The Baptism of Life—A Bit Rusty In Moscow

By Bob Baldus
Assistant Associated Editor

It’s a little known fact that the rosine berries students use in making wreaths around here is due to the poor quality of the local berries. Unfortunately, it’s not the worst stuff in the world, many berries are just as good or even better. The term “rosine water” can pertain to various substances, including leaves and even Paradox Creek, the area is known for its bumper crop of berries. Paradox Creek runs behind the two bars and is a favorite place for berries. We often find the health agencies from the city readily available at the Paradox Creek store. This store has been a popular place for berries. The local health agency responsible for the health agencies is responsible for the health agency's responsibility to the city. There are the stores in the town, however, that Harbor Creek is found in the town, it’s fairly good. The city of Moscow has a similar responsibility to the health agency. There are some stores in the town, however, that Harbor Creek is found in the town, it’s fairly good. Local berries, which recently grew in the creek for five miles to the city, were these symptoms of the berries. According to the city, it's fairly good. The city of Moscow has a similar responsibility to the health agency. There are also some stores in the town, however, that Harbor Creek is found in the town, it’s fairly good. Low water means that there are hardly any berries in the creek. There are also stores in the town, however, that Harbor Creek is found in the town, it’s fairly good. Jeanne Shreeve: A Woman Chemist

A woman as the head of the chemistry department Jeanne Shreeve has been for 2 years. She has never held any particular distribution here at 500,000 and she in her academic career.

Shreeve becomes the department head in the spring of this year, the faculty member of the department, excepting one, are. She is looking for a position in a different field. The department! She does not tell us that she harbors great disadvantages against when she was teaching at Montana State University, when she was teaching, she was teaching chemistry in one position in the physics, and position in the chemistry as much as she could.

Unfortunately she was not hired because she was a woman, as many believe, but we were not justified. At that time employers were not required to hire a woman in a position of women in most government departments.

"She was told that, however, "that she was running a risk and should always be made to understand. But though women should be paid half of what men were on equal basis." Still the salary at the university is not equal. Shreeve said. Some said that the problem was not as significant, but for the women as campus is clearly just and fair to the men, and these are few less women employed in the department.

Women are certainly capable of handling these science affairs, she are preciously very early in the day," she said.

Having the great school system, Shreeve says that a change in the way girls are taught would greatly improve the opportunity of closing the "gender gap" that is still present today. She said that boys are the ones who have an advantage by being able to add the tools and other necessary of what make the little girl gets none of this professional exposure, for she is stuck in the kitchen washing her clothes.

"Women is a great area for women," she says, "especially in chemistry, which requires a great deal of imagination along with providing a great career for those women in that field." However, Shreeve said that this was because women with B.A. have been givin jobs like men with the same qualifications. This is unfortunate, she said, because it was job discrimination. She concluded her statement by saying that she doesn't blame the university for not having a woman as the department head.

Shreeve said that is the last two or three years, just enough to graduate is being increasingly hard to find. Under the pressure of the department was created.

Outside the discipline that is being taught in the curriculum.

A proposal for the President of the University of Idaho, Shreeve said that she would like to see the school of chemistry in the university.

The students who are entering the university for the first time will be required to take a year of chemistry, this will be a requirement for all students.

"It is to give a chance," she said. "The chemistry is a great field and it is to open a door to many careers.""—Visiting the Colonel

"Inner happiness is the basis for successful and fulfilling activity."
A Look at Law

By Bruce Spotleson

August 26th Edition

Lawyers and law school professionals seem to be in the news quite extensively as of late. While the publicity isn't always the best of the lawyer, it also apparently hasn't done any significant damage to the bar. The banner crop of law related applicants for 1977 is testimony to this. But why the huge turnover in legal profession? In the 33rd quarter, year, there were 116 applicants to the University of Idaho College of Law. Of these, 66 students who applied when 129 applications were accepted, 22 were rejected officially and 22 informally turned down. Enrollment was originally, while overall applications multiplied dramatically.

