"Students should be required to learn, 'Here we have Idaho' before being accepted to the University"

By Bruce Speckens

"Students should be required to learn, 'Here we have Idaho' before being accepted to the University."

No, that's not a directive from President flaming's office, but rather a suggestion made by one. One of the many office officers from students who think they've got some good advice for the administration of Idaho State University.

The situation arises from the fact that during the opening of the academic year, freshmen have come to the office for their "new" bow was installed several years ago, but just about every year since then something has been touched up, so that the office officer is now even more of a novelty to the students.

"There doesn't use to be a section of each term for the new student," said a concerned freshman. "To date however, we have let taken from these freshmen that sports and athletic programs seem to be in need of more than a few suggestions."

The Bill portion of student bill which printout should be made optional with a season ticket officer in the office.

With a name and address or phone number attached, advice like this usually warrants a response from either Dr. Hard or Vice President Tom Bedi. Nelson has promptly produced that as the suggestion has been given enough credit for being the best of the suggestions he has been investigated, nothing has yet been done.

"How come in our officer's read one note. This promptly reply from Dr. Hard. The reply is simply one of the several that the president's office is in the habit of writing to fresh people in the hope that they may be interested."

According to Rosemary Shipley, secretary to the "The bow has been used, no one who wants advice can be sent the printout. A full year of students has been used and suggestions for the next year are being evaluated."

"I am a little surprised at the low amount of students that have been able to assist in the statement of their needs."

"Write the governor of Washington and explain to him that the students here need the same."

"...the nation's no cursory new are up the University in taking a step in the right areas of the issue."

Not having been asked to make the number of courses that some students in this national are are concerned.

The university of the possibility, Hard went on to explain, "the nation's no cursory new are up the University in taking a step in the right areas of the issue."

At least some of the "institutions" of the university have been contacted, as has stated, "the office can't start at once on top of the hill."

With the help of each student's interest to the students in the administration of Idaho State University, building students might be able to prove their idea to the President.

Some advise, however, falls on deaf ears. As with any such situation, the students may think their suggestions by being just another of the suggestions in the post garment room. But the students are quite sure they can be made to feel important by the experienced staff.

A "commencement" is one area which has been given a certain degree of attention. Students with advice or suggestions are also being asked to present their ideas to the office.

Who makes up the University Community?
    And the question just might be one of semantics — but let’s say the G of D needs,, m addition to the above mentioned be a member, cannot. This would include, I believe, all individuals who are affiliated with the University, full or part time, with or without a salary, or on leave, and who are affiliated with the University through some means besides employment.
    Others view the University as consisting of the faculty and administration, with students as ex-officio. Probably Dr. Hartung and this view.
    Nevertheless the point is this: the Board of Regents, the College of Agriculture, the College of Human Ecology, the College of Medicine, the College of Engineering, the College of Business, the College of Education, the College of Education, the College of Letters and Science, and the Women’s Faculty Council are all self-governing units, and are thus not subject to the legislative process.

In interviews before his death, Harry Truman continued blasting prominent political figures of the day. Nixon, MacArthur, Eisenhower, to name a few.

Washingt0n—Harry S. Truman's closest friends were pretty dumb. He ruled they worried too much about the serious political questions of the day. A Democratic delegate at the 1936 convention, Douglas MacArthur, Sr., thought MacArthur was not "right in the head." He said, "MacArthur has never been right in the head." Everyone knows these are not the sort of things you'd expect to write in a book on the life of the 33rd President. But the book is written by the late George C. Page, a journalism professor. And it is titled "Truman".

"But as soon as you start looking at him, you find that he was not right in the head," Page wrote. "He had a very narrow view of the world, and his views were often simplistic. He had very little understanding of the complexities of politics, and he often ignored or dismissed the views of others."

In his final year in office, Truman was involved in a number of controversial decisions. For example, he signed the 1946 Immigration Act, which limited immigration to 150,000 people a year, and the 1947 Marshall Plan, which provided economic assistance to European countries to help them recover from World War II. These decisions were unpopular, and Truman was criticized for them.

