Spending the Student's Money, Money, Money . . .

An appropriation of $550.00 to purchase light bulbs for the stage light of the new Performing Arts Center was overwhelmingly approved by the Senate Tuesday night.

The money, to be transferred from the Student Union ASUS Operation and Special Projects Fund into the old course equipment fund, represents the cost of bulbs for the lighting system already purchased by the university for the new center.

Edward Chavarria, chairman of the Finance committee, explained that the light is essential to the proper operation of the theater. Any damage to the cost of one of the bulbs includes a $10 per bulb charge through the university, he said, but even with the utmost precaution from the department's regular budget, this would eliminate the staging of almost half of the projection for the coming year.

This was "a very thin line" request, in order normal circumstances with a major enter, it would not be requested at all, Chavarria said.

The Senate authorized a $324.68 amount that would cover the cost of each instrument. It was approved in the BSL 131 figure, which will provide for usage of the tubing as well as other uses.

Introduction of new bills was the only order of the half hour Senate meeting. Communications Director Bill Rosen introduced a bill sponsored by ASUS President Charlie Herrmann through ASUS. The bill requires a student to purchase a new radio at the end of each fall semester. The bill was introduced with a note that a "broad-based, student-controlled, radio station" is needed.

A breakdown of the request showed $2,000 was the cost of a sound control booth. $1,900 for a monthly period and $2,000 for stereo generation. The bill would select a committee to select the radio. The Senate passed the request with the approval of the Committee.

Funds for the proposed plan would come from the new ASUS Operation and Special Projects fund.

The bill was referred to the senate's Finance Committee for further discussion. This bill dealing with administration of Senate funds was introduced by Senator Dorris Peary and referred to the Rules and Legislation Committee.

The first bill would authorize five parking stalls for ASUS students for the Student Union Building, the main lobby of the Thompson Hall, the main lobby of the rushes Community Building and the Administration Building. The Senate approved all requests and approved the areas included in the several ASF regulations that would take place.

Elimination of the present preferential parking in student parking funds in the Administration Building and removing it with a "one university use" provision was proposed in Peary's second bill. The measure would reduce from 15 to 13 designated stalls in the Administration Building. Several Senate must have completed prior to this election. This would require a vote in favor of the ASF Constitution and, if approved by test of the senate, would be submitted to the student body at the general election next spring.

Senior Bill Rosen introduced a bill which would establish a board of directors for the ASUS Radio Corporation. This board would have the power to operate all management and financial operation of the facility and make policy administrative and personal recommendations concerning it.

The board would consist of four student members and a faculty advisor. This area was also defeated for the Senate and Legislation Committee.

Senior Bill Rosen submitted a bill which would establish a board of directors for the ASUS Radio Corporation. This board would have the power to operate all management and financial operations of the facility and make policy administrative and personal recommendations concerning it.

The Senate approved the bill, raising $13,300 in university funds for the construction of a new ASUS radio facility to be located in the new Student Union Building.

Charges Filed Against Vandal Football Player

Police charges have been filed against Alan Lane Turner, a University of Idaho Football player currently on the squad. The Lewiston County Prosecutor's Office has indicated that the case is filed at the Lewiston Police Department.

The warrant was not served as of last night. Turner, from Kansas, is a member of the Idaho State police. Turner has been accused of committing a burglary on an Idaho police station earlier this year.
A Visit With the Alumni President

Carl Bird Came berrying

Student Recruitment — we shuffle up to the top students in the state high schools.

Public Relations — media relations especially in behalf to make sure he's not being held down by anything now.

Legislative Representation — we play a great deal of the decision-making here of some form or fashion. It means they haven't been too long ago.

Developments suitable — planning and working on various phases of the new campus project. We're going to be major campus this year in the University of Idaho.

Why should they do this? Because they've been held down by some. This is the only time they've been held down since the 1960s.

However, by being more experienced and by exercising more of the executive functions of the Alumni Association, more members.

In fact, it's a very long time coming. But it seems to be getting better every year, or so it seems to be.

I think that's one of the things of great interest to us.

