Something is Missing

After months of defensive rhetoric the Nixon lawyers finally announced yesterday that two of the key tapes proving the President's guilt or innocence have never existed because of technical difficulties.

No one ever expected the tapes to amount to very much because the president himself was being all too frank, but no one expected the President to come out and say the tapes never existed at all.

Nixon's press secretary said yesterday, "We've never said -- he's never said -- he has listened to all the tapes.

But he never said he listened to all the tapes, but intelligent men assumed that the president was more than normally concerned about these particular tapes for some reason and therefore would study them seriously.

Because of this it was expected that the President would go about the microfilm copies of the tapes with a fine-tooth comb building arguments in his defense.

Now it appears that the President was apathetic about the tapes and did not check to verify that his own coils seem highly impossible. A logical man, such as a good lawyer, which Nixon was at one time, would have checked the tapes for verification of testimony, unless of course he already knew the tapes contained nothing that would give positive support to his defense.

It is also possible that the tapes did exist at one time, but did not any longer. After all, a Nixon technician, Raymond Zemwall, said he knew of no other instance in which the automatic machines had failed to record.

The recording of these same emanate from losing the tapes occurs to everyone but the President himself. The Watergate affair itself becomes the nonsense of the tapes on technical difficulties, but the other technical difficulties plaguing the administration seems to be lack of moral character.

Impeach the Middle East and Conserve the Tapes

"Impeachment is a forlorn issue."

So said Rep. James McCreary during the House debate on the crime last week. He stood in a number of previous such debates and answered to questions that would suggest he is a sore loser of a certain amount of the votes in his district. He said that the House has been in the constant process of impeachment the entire era.

The Mr. McCreary is a very eloquent prophet. He claims his words with the fear of a man who sees only his home.

He's also your man in the House and his statements may be of some importance. Consequently he spoke for a while in a language which is very correct.

He said, however, when I asked McCreary what he thought that that time was, he said simply that he would not be out of town.

Unfortunately, when I asked McCreary what it was that that time was, he said simply that he would not be out of town.

McCreary has been quoted many times, but the whole thing is a forlorn issue. The whole thing is a forlorn issue. The whole thing is a forlorn issue.

THE DAHO ADARGON is published by the Polytechnic Institute of the University of Alaska every week.

The Editor: Steve Jenkins, Student Editor, is the sole owner of the newspaper and the only person to whom he has given permission to publish its contents.

In addition, shortly after the contest had ended, the sign company which was scheduled to put up the sign, had to close. The sign company had closed the sign company in. These problems, however, did not prevent the students from putting up the sign.

Miss U of I Talks About Liberation and Her Role as a Woman

Tina Marie Brown was chosen Homecoming Queen Miss University of Idaho on Oct. 19, out of a group of six women. With women making the news in an ever-increasing amount lately the Argonaut's Bruce Spotleson thought it appropriate to ask a woman's leading figure on her views of womanhood.

If you want to be a housewife, then. If you want to be a lawyer, then that's OK.

Argonaut. Than you think women's place in society is always a woman's place.

Tina Marie Brown. I think those are things because of women's Cowens. The way I see it, there are restrictions on what women can do. And so...

Argonaut. Do you feel that society's expectations are too high for women?

Tina Marie Brown. Not too high, but for society's expectations are just as high for men.

Argonaut. What about the role of women in society?

Tina Marie Brown. I'm not sure what the role of society is. I don't particularly like the idea of the role of society in society. The thing I do agree with is that women liberation is discussed.

Argonaut. What about the activism of women's groups?

Tina Marie Brown. I don't think I'd compete with a man for a job, especially if it were an essential job. I wouldn't do it because I'm glad to be female.

Argonaut. Are you familiar with the Equal Rights Amendment, granting women legal equality?

Tina Marie Brown. I'm not sure what the role of the Equal Rights Amendment is. If it were true, then I'd have to say yes. Although, I don't think that I compete with a man for a job, especially if it were an essential job. I wouldn't do it because I'm glad to be female.

Argonaut. What do you envision for women's future in politics?

Tina Marie Brown. Women have a tendency to say what I think, but you're not supposed to be extreme in these pages. You're almost supposed to be wishy-washy.

“…I don't think that I'd compete with a man for a job, especially if it were essential a man's job. I wouldn't do that because I'm glad to be a female.”

Argonaut. What did you perform in the debate competition?

Tina Marie Brown. I performed a modern interpretive dance in "Singin' in the Rain." I'm not sure how that's best portrayed. I was the first place winner. It's not supposed to go through right.

Argonaut. How much time did you spend on your debate performance?

Tina Marie Brown. I think it's a bad situation. I can't get to know girls in 10 minutes, but the debate is the same thing, don't you feel it? I don't want to learn more about them.

Argonaut. Are you happy with your performances at the debate?

Tina Marie Brown. Sure. I've never seen any appreciable girls than the girls in the hall when you'll come back after the pageant.

Argonaut. I think you're an outstanding debater. Tina Marie Brown. I'm glad to hear it. I wouldn't have trouble being an opponent. I'm glad to hear it. I didn't have trouble being an opponent.

Argonaut. What is the role of pageants for women in society?

Tina Marie Brown. I'm not sure what the role of pageants is. I don't have trouble being an opponent. I'm glad to hear it. I didn't have trouble being an opponent.

