the youths must wait for the Senate to make up its mind before savoring in to wet their whistles.

On a surprising 41-29 vote Wednesday, the House approved a measure that would give persons 18 and over the privileges of adulthood — including the right to drink beer and liquor. Figured to be the most controversial part of the bill.

It would also extend to 18 year olds the right to make contracts with parental consent and other privileges now denied them.

House Majority Leader Terry Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, said he objected to "blanket approval" for the proposal.

"I'm specifically concerned about drinking and other moral issues," he said.

Republican, Rep. Ray Lincoln of Twin Falls, said the 18 year old is "no longer a kid. A kid will be a kid until we start treating him like a man."

"If you House members who have raised children haven't got them shaped up by the time they are 18, they are never going to be shaped up," he said.

Rep. Ed Hedges, R-Boise, said he hoped that by giving the youths the responsibility of drinking it would "take some of the glory away from a six pack of beer or a bottle of liquor."

Also on the plus side for youth was Gov. Civit Andrea's signing of a bill lowering the voting age from 21 to 18 the minimum at which a person can serve on a jury.

The bill says that "whenever any reference is made to a person or persons who must reach the age of 18, 20 or 21 years of age in order to obtain any rights or privileges under Idaho law, it shall mean you or persons who reach 18 years of age."

It adds that "whenever the term 'minor' is used in the Idaho code, it shall mean a person who has not attained his 18th birthday."

Sen. Steve Russell questioned whether this was truly an ASUI decision or whether action would be taken despite what the Senate recommended.

Hartung assured him that he would be obligated to stand behind any decision of the Senate in his presentation to the Regents.

"Plans to initiate a major fund raising drive for the athletic complex roof would be contingent upon any progress made by this fund raising drive," said Hartung.

Desire not to overlook fund raising campaigns was expressed.

"It is not in the best interests of the alumni to split two projects," Hartung said.

Urged Senate action

Finally, urged action by the Senate as soon as possible, as he wished to present the views of the students to the Regents in March.

Apparently, the architects, C. M. Bellamy and Co. of Coeur d'Alene, have indicated that the performing arts center estimates given would hold until this summer, but inflation could alter the figures after that time.

Construction was expected to begin originally in 1978, according to Director Red. He said several large potential donations may be received if some action is taken, and he is confident that the Regents would approve this proposal.

Sen. Steve Russell questioned whether this was truly an ASUI decision or whether action would be taken despite what the Senate recommended.

Hartung assured him that he would be obligated to stand behind any decision of the Senate in his presentation to the Regents.

Alternate proposal

An alternative proposal suggested was that the ASUI consider using its $100,000 reserve from a golf course loan to try to attract a matching donation.

However, Hartung expressed his feeling that FPAC would yield nothing directly back to the ASUI to restore the fund. In addition, with the architects timetable presented, it might not be possible to guarantee a major fund raising in to get bids in time for construction.

The Senate agreed to look further into the proposal and come to a decision by next Tuesday's meeting.

Presidential hopeful Edmund S. Muskie will visit Idaho Feb. 19 to seek support from fellow democrats Cecil Andrus and Frank Church. Muskie's campaign workers say:

Muskie will speak at the Rodeway Inn in Boise along with Andrus and Church.

Student tickets for the event are $5; regular tickets cost $20. Those wanting tickets should contact ASUI Senator, Bill Fitzgerald.

The support of Sen. Church and Gov. Andrus is needed to sew up Idaho's delegation for the Democratic convention. Muskie's supporters say:

Last year Andrus stated that he would settle for "a ticket of Muskie and Church or Church and Muskie." In the current campaign, however, neither Church nor Andrus have indicated whom they will support.

Peace Corps

Peace Corps and VISTA will be jointly seeking applicants on the University of Idaho campus Monday thru Friday, Feb. 14-18. They will be situated in the main lobby of the SUB from 9:00 to 3:00 daily. The representatives may be reached by telephone at 885-6391.

During their visit they will be seeking applicants for the Peace Corps with degrees in agriculture (as well as general farm background), forestry, math, all sciences, civil engineering and industrial arts and business (particularly MBA's). VISTA can best utilize persons with backgrounds in the social sciences and the humanities. Lawyers are urgently needed.

A Peace Corps film will be shown in the EE-DA-HO room in the SUB. Tuesday and Thursday at 2:10 p.m. The film lasts one-half hour.

Students wishing to arrange interviews are encouraged to do so, in person, through the Placement Office in the Adult Education Building.