Therefore, to make certain that we have in the 500 member plus at the University of Idaho.

This is one of the things of great interest to us.

The same sort of view of education, and the things that do...

Carl Bird

In 1930, the Idaho Alumni Association was formed in San Francisco, with Carl Bird as the first President. The Alumni Association of the University of Idaho has been a constant presence in the lives of alumni and friends of the University.

The Alumni Association has been a strong advocate for the University, working to strengthen its programs, raise funds, and improve the overall experience for students.

Carl Bird served as President of the Alumni Association for many years, and his leadership was instrumental in the growth and development of the organization.

Bird's passion for the University and its alumni continued throughout his lifetime, and his legacy lives on today through the continued work of the Alumni Association.

Carl Bird has passed on, but his contribution to the University and its alumni will never be forgotten.
Nixon's the One

For some time now I've been predicting that the right man may yet be the hero of Nixon's problem.

I've been thinking that for a moment or two since I began to realize an experience I had that will likely shape my thinking more than any other on my trip of concern.

The other day I was driving on 3rd Ave. N.E. in a jet black limousine and I got the impression that this thing crossed my mind that this man was a crook, possibly a potential kidnapper, definitely pursuing a dream of some honor. But there were no other seats empty at the rear nor was the rear seat empty in the front and all the seats in the car were occupied.

I must say my mind was usually occupied with the question of where next to sit, as I was a tall blond woman who prefers a comfortable chair and was trying to fill his seat in his New Hampshire class section of 1974. He was jumping to the 22nd gate.

I can't even say what the room after he left. I was feeling a neck and how a member of this group of people decided he ought to be at Lincoln Center.

Say, Agnew's own wife receives a room or a one from the housewife intuitively and is permitted to take the same vile and disgusting food. It seems the cleansed, enlightened Nixon 2nd GW is moving to "NEWS".

Extramural Volleyball Falls Short

The extramural volleyball team lost to WSU Tuesday evening. The game was played in the presence of the judges, but was unable to take it to 2 sets as the game ended in 3 sets. The volleyball team is now preparing to meet WSU again Oct. 30th and 31st. The home team now stands 0-0 and has a bye.

The extramural field hockey team, "A" squad won over WSU Tuesday evening, as WSU defeated Idaho 5-0. The coaches make the scores appear to be approximately 5-1.

There are still openings for the extramural and strong-effort class, which is open to juniors, seniors, and graduates. Those interested in receiving a catalog, they should return it to the extramural education office. The registration fee is $3.00. Those interested should notify the students. For further information contact George Cataldo, 892-8555.

Intermural volleyball is in full swing with dozens teams entering Monday-Thursdays. They are entitled to an afternoon and evening league. The program will run for four weeks and then a playoff between the two winners will close the season.

"Battle of the Lines" by Kim Congrass

Football

Coach Bohall will be trying to keep his Vandals' one-game winning string intact this weekend when they meet the ground-gripping Billets of WSU. The game is one of the rare contests between the two teams, 1975 will be Bohall's second year as Vandals' Coach.

With any luck at all, Vandals fans should be treated to a preview of "Battle of the Lines" as Minnesota State linebacker Bill Eisler and Wayne Bernert should be a good matchup against Idaho's Larry Smith and Mike Barchas in defense.

The Kollins-Bernert tandem (Bill will fill in) has a few yardage to offer against Idaho's "B" line. Eisler was Most Valuable Player in the conference last year and is probably the Vandals' big pro prospect this year.

Bernert, who recently made his offensive-defense switch, has adapted extremely well and has added the extra strength needed on the line to hold back huge gains attempts.

Undoubtedly, both teams will be testing the other's defense on the grounds before developing any kind of an aerial attack.

Four Down

For one reason or another, Ulitz has been tremendously fulfilling the bill this season at about five games.

While the Vandals have been held to 177 times and lost 17 just outside of that mark, their opponents have dropped 217 times and lost 34 just outside of that mark.

The knee-buckled departments in the Vandals have been well-oiled and balanced with opponents running straight over the head of the opponent, in the opponent's face. All that the Vandals seem to want to do is to connect with anyone they can. The Vandals run and receive moderately well, but few teams have been able to get the Vandals past them in a game.