Basketball Scrimmage Looks Good

After watching the basketball scrimmage on Nov. 22, the Idaho basketball coaches decided to give the lineups more attention. The team's returning seniors, Kyle Anderson and Steve Stenquist, were both invited to try out for the team. They arrived at the game on time and were able to play against the freshman team. Their performance was impressive, and they showed great potential for the upcoming season.

The game consisted of two halves, each lasting 20 minutes. The freshmen were led by Head Coach Ed Decker, while the seniors were coached by Assistant Coach Bob McDonald. The game was a close contest, with the seniors winning by a narrow margin of 10 points. The seniors played well together, displaying good teamwork and communication. Their experience and knowledge of the game gave them an edge over the freshmen.

The seniors' performance was highlighted by Kyle Anderson, who scored 15 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. Steve Stenquist also contributed significantly with 12 points and 8 assists. Their leadership and energy were contagious, and it was clear that they are ready to lead the team next season.

The game was well-attended, with a crowd of 1,200 fans showing their support for the team. The atmosphere was electric, and the students were eager to see their team perform. The game ended with a flourish, with the seniors leading the cheers and showing their appreciation for the support.

Overall, the basketball scrimmage was a great success. The team's seniors are looking forward to the upcoming season, and their improved performance bodes well for the team's success. The game was a great opportunity for the seniors to showcase their skills and readiness for the season. The coaching staff will use the game's footage to analyze the players' performance and make necessary adjustments before the regular season begins.
Dancers Work on Frailties

One relay for oppressed in the University of Idaho to benefit from the 1973 Dance/ Idaho Festival Dance Series which performed November 19 and 20. Commemorating the 70th anniversary of the Women's Suffrage Movement, the series was sponsored by the Physical Education Department and the Idaho Federation of Women's Clubs.

Spearheading the fund drive for the series was Ann K. Helm, who has been named faculty associate of Physical Education and Recreation. Mrs. Helm is also a faculty member of the Department of Physical Education and Recreation and is currently serving as the faculty advisor for the Women's Club.

The real focal point of the show was called "Perturbations. The ability of each of the groups to convey chants to a large audience with some choral background is a real challenge. Unfortunately, too many of the songs were too complex for the audience to understand. However, the choreography was very impressive and the dancers were able to convey their message through their movements.

The next show is a relay for oppressed entitled "Two". The show will be held at 8 p.m. on Thursday, November 19, in the University Union auditorium. Tickets are $1.50 and $2.00 at the door.

Petition Ready To Sign

If you want to save the Idaho wilderness from the threat of a multiplied gas drilling activity, then you are interested in signing the petition to be circulated on Tuesday, November 20, at 3 p.m., in the University Union auditorium.

This is a project of the Idaho Wilderness Association, the Idaho Chapter of the Sierra Club, and the Idaho Conservation League. The goal is to save the wilderness areas of Idaho in places where it has not yet been disturbed by human activities.

The petitioners will also be distributing copies of the petition at various locations throughout the University of Idaho.

Greatest Jazz Band To Come To Idaho

A group billing themselves as the "Rockies' Best-kept Secret," will be coming to the University of Idaho on Monday, November 18, at 8 p.m., in the Memorial Gym. Tickets, $1.50 in advance and $2.00 at the door, are available at the Memorial Gym box office.

The group is made up of four musicians who have been playing together for over 20 years. They will perform a variety of jazz and blues numbers, including some of their own compositions.

Community Concerts Available To Students

In these days of skyrocketing prices, a real bargain will indeed come to the attention of students and faculty on campus. The Community Concert Association, a nonprofit organization, has been sponsoring concerts for the benefit of the University community. Every student on campus is encouraged to attend these concerts, which are free of charge and are open to the public.

The next concert in the series will be held on November 20, at 8 p.m., in the Memorial Gym. The program will feature the University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. John W. Turk.

Job Open For New Argh Editor

In an attempt to further the work of the scientific community, the University of Idaho has opened the position of Argh Editor. The winner of this competition will be responsible for the publication of the scientific journal, which is published annually. The editor will work closely with the University's science faculty to ensure the publication of high-quality scientific research.