Mary Lee, a former VISTA in the Bronx and Eric Thomson, a returned Peace Corps volunteer from West Africa will represent the two agencies.

Student housing
Who takes the responsibility?

This week's Idahoan rebuked the University for investing funds in student housing. The notion that student housing in Park Village damaged by January's floods should not be replaced at the end of the University. The University of Idaho should, according to the editorial, lend to academic affairs and stay out of the housing business.

Though the University's primary concern is to academic matters it does have some responsibility to provide low-cost housing to students it hopes to attract. It essentially has an obligation to replace the destroyed homes of the students in Park Village.

Fogg vs the HRC

With the reintroduction of Rep. Russell Fogg, Republican from Idaho Falls, legislation to abolish the Human Rights Commission in Idaho, one gives a groan, sighs, and says, "It's a reactionary state, and sighs again.

The abolition of the human rights commission — what could be more reactionary and gain more support in a traditionally reactionary state? Thus again, Fogg withdrew his initial legislation reportedly because of youthful pressure from his hometown and elsewhere. The pressure will not be abated against his renewal.

What should be more evident is strong support for the newly introduced legislation which would strengthen the commission by alternating the terms of its membership, taking the organization out from under the governor's thumb.

Petitions and form letters are circulating calling for defeat of Fogg's proposal and passage of a bill to make the Human Rights Commission stronger. Politicians, if elsewhere, being sensitive to pressure and good headlines, will no doubt respond.

One of the most revered features of the American Dream is the individual's freedom of choice. It includes, among other things, the freedom of the individual to choose the organizations to which he will belong and the freedom to spend the money of his labor as he sees fit. That the compulsory nature of the ASUI violates both of the above is self-evident.

Although membership in the ASUI is compulsory, the student body is an informal community of students which has very little contact with those who will serve the student body. The student body is not an organized group but a clump of individuals who, despite the administration's best efforts, will not act as a group. The administration and the student organization are separate entities.

Editor, Argonaut

In order to attract voluntary members to the ASUI, there should be a clear understanding of what the organization is trying to accomplish. The ASUI should be an organization that is dedicated to serving the students and not just another group of students.

Non-preferential voting passes Senate

"I was elected because of the preferential voting system, but I am not in favor of it," explained Sen. Todd Eberhard. Eberhard made this statement during presentation of a bill amending ASUI regulations to provide for a non-preferential voting system.

The bill which encompassed both Freshman Advisory Council and the ASUI Senate was passed by the Senate Tuesday evening with only Sen. Mel Fisher voting in opposition.

Election of the 13 senators will now be conducted so that each of 13 votes cast shall be of one point value. Each of seven votes cast for Freshman Advisory Council members shall also be of one point value. Previously, "block" voting was possible. Regulations previously read that of the 13 votes cast for the Senate, "one (1) shall be of four points value, one (1) shall be of three points value, one (1) shall be of two points value, and ten (10) shall be of one point value."

Senators are elected at large by the students, and several incumbent officials rode into office through block voting of a residence or interest group it was felt. Some students representing only a minority of the student body were thus elected to office upon receipt of weighted votes.

Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates were not previously subject to the preferential system.

In other action, a bill was passed withdrawing $167.00 from game room operating expenses and transferring it to game room travel. A withdrawal of $308.00 from the Recreation Board general reserve and transfering it to game room travel was passed 8-4 by telephone vote. The bill had failed at the Feb. 1 meeting but was reconsidered Feb. 3.

An advisory committee on all phases of the election process in Latah County was established.

Schools can regulate hair length says 7th district judge Thomas

AP — A fight by three teenage longhairs to be reinstated in Bonneville High School after being suspended for violating the district dress code has received a setback.

Seventh District Court Judge Boyd R. Thomas ruled Wednesday that a school district may regulate the length of hair for boys.

The Idaho Human Rights Commission had filed suit on behalf of Kim and Kevin Getsinger and Kevin Burke on grounds the code discriminated on the basis of sex.

The controversy has gone much farther than the immediate area. As an afterthought of the commission’s intervention into the case, Rep. Russell Fogg, R-Idaho Falls, has introduced a bill in the Idaho House that would abolish the commission.

Thomas said that he interpreted the state law under which the suit was filed to apply only to employment, and not to education.

Dep. Atty. Gen. Don Knickrehm, who represented the commission said he would appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court.

"The ruling was due to the "ambiguity" of the 1969 Idaho Anti-Discrimination Act and concluded the law says nothing about discrimination of the sexes in education."

"The complaint shows there has been a differentiation between the sexes, but that is a far cry from unlawful discrimination," he said.

