Physical plant

Miniature cityexamined

Argonaut Staff Writer

The University of Idaho is almost its own city, says George Gagon, Physical Plant Director.

"In fact, we've probably more complex than a real city because we take care of all the buildings, from the roof on down," Gagon noted.

The Physical Plant is directly responsible for the maintenance of all University buildings with the exception of residence halls and the Student Union. Other functions include the upkeep of grounds, maintenance of streets on campus and the supervision of new construction.

To help do this, the Physical Plant employs engineers and planners, a grounds crew, and various tradesmen—electricians, painters, carpenters, plumbers, machinists, refrigeration mechanics, garage mechanics, and construction workers.

Heating plant too

Also under the administration of the Physical Plant is the University heating plant. The heating plant runs seven days a week, year round, except for one day a year when they shut down for maintenance.

The total crew for the entire operation is about 36 people, plus contractors. Gagon explained.

In addition, the division supervises the general storeroom which stocks supplies for the various areas of the Physical Plant as well as general office supplies for the entire University.

"We operate just about like a city," Gagon said. The University has its own well and water system, the central heating plant, a central air system that supplies compressed air for controls and laboratory use, and a master TV system with an antenna on top of the I-tower and distribution to all living groups and the SUB.

While General Telephone Co. maintains the telephone system, all telephone lines are in the underground heat tunnels. The University buys power at 12,000 volts from Washington Water Power on one meter, then the entire distribution is also in the heat tunnels.

Gagon said the Physical Plant's largest cost is $830,000 a year for fuel for the heating plant. Other fixed costs include about $317,000 annually for electrical power, $24,000 for solid waste disposal, $30,000 a year for sewage and $23,000 for replacing light bulbs.

Sevareid speaks on politics

BY JOHN LUNDERS

"It is hard to begin a critic who is right about the news," said Edward Sevareid, CBS commentator.

"The press was right during the (1960) elections, and it was ever so definite," he said.

"Henceforth, the glasses now in the hands of the press are a tool to be used as wisely as a pair of scissors," said Sevareid.

"The scissors can be used as a pair of pincers," Sevareid said. "He found a crudely grip comparable to that of the scissors administrators.

""I was a planner," Sevareid said. "I don't make any little plans, I leave little to the winds of fortune. I advise. I gave him the idea that was the American plan. I helped construct a dastardly plan for a capital city. I helped him carry it off.

"What better place to be than in the purpose of your own happenings, and you stop in advance the capability of your opponents. John Sevareid prides himself back when he said the street newspaper of that era.

"We didn't have a newspaper, Sevareid said. "I don't have a newspaper, I have a gazette.

"Sometimes you must put the gazette in a gazette," he said.

"The gazette is not a gazette," Sevareid said. "It's a newspaper, and a gazette is the word I use for the gazette.

"The journalist is not a journalist, the word I use for the gazette, the gazette should be a gazette, just as gazette was," Sevareid said.

Students' duties

Sevareid noted that on the average, a student is expected to clean five to 10 square feet of building a day, depending on the building.

The job of students is mostly problems. Gagon noted, "Nothing is going wrong or breaking down continuously. But we try to emphasize preventive maintenance to head off emergencies."

"Maintenance and operation of the first day problems — if something breaks, it's got to be fixed," he commented.

Alumni donations benefit many

BY MARY SOCHINSKY

University of Idaho alumni gave over $28,000 to the campus last year, which was used to curb various needs of the University and Alumni Center.

According to an article published in the University's Alumni magazine, the total amount given by the alumni was more than $38,000 last year and unrestricted annual giving increased by $13,000 while total annual funds exceeded $35,000.

"Where the money is spent depends a lot on the donor," said Dick Johnson, director of the Alumni Center. "Restricted donations are given to the University with a specific use in mind. They tell us where the money is to go — like the library, engineering, psychology. The unrestricted gifts go wherever they are needed.

Johnson said the alumni fund is a formally created campaign to raise money from the Idaho alumni and the need is recognized by hundreds of people within the 20,000 alumni aiding in contributions to the university.

$28,000 expected

"Last year we exceeded our $25,000 goal from the Annual Fund Drive. said Frank McCurry, director of the Alumni Center.

"This year we have exceeded our goal. We expect to get $25,000 to $30,000 when the annual fund is completed. The money from the Annual Fund is only part of the money given by the alumni. They also give gifts and grants not solicited specifically.

"McCurry noted that the University of Idaho Foundation has just been incorporated as an entity apart from the University. This foundation takes care of all annual fund grants and gifts of money donated to the University and is in charge of distributing the funds.

"Being incorporated and independent, the foundation can handle any property or financial obligations outside of Idaho. McCurry noted. Before we became incorporated, the gifts had to come to the University in a physical form custo. This was hard for gifts of land that was out of state.

"Much of the money contributed by the alumni is used to run the Alumni Center. According to Johnson, the Center has five budgets: the restricted budget and center budget.

The recent budget includes money for salaries of employees of the Center, office supplies and maintenance of alumni records. Last year this budget was $4,500.

The second budget includes a variety of expenses. The major expense here is in the publication of the Center magazine, which cost about $10,000 last year. Johnson said. It also pays for postage, and alumni meetings throughout the United States. The budget in money for Communication Weekend is around $3,500.

"The second budget counts for a very few people within the Alumni Center," Johnson said. "400.

President Nixon finally took steps yesterday to clean up the mess he had made. Prior to accepting the resignation of Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman informed him of his intention to ask John Dean and firing White House counsel John Dean III. And then accepting in a very general sense last night in a nationally televised address, the wave of public protests surrounding Watergate.