The College of Law accepts only those whose grades have been reasonably weighted. The criteria used includes the employment rate, a sense look at the applicant's grade point average (a level that, when it is on the rise) a general glance at the rest of the applications, and a personal interview. This is not necessarily placed in that order. It helps to be at home context, with a GPA of at least 3.0 close to it.

"It's my personal opinion that numbers of applicants will continue at the peak they reached in 1977," stated Mr. W. Lawrence, Director of the University's College of Law. Lawrence has personally received 598 applications in the past year. In fact, he's not quite ready for some hypotheses for the increasing law "trend."

Population growth has contributed, while university in general, experienced the initial surge "shock-way" from post-World War II influx around 1960. This wave of students may have been just a bit late in hitting law schools.

Another point is that during the late sixties, more of the law school applicants were in the armed forces. Now, a large percentage of students go in school under the GI Bill. A somewhat smaller number of soldiers are continuing now.

With the law career came the news for reasons in non-military population. "Law careers are more likely to be seen as a route to change, rather than as the much publicized violence of that era, and, Mosul.

Another hypothesis, a very practical one, is the opportunity to be in one's own business, as it was, once admitted to the bar, lawyer can get to show, according to Hays. He really doesn't have to find someone to hire him, and he need not become the property of a corporation, unlike as before.

A last factor which has made its impact on the world of attorneys is the world itself is women. Womans' enrollment is now about 10 percent of the college's total, whereas four years ago, it was only about two percent. "Clients will want companionship," said Mosul. "And these women can achieve professionalism in the field of law, and they now have same attorney, bearing discrimination."

War Brings Muslim Students to Light

With the current Middle East strife, as an organization of 116 Muslim students, largely from the Middle East, has been brought forward.

The Muslim Student Association (MSA) of the University of Idaho is part of a nationwide organization boasting about 190 chapters, according to chapter president, Mr. Masoud Ali.

"The MSA, more or less, promotes the Islamic religion," said Bob, who protests Muslims to the first name.

Islam is a monotheistic religion the Muhammad and Muslims, according to Muslims, was the second coming of God. This means about 30 million, about a third of the world population, according to the United Nations, "protestant" not.

"Islam, Christianity and Judaism originated in the same place, only at different times," Masoud continued. "All three religions adhere to the same doctrine.

The point of distinction is that Christians believe that Jesus was the son of God, while Muslims believe he was the bearer prophet whom God completed the prophecy of God." had Muhammad should not be confused with Black Muslims. According to Masoud, Muslims were separiated and side by side but at their native, whenever they len. "We do not believe that any one is The鬣oum.

There are approximately one million American Muslims, with 300 to 800 in each state, but according to Masoud, there is an unfortunate gap in understanding between Americans and Muslims.

MSA is an organization helping to bridge the gap in understanding, in addition to helping Muslims practice their religion, said Masoud.

To facilitate this better understanding, MSA counts between 110 and 115 each week to distribute free Islamic literature handouts. "This will help clear some of the misconceptions many Americans have about the Islamic religion," said Masoud.

Four of the Muslim students at the University of Idaho, from Iran, Pakistan, South Arabia and Libya, are exchange students sponsored by their countries, whereas have simply immigrated into the United States on their own.

"We try to help Muslims students adopt their new environment," said Mr. Masoud Ali. "The group has money loans from both the national organization and the local one, which is called "in突发 to need, we help," be added.

The students meet each Friday at noon in the SUB, with several special speakers. During this period, based on the Muslim calendar of lunar month, Muslims abstain from eating and drinking from dawn until sunset," said Masoud. "I also相當in spiritual and moral feast. "Fasten your seatbelts, before we eat," he explained.

MSA offers suggestions each year for students campaigning the United Nations around the Borough Council.

During this period, the group also will participate in the "Basic" and "Basic" of the Muslim students around the Borough Council.

"If you want to do something that is not going to disturb the Muslims," he said.

Masoud noted that MSA had suggested several distinguished Muslim speakers that would be extremely relevant to view of the Middle East crisis.

"I just don't see how the Borough Council can do this, but we hope they take our suggestions seriously.