Drive on to obtain TV sets

Ralph Vaver, who describes himself as being "very bullheaded," is a 68-year-old Moscow resident with a good cause. Vaver, a master chef and meat cutter by profession, is asking Moscow inhabitants to donate their Gold Strike stamps and S & H green stamps to go toward television sets for "Latah county's ill and bed-ridden."

An idea from last year

Vaver, who doesn't believe in the 'generation gap' or sex education after a point (What's the matter with your mother?), came up with the idea around Thanksgiving last year when he had just been released from the hospital.

"I was just sitting there figuring what I could do for the world... I'm no millionaire you know... but I can sure do this," he said.

Remote control wanted

Planning to continue the drive for stamps for two years or for however long it takes to obtain enough television sets for the Latah county rest home and Gritman Memorial hospital, Vaver hopes also to buy remote control for the television sets.

...to help the nurses," explained Vaver, "to save their little ol' legs."

Why television sets?

"It costs at least $1.50 a day to rent a hospital T.V. Picture yourself as being on low pay... It's not the doctors or nurses but there's a racket there."

Results aren't fast enough

Vaver says the drive isn't producing results as fast as he would like but he claims he won't give up. He feels that a lot could be accomplished if youth would get involved, noting that two dances are being held in the Moscow Youth Center with admission based on stamps as well as money.

Stamps can be deposited in business establishments throughout Moscow and at the Argonaut in the SUB.

P. E. course offers fly casting

Kerplunk! A lure strikes still water. The setting is not a quiet mountain lake but rather a swimming pool in the Women's Health Education Building. Starting this semester a new P. E. course is being offered. Its title is Fly and Bait Casting.

The new class is an attempt to try to get away from the established types of P. E. and to provide a carryover style of recreation. According to Mr. Cal Lathe, instructor for the course, there has been a gradual buildup of interest for a fly casting program over the past few years and thus a curriculum was established.

Two years ago a fly and bait casting course was offered during summer school. It proved to be a success and so the same format is being offered for this spring semester. The class will be conducted in three parts: fly casting, bait casting and steelhead-salmon fishing techniques. The student must furnish his own fishing rod and tackle. The class, although it is being offered at a relatively poor time (fifth and sixth periods Friday) still has been able to attract about 15 students, one third of the girls.

The students themselves had a number of statements about the course and why they were enrolled in it. 'It's the first useful P. E. course I've ever taken,' was the reaction of one. The fact that it will be useful in later life was also expressed. Where else can one practice fly casting in the winter or clean out their lines of stream scum in chlorine water? (Sorry about that swim team.) The class provides an opportunity to compare ideas with a number of people of similar interests. Besides, when the weather warms up and the snow leaves the area waters, the possibility of field trips appears to be 'very likely.' So break out those rusty fly rods boys, and keep your tackle dry!

Once every four years the most spectacular sporting event in the world takes place, the Olympics. This year the stage was set, 1972, Sapporo, Japan and the Winter Olympics. The premier event of the Winter Olympics has got to be the men's skiing competitions. Usually one man is picked as the favorite in ability as well as popularity. He is the man with the magic name, fabulous charm, handsome features and irreproachable modesty: a true champion in every sense.

But this year for some unknown reason the field had not been able to come up with a hero-image. Triple gold medal winners of former Olympics, Toni Seeman and John-Clod Healy were now selling skills. The most recent superstar, American Jesse James, was now sitting in a warm announcing booth covering the women's giant slalom.

So the day of the most exciting men's event, the downhill, rolled around. No one seemed able to fit the favorite's mold until a young Frenchman, Pierre Martine, showed up during the starting position. He was tall and handsome, with a powerful build. The countdown began, 3, 2, 1, GO. Pierre was out of the starting post with excellent form. Charging down the hill in a powder-blue jumpsuit Martine generated excitement with every turn. Pierre was almost flying down the slope as he charged around the last bend and streaked across the finish line. The crowd went wild, Pierre Martine was the champion.

But wait, there were still competitors to reckon with. The Austrians were always tough and so were the Swiss. The day wore on. No one could even get close to the young Frenchman's time. Only one man remained to race. His name, Fiddle Casteroll, a 45 year-old garbage collector from Cubbe. As he approached the starting point his thick beard and green fatigue presented a striking contrast to the landscape. He was smoking a cigar. Taking off he slipped and slid for a while but was able to keep his sugar cane skis on the course. Casteroll then started picking up speed. The TV camera crews were already packing up their equipment as Fiddle flashed across the finish line. The timekeepers looked at their watches in amazement. Casteroll had just broken the course record and had captured the Olympic gold!