The freight train kept coming, but the Vandals were not afraid to take full advantage of their opponents. Through 20 games in position to start over in the Western Intercollegiate, they ran the ball with 170 yards at a loss, but few teams have been able to connect with anyone they can. Women's Hockey Top Competitors

By Mary Schachnik

The sport of Women's Field Hockey is relatively new to the Pacific Northwest, but with a little exposure and continued qualified coaching, the University of Idaho teams have been rising to the top competition.

"Field hockey is relatively new in the Northwest," said Jim Onstot, physical education instructor and coach of the University of Idaho field hockey team. "There are not too many schools in our area that have field hockey teams, so it's a more recent sport for us to be getting into it."

Though most girls try out for the University of Idaho's field hockey team, there have been many who have improved their game over the years.

"Despite the lack of experience our players have, our general game is very good," Ousted said. "We've got some girls that have been involved in sports since they were little and we've got some girls that have never played a sport before."

Onsted has been coaching field hockey at U of I for more than five years. Originally from England, she played hockey there, but there is no naval history in the years before coming to Moscow.

"These girls compare very well to those I've coached before even if they've never had much experience," Onsted commented.

Onsted's girls currently playing are two seniors and two sophomores for the U of I. They include the starters, Laura Johnson, co-captain; Sue McClure, Brooke Mansfield, Jen Nelson, studio assistant professor; Shelly Way, studio assistant professor; and Linda Peterson are the remaining players.

I was pleased because this was the first time the girls had a game they had not had any interest in Field hockey because I'm the new type of people to practice the game.

The Idaho women's team practice Monday through Friday for one hour. The girls are not on a team, although the Idaho field hockey team is part of the Idaho University field hockey program. The team practices from 4-7 p.m. the field for one hour each day.

The Idaho women's field hockey team is one of the top teams in the Northwest, according to Onsted. The team has a record of 6-1-1 for the season and is currently ranked third in the nation.

Despite the lack of experience of our players, our general game is very good," Ousted noted. "That's what makes our team feel that with more experience at the high school level, our team will be very good. I am really pleased with the performance of our girls-their really work hard!"
"I think the concept of tenure itself is endangered by some of the abuses which have taken place . . ."

Dr. Glenn Terrell, President of Washington State University, has recently been at the center of controversy over the issue of tenure and academic freedom. This has led to a series of debates and discussions on the campus, with many faculty members expressing concerns about the implications of the current tenure system.

Tenure is a concept that has been fundamental to the academic community for over a century. It is a system of guaranteeing academic freedom and stability for faculty members, allowing them to engage in research and teaching without fear of retaliation from their institutions. However, there are also concerns that tenure can lead to complacency and a lack of accountability among faculty members, and that it may inhibit innovation and change within the academic community.

On the campus of Washington State University, there has been a recent debate over the issue of tenure, with some faculty members calling for changes to the system in order to ensure that it remains effective and relevant in the modern world. This has led to a series of discussions and debates, with many faculty members expressing concerns about the implications of the current tenure system.

For example, there have been concerns that tenure can lead to complacency and a lack of accountability among faculty members, and that it may inhibit innovation and change within the academic community. There have also been concerns that tenure can lead to a lack of diversity and a lack of representation among faculty members, as well as concerns about the financial implications of the current system.

In response to these concerns, there have been calls for changes to the tenure system, with some faculty members suggesting that it should be made more flexible and adaptable in order to ensure that it remains effective and relevant in the modern world.

These debates and discussions have led to a series of proposals and recommendations, with some faculty members suggesting that changes should be made to the tenure system in order to ensure that it remains effective and relevant in the modern world. These proposals and recommendations have been met with mixed reactions, with some faculty members expressing support for the changes, while others have been more critical.

Overall, the debate over tenure and academic freedom continues to be a complex and contentious issue, with many faculty members expressing concerns about the implications of the current system and calling for changes in order to ensure that it remains effective and relevant in the modern world.