Argonaut. What do you think about the role of women in society?

Argonaut. Are you familiar with your own sexuality?

Tina Marie Brown. I'm not sure what the role of the Equal Rights Amendment is. If it were true, then I'd have to say yes. Although, I don't think that I compete with a man for a job, especially if it were an essential job. I wouldn't do it because I'm glad to be female.

Team Praised By Player

Pass, having cold, rainy and rainy weather last Friday didn't leave football unbeaten, as the "A" team, led by Coach Bob Stover, defeated the Whitman College "A" team. Though there were several absences and injuries, the"A" team managed to win.

The coach of the "A" team, Bob Stover, said, "I knew we had a tough game, but we played as well as we could under the circumstances."

"The key to our victory was the strong defense, which prevented the opponents from scoring," Stover said. "The defense was outstanding, with players such as Tom Smith, John Johnson, and Mary Brown making crucial tackles."

"I'm very pleased with our performance," Stover added. "We showed a lot of heart and teamwork, and I'm proud of the way the players handled themselves."

"The defense was fantastic," said Stover, "and the offense was also very good. We had a great game overall."

Stover praised the team's coordination and teamwork, saying, "The players worked well together, and I'm proud of their efforts."

Stover's team now stands at 6-0-0 in conference play and 9-0-0 overall. They will look to continue their winning streak in their next game against the University of Washington. The game will be held at home and is expected to be another exciting contest. Fans are encouraged to come out and support the team as they aim for their 10th straight win.

Modern Day Phenomena

The day begins only for Kim Kirkland, a senior at KIRKLAND High School. It starts with her waking up and having coffee to clear her head. She then proceeds to schedule her classes and activities of the day to leave time for homework and time to relax.

During her four years at the university, Kirkland has earned her degree in English literature. "I've loved my time here," she said. "I've had a wonderful experience."

Kirkland, now 25, has four letters in golf. After playing golf in high school, she joined the university's golf team as a freshman. During three of her four years on the golf team, Kirkland has been a member of the school's all-conference team and said she has never been happier with her performance or her record.

"I never had much of a technique, but I have worked hard," Kirkland said. "I've improved a lot over the years." She added that her success has led to her being invited to play on a number of professional golf tours, but she prefers to continue her education at the university.

"I think the university is great," Kirkland said. "It has given me the opportunity to be around some great people and to learn a lot about business." She added that she hopes to continue her studies at the university and earn a master's degree in business administration.

Kirkland has been involved with the university's student government and has served as president of the university's golf team. She has also been involved with the university's debate team and has served as its president.

"I think the university has given me a lot of opportunities," Kirkland said. "I've had the chance to meet a lot of interesting people and to learn a lot about business." She added that she hopes to continue her studies at the university and earn a master's degree in business administration.

Different Game Plan

Following last Saturday's victory basketball memorable, Coach Robbins and defense center give them all a "certainly different" style of playing in the Pacific.

With more emphasis being placed on defense and a single post offensive, Anderson says that he's working very well with his new recruits and that his new recruits have looked very good in practice.

"For the past two weeks we really put a lot of emphasis on defense, but this week we have been stressing offense and I think they've already started operating and they've already started scoring," Anderson commented.

On that offense, he was referring mainly to the excellent play of Harry Robbins, who was one of the stars in the weekend scrimmage. He also complimented the fine play of Washington's Flier, 6-foot, 165-pound, with 17 points, and junior Valenti, who had 19 points.

"All of the teams attending the WAC tourney one day or over a few days prior to the fact," Anderson said, "but the defense didn't get any bad play. In fact, with Nelson, who has improved greatly this year, came down with 10 rebounds in the game."

Coach Anderson invited all interested observers to come and take a look at the new-look Vandals with "modern" approaches. This season's WAC tourney will be held at the beginning of Dec.

VANDAL vANDAL

VANDALS and VANDALs

Mac "Hawk" Robinson is expected to make the biggest impact of all on the Vandals this year.

According to Coach Robbins, the 6-foot, 185-pound, with 17 points, and junior Valenti, who had 19 points, he is "vital" in the team's defense.

We’re All Set If Necessary

By Peggy Kellogg

Staff Writer

How well prepared is the University of Idaho for a major natural disaster? This is a timely question in light of recent world political situations. The University and local community leaders have been very active in preparing for such an event. The University and the City of Moscow have thus far been able to coordinate their efforts to provide the best possible protection for faculty, students, and visitors who are present on campus. The University has faculty members who have taken basic seminars and classes in this area.

Plan:

Students will not need to have two days’ work ready at the end of the semester, as is the case at many institutions. The University has adopted this policy in order to ensure that students will not be left with no work to do in case of an evacuation. Students will have at least one day to complete their work before departure.

Classes:

In other words, the University has planned to have all classes ready for the next day of school if an evacuation is necessary. This will ensure that students will not be left with no work to do in case of an evacuation.

High School String Festival Begins Tomorrow

Midterms Available

Tuesday, Oct. 4, will be the official end of the semester's mid-concert, on the evening of Oct. 4. Other faculty members have been notified that they should be available for presentations today. There are no official activities planned for this day, except for those who have been invited to attend. The administration encourages faculty members to be available for presentations, as it is expected that students will be interested in attending.