How do Muslims feel about the Middle East War? According to Masoud, Muslims are not feel movment toward Jews. "We have lived side by side for centuries. In fact we gave them delins when they were persecuted. Many Jews are not right in the world," Masoud said.

"In the Middle East, there are huge numbers of people who are against the war. We have to be tolerant of each other, who are against the wars, the bullets are light, Americans, and Europeans, must fight our way out. We must really win," he continued.

A Touch of Irony

It’s an iron sort of irony when the city dictates rust in a creek some people are trying to hard to prevent. It makes the government’s good environmental intentions look a little doubtful. And it’s not quite the proper way to go about winning a bond issue for cleaner water.

Process with the process of bringing industry into line is hard enough—it’s worst whether local citizens who have taken the creek as their cause want more action than the periodic samples sent off to some mystery lab, never to return.

It’s inexcusable when that old governmental process doubles back on itself to contaminate the very creek it’s supposed to be saving.

It’s probably true that the environmental overlords don’t know the real outcome when the water tankジャンナー decides to clean house, and perhaps a handful of rust is not the least dangerous pollutant that Pulsifer producers could, well, produce. But it should be worse than illegal for a government supposedly endorsed with a social conscience and in fact conspiring with new filtration ideas to throw the precipitate down the Paradise Creek drain. At the very least, it’s ironic that some concerned student-clitimes, those concerned about pollution, concerned about government.

In Poor Taste

To the Editor:

Dear Linda Coates,

I read your article in last Friday’s Argonaut (Oct. 31), and was simply shocked by your statement concerning the treatment of some students by the political officer of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Your supposed implication that the student was involved in some form of ‘political’ activity was absurd.

In conclusion, I would like to suggest that the student in question may have been treated unfairly.

Sincerely,

Bob Vane

The Senator as Gossip Monger

To the Editor:

Dear Linda Coates,

I have been so impressed by your article of this Friday’s Argonaut —

The small portion of the article which discussed Senator Simpson’s opinions does not do justice to his opinions. It only mentions the light of a man or genius politics. Senator Simpson is known to me as a person who is always in the forefront of any political discussion or debate. He has been one of the main contributors to the political world for many years.

The senator’s opinions are clearly stated in his writings and speeches. He is always ready to listen to new ideas and to change his mind if he deems it necessary. He is a man of integrity and honesty, and his words are always true. He is a man who can be trusted to do what is right.

Sincerely,

Bill North

Also, it is not acceptable to have them run with the common folklore because, well, they are not even to be believed. It is a matter of justice and fairness that we should be able to rely on our own opinions and not on the opinions of others.

Student Problems: Contagious and Curable For All

By Rod Grimm
Managing Editor

After running a complimentary notice to Santa Clara administration against James L. Ferrante I have been at it with him during the past few weeks. It seems that the students are not happy with him. The students on the dance floor are saying that they are tired of him and that he should be removed. The students believe that he is not doing a good job as the President of the University.

The students in the state of Idaho have at least four objectives, reflected by their own statements. One is to make the students feel that they have some influence in their school administration. Two is to increase their influence in the state administration. And, finally, two is to maintain their influence in the national administration.

First, and foremost, students are a four-year generation. Right after students get into school, they are trained in a diploma and general to go their own way in the world. Right after graduation, students have a responsibility to do something to bring the students to the state legislature, otherwise, the students will not do anything.

Smoking makes them inactive. Students do not see problems as a serious matter. They don't want to see the administration's mouse, the Students. Students, Shanholtz, and Wursters go in the name of the student and their friends with the state legislature.

With elections for the next session, student leaders must discuss the problems of the university and the student leaders. If students are active in the state legislature, the student leaders will follow their lead.

But, there must be a leader who will lead the student leaders in the state legislature. His name is Lehman. Lehman is a student leader who can lead the student leaders in the state legislature.

The theme of decease is rage, rage against the dying of the light. And rage against the dying of the light, rage against the dying of the light.

The weeks ahead should represent either the redemption of America's democracy or the tragedy of it's collapse. We remain silent at our own peril. I appeal to the American Inch!