It was then that the catastrophe started. Network ratings dropped thirty points. Olympic officials immediately banned skiing from future games. The last great hero worship died during the post-race interview when Fiddle said while slipping on his combat boots and spitting a large spray of tobacco juice onto the virgin snow, "It was nothing any blue-blooded capitalist pig ever could have done!" Bye, bye Miss American Pie.

WRA awards presented

The Recognition Hour is a time when outstanding students are recognized for their outstanding achievements in WRA activities during the past year.

Dr. Betts, head of the Women's P. E. Department, will be the featured speaker and the Desert Jazz Band will provide entertainment at intermission. 'I Club, the WRA service group, tapings will also be announced.

What's happening

by Mark Fritscher

This weekend is a full one. You can cram all your culture into two or three short days if you've been culture-deprived and suffering the withdrawal.

On the arts side, we have just opened in the SUB a large show of the paintings of our own Bob Serrano. Program advisor for the ASUI. The show entitled "San Francisco, Moscow, and Other Inventions", features Bob's work over a period from '60 to '71. The media is chiefly watercolor with some mixed media depicting subjects from Moscow and France.

A further theme of Serrano's work is a collection of paintings of famous naval vessels: the artist. The works are colorful, often finely detailed, and represent particular emotional and intellectual investments of Serrano. This writer will be featuring a more comprehensive review of the show and the artist in the next issue. Meanwhile, treat yourself and take a walk along the SUB wall and enjoy the view.

The SUB will also be the scene for two film showings this weekend. A film that has become a classic of dark humor: "Dr. Strangelove", will be shown in the SUB at 7 and 9 tonight and tomorrow night. Admission is the usual 50 cents for singles and 75 cents for couples.

"Dr. Strangelove", directed by prize-winning Stanley Kubrick, is based on the novels of the late Dr. George C. Scott in sinister and compelling roles. Between them they are to "do in" this part of the film is the result of a mistaken nuclear attack on Russia, directed by an Air Force general who believes that the Reds are "poisoning our precious bodily fluids" and should be hit in a pre-emptive strike before they hit us. It's worth the show just to see Sgt.

"Bat" Guano machine-gun a coke machine to get a dime for a phone call.

Saturday night will feature a double showing of "La Caliente" and "Fattal Glass of Beer" at 7 and 9. This show will admit ignorance of the themes of these, but has been assured that they are well worth the effort of seeing.

My God, we've just been informed of a FORMAL DANCE for the weekend! Campbell Hall is sponsoring a real live old time formal dance beginning at 9 p.m. tomorrow night in the small West Cafeteria in the Complex. Admission is free and formal dress is being strongly recommended as opposed to casual or grubby. The music will be provided by an ambidextrous band able to play both traditional istand right up and hold the girl or fellow right in your arms and dance real slow and bootie. The dance is open to one and all.

Another dance for tonight in the SUB Ballroom was just announced here. Featuring "Big Fat" providing the music. The dance will run from 9 to midnight.

WSU is featuring "Casino Royale" (not the movie) in the SUB tomorrow night from 8:30 to 1:00 a.m. The evening will feature floor show entertainment and demonstrations of fast hands by a professional card "manipulator". The main attraction will be the casino games using scrip rather than real money. If you can spring for the admission price of $5.00 per couple, it could be an entertaining evening if you enjoy gambling with no pain.

And finally for the weekend, our own Wind Ensemble and Symphonic Band will perform a joint concert in the University Auditorium in the Ad. Building Sunday night at 8:00 p.m. This concert is also open to the public without charge.

Movie Mothermania and review 200 motels

By Chas. Johnson, Guest Reviewer

Q: Why recommend a crappie movie?
A: Because...it has the Mothers of Invention.

It's too long; it splits your mind; it rings your eys. It's like a scaly hand with stale popcorn under its fingertips crawling through your head: it's a stone. Moments occur when there is reason to see something not because it is significant, but because it is about that which is significant. 200 Motels now playing in Pullman of this bent, and any Mothermaniac who fails to see this flick should be flagellated to within an inch of his life with a pair of creamcheese-soaked punyhouse.

There is only one star in the picture, and that is the camera - Rings and Theodore might just as well have been replaced by Suze Mino and Kate Smith. Too much of a good thing, actually. This head camera that goes through most of the tricks invented within the past few decades: fades, washes, spins, flips, folds, collage of images, ad infinitum. It comes to the point where, in a rare moment of straight-on, undeeded shooting, you almost come out of your seat in amazement.
