Women exposed to campus freak

"Seven seems to be a golden hour, give or take a half hour."

By JOHN LUNBERG
Spokesman-Review Writer

Struggling against a raging description and time, the UI Security Police and the Moscow Police Department are in hot pursuit of a hot exhibitionist.

"He's got brown or light brown hair or blond hair, collar length with a light brown mustache! He's about five-six, or five-eight, with medium build and fairly good looking. He's kind of dirty."

"Generally he has been wearing a plaid shirt kind of blue, brown cords, and dirty tennis shoes," according to V.P. Hueney, an investigating campus security man.

Further description given by Moscow Police Department said the man was about six feet tall and had long blonde hair.

Mary Aguirre who had what seemed the closest encounter with the exhibitionist described the man as "average build, about five-six, in his 20's. He was wearing a man's beige overcoat." According to Aguirre, the man had dark hair.

Easter Sunday Aguirre, who was headed across the administration building from her office, noticed the man walking toward her.

"I said, 'Hi.' He looked melancholy, and so I wished him a Happy Easter. He started to walk by, and then he grabbed my arm and said 'Do you want to see something?' I turned around and before I could answer he opened his overcoat and... I just froze, it was really weird," she said.

"I was afraid"

"I thought about screaming, and then I started to run, and he grabbed my coat. I really got away and ran. I followed me, and I didn't want to run home. I was afraid," she said.

Aguirre said she ran to the SUB and called the police and the police in from inside. "One officer was downtown and one from campus security came. They (the officers) are so good. They're just really good people."

"There have been a total of eight incidents," according to Hueney. Two incidents on the administration building and two in the library that he was fairly familiar with.

Braver now?

"It is the same character but apparently he is getting braver, before he was off in kind of a remote area, now he is actually going inside of buildings and exposing himself."

"Either he is getting braver or he's getting a lot of attention...wants to get caught," he said.

According to Hueney, one victim told the director the man had better put some clothes on before he caught cold and the victim completely walked off.

Appears in Library

"He had his zipper down and evidently a hole cut in the front," said the victim.

The time of the incidents were not available for comment. It is reported, however, that the exhibitionist appeared between floors. The victim of that exposure went downtown where the librarian on duty called campus police.

"Not long after the call was made, he walked down the stairs and out the front door," said the source. "No one tried to stop him. I guess they didn't want to get involved."

"Last week I was about four minutes too late," said

"Mellow" is word for Blue Mountain III

For music fans, frinzes, browsers, and people who have wanted the big event this weekend in the Blue Mountain III Rock Festival at McCall, the Sunday concert is postponed to last from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. (or as late as 10 p.m. in the case of the soundcheck in front of the field house.

Those who attended the first two Blue Mountain Concerts will undoubtedly miss a couple of things this week since this is the first time Blue Mountain has been held by the ASUI.

Instead of a federal park, two stages will be constructed in front of the field house. Both being out into the soundcheck. The purpose of this is to allow a hand to set up while another is performing. According to Ken Heaton, concert promoter, this will allow space to avoid unnecessary delays so that the concert mix, he said, is not limited to hand members.

The second stage is a radio tower which will be used to broadcast.

Limited area will be on site.

Senate continues 16-ring circus

For the past two years, the Senate has been furnished with the amendments and prints of the Senate's special session. The senators were not happy with the amendments and the prints were already outdated before they were received.

By now the 170 senators should be getting their hands on the 1878 edition of the recordings. They are still irrelevant in their discussions and the state is not getting any benefit.

Science, fantasy and the unexpected offered

When students return next fall, they will have the opportunity to register for "Science, Fantasy, and the Unexpected," a new class.

We are entering a kind of different era," said Dr. Tom Ingerson, professor ofcosmology. "There is a need for more physical, chemistry, physics, geology, and other science courses that are not covered by the major questions concerning the occult.

It is not possible to separate fact from fantasy according to Ingerson. "We can't tell the difference between the occult and the scientific even in the field of psychology," said Ingerson.

Toxics are discussed to be in the areas of hallucinatory, perception, the theory of the unconscious, and the law of geology, and health psychology. These topics range from consciousness, the theory of the unconscious, and the law of Idaho's Boyd Martin will retire after years of service to Idaho

A man who has served the University of Idaho as a professor of political science, head of the Department of Political Science from 1952-1958 and dean of the College of Letters and Science from 1967-1980, Dr. Boyd Martin, 70, has received an unanimous citation at the University of Idaho's 1974 commencement, which honors those who have served the university.

Martin attended the first United States government air drafts during World War II.
He also attended University of Idaho while serving in the Airborne Corps, and was later a professor of political science at the university.

Seniors Richard and Helen Martin will retire from their teaching positions at the end of the school year.

Boyd Martin has taught at the University of Idaho for 30 years and has been a professor of political science since 1967.

Martin was honored at this year's commencement as one of the university's most outstanding students and teachers, and is fittingly honored today as an Alumnus of Distinction.

Richard Martin, 70, has served as chairman of the Mountains Foundation for the District since 1972.

"It is a great honor for me to say that the University of Idaho is an important part of our lives," Martin said.

"It was a wonderful opportunity to shape up the spirit of the young people.

We had the privilege of making the country do a new thing, and to do it for the future and students.

We are eager to support you," Martin said.

"We have all of the students around the world to help with their studies.

"I want to say that the University of Idaho is an important part of our lives, and we should be proud of our students who are graduating this year.

Idaho students evaluate regional airport plan

A regional airport to serve Moscow-Pullman and Lewiston/Culdesac would probably be more available and more convenient for the Moscow-Pullman area, but students in a University of Idaho regional economics class, said Dr. Dean Campbell, assistant professor of economics, said the students studied a regional airport as a project.

One of the major concerns was the difficulty of bringing a large number of passengers to a regional airport, whereas Pullman, Washington's larger airport, showed much less revenue. For example, while Moscow-Pullman residents spent $878,000 on air travel in 1977, Moscow-Pullman residents spent $351,000 on air travel to the regional airport.

He said a regional airport constructed near Moscow-Pullman, Pullman, Lewiston/Culdesac, or all three would be a worthwhile alternative to the Spokane airport, while Lewiston/Culdesac residents would have one that was more convenient.