On the surface, whether or not Nixon was directly involved in either the Watergate break-in or the alleged cover-up attempt, the implications that someone from his staff was directly involved has been followed by immediate steps to clean up the White House and prove by an impartial source the innocence of his staff. Instead, the administration promised innocence, which was noticeably absent last night, and used the administration staff to prove the administration’s innocence. The fact that he didn’t take these strong steps makes one wonder about his position in Watergate.

Even presuming direct innocence on the part of Nixon, the fact that his administration is making such a great deal of a personal philosophy leads to questions about that philosophy. It is generally accepted that the source of Nixon’s administration is his personal philosophy in the top, that is Nixon. Therefore since Watergate came out of this administrative philosophy, it says something about that policy. It’s hard to believe that someone who runs an administration with as strong a hand as Nixon would allow something as major as the Watergate bug to go on without at least some knowledge.

Now finally, a clean up process has begun, but Nixon still has not appointed a special investigative force to look into Watergate. Nixon has appointed the staff of the Nixon administration to do it. Because of this, Nixon is going to have a credibility problem that will make LBJ’s credibility gap look like a minor issue.

The crisis that has prompted Nixon to take action is being compounded by his own personal actions and ideologies. He has not appointed a special investigative force to look into Watergate. Nixon has appointed his own administration to do it. Because of this, Nixon is going to have a credibility problem that will make LBJ’s credibility gap look like a minor issue.

PMI needs initiative signatures by June

The Seattle People's Horizon Initiative has collected 5,500 signatures by this date in order to get the initiative on the ballot.

According to Jim Calvert, Math Professor at the U of I and one of the leaders of the initiative, "It's too late to get this thing on the ballot, but there is still a chance that the people can force a referendum on the issue since the deadline for signatures is June 1st.

The initiative was started here in Bellingham by Darrell Crockett, a political activist, and since then has spread to Seattle and Portland. Calvert is a member of the initiative committee: the purpose of the initiative is to "ban the sale of pot in the state." He also pointed out that there is some scientific evidence to prove that marijuana is not dangerous. The evidence includes some professional activities at Blue Mountain 32, and a few things that have been done in the state with the Blue Ribbon String Band's guitar for the purposes.

New Sigma Chi house dedicated

The dedication of the new Sigma Chi Complex last Saturday marked the beginning of a new era in the college. This building is the first of its kind for the University of Washington. It has four floors and can hold 500 people. The new building is expected to be completed in three years.

On December 11th, the students of the Sigma Chi fraternity gathered in the new building to celebrate the dedication. The event was attended by many faculty members, including the college president, and many students. The evening included a formal dinner, speeches by the president and other dignitaries, and a tour of the new building. The event was successful and the new building is expected to be completed in the near future.

AFSC gives aid

The American Friends Service Committee has initiated a million-dollar drive to aid in Jewish refugees in the Near East. This drive is underway and is being supported by the Jewish community in the United States.

Reasons for the drive are the need to aid a people in distress, the need to aid the Jewish community in the Near East, and the need to aid those in need. The drive is being supported by many Jewish organizations, including the American Jewish Committee and the Council of Jewish Federations.

Such involvement includes the establishment of a fund for the aid of Jewish refugees in the Near East. The fund is being supported by the Jewish community in the United States. The fund is being managed by the American Jewish Committee and the Council of Jewish Federations.

Two third-world films will be shown as part of the UI film program this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Administration Building.

The films, "Memories of the Revolutionaries" from Spain and "The Struggle Continues" from Morocco, focus on aspects of their respective revolutions. The Cuban film concerns the revolutionaries in Cuba, and the Moroccan film deals with their struggle against France.

The films are free, but donations for them will be accepted at the door.

The New Writer focuses on short stories

The New Writer magazine devoted exclusively to quick short stories by student authors and offering a prize amount for winners, will be published this Fall in New York City.

The magazine, which focuses on fiction, also includes an open forum for each school's literary magazine, and is edited by editors and students, and articles by librarians and editors in the literary field.

The New Writer is published by Constantine Glucksman, instructor, journalist, author and Gladys Gold, journalist and author.

"We are looking for those who are good writers, and developing critical readers of the short story to be the best way to circulate the whole field," said the publisher.

Short stories published in any university, university-affiliated writer's workshop or writer's group within institutions which encourage and stimulating education programs will be considered for publication.

Semich shows floating art

By JIM STACK

The valves opened, discharging another burst of flame into the envelope, while pilot Charles Semich and his clandestine 41-foot balloon, named "The Giant," rose effortlessly to a height of 200 feet. Semich, a 35-year-old former football player, had just lifted off from the San Francisco Richmond District, using a gas-filled balloon for the first time in his life.

The balloon, which had been constructed for Semich's commercial use, was built by the Marsee Balloon Co. of San Francisco. It was equipped with a 200-foot-long, 10-inch-diameter gas bag, capable of lifting 1,500 pounds. Semich, who had been flying for 10 years, had gained a national reputation for his ability to control the balloon, which he often used for aerial surveys and scientific experiments.

The flight was a success, and Semich was acclaimed as a master of the art of balloon flying. A-V examined

How are you supposed to watch a movie on the little screen when the medium is presented to you in a darkened classroom? This is the question that the Communications Center at the University of Colorado is trying to answer.

A group of six students, led by Jack L. Semich, has constructed a new system for viewing movies. The system, which is designed to be used in small groups, consists of a 10-inch screen, a 10-watt audio system, and a 10-watt visual system. The students have been experimenting with the system for several weeks, and have found it to be quite effective.

"The system works quite well," said L. Semich. "We have been able to project a clear image of the movie onto the screen, and the audio system is quite good."}
