By Bruce Spilfunk

FROM the University of Idaho, comes a spirited defense of a dormitory, the Black students, and their charges against a recently disclosed hiring of a new white administrator, who was charged with perpetuating segregation and discrimination in the institution. The charges were made by several black students, who claim that the new administrator, who is also a member of the faculty, is responsible for the segregation of the students, as well as for the continued existence of segregation in the curriculum, faculty, administration, and other areas. The students also charge that the new administrator is responsible for the discrimination against black students, as well as for the discrimination against other minority groups.

Parents Weekend will oficially open the season of the McNichols show and the new Performing Arts Center opening weekend. The two buildings will be open to the general public, and the McNichols will be performing at 8 p.m. in the SUB Ballroom Saturday evening. When They Say They'll Let Us Know

After searching for minority spokesmen last week with no success, Idaho Rep. Fred Hannaford, D-Weiser, said Monday that "if they want us on something, they'll let us know.

On Wednesday, the Blitaro the entire campus know. They did try to let us know, by distributing a list of their complaints on the main sidewalk near the library and then taking over the student radio station and educational television to grab publicity, they announced their dissatisfaction with "strong acts of racism" at the University of Idaho.

The U of I Blacks undoubtedly have a worthwhile message but their delivery is unorthodox: their grim-faceted tactics are right out of the sixties. Using force in the interest of the public nature of radio and television, they would be allowed to broadcast anyway. The denunciations put down on paper are not as expressive of grievances but only choppied-up threats. The more usual "Commentator" of the top of the page contains no message from University of Idaho Black students, just an expression of this kind of dormant and out of reach.

The BSU simply went too far, too fast. There is no use in non-violence in taking a message to the campus when a mere request could gain access. It is an illegal act that should be considered only as one more protest of student demands that have been ignored. But, unfortunately, the Black students blew it all in one morning. There was no move to contribute to student-government statement or even when the Argonaut attempted to feature the message, the students were unwilling to come forward and discuss issues with the student media.

They did get a lot more listener if they wouldn't go slower. So in all, this act of extreme demands from their rights is not going to be a success in terms of representation, tastier food, and easier living arrangements. It is another example of the lack of these benefits could be considered "BOLD ACTS OF GENOCIDE."
A Lag Between Recognition and Solution

Dobler: The Best Students Ever

If there is any correlation between the work demanded on students and the ratings they give, it is that harder you work, the higher you rate. This is reflected in the fact that the best students always rate a teacher as "good" if they have had a hard year. Perhaps there is some relationship between the grading curve and the ratings the students give. However, the majority of college students are also very busy juggling between work and other activities such as extracurricular activities, family, and social life. Thus, it is possible that the students who have been rated as "good" are those who have been most involved in their studies. This may explain why they have received higher ratings, even if the quality of the instruction was not necessarily higher. The students who have received lower ratings may have been less involved in their studies or have had more free time to devote to other activities, which may have affected their ability to rate the instructor accurately. Overall, it is difficult to draw firm conclusions from the data presented in the article, and further research is needed to fully understand the relationship between student ratings and instructor performance. However, it seems clear that the quality of the instruction plays a significant role in determining student ratings.
If Reser Has His Way... Snyder Will Be Next to Go

By Roy Bendaue

Dick Snyder could be in for a little trouble. A 58-year-old man who has never had a car, Snyder, the pro in charge of the ASU golf courses for 32 years, has been cited for running a check on ex-asistant Bill Reser for payroll management of the course, resulting in a $20,000 loss for the fiscal year 1972-73.

Reser's main objection to Snyder is that the money is being taken for the job he is performing, plus the method in which he is paid. "There don't seem to be any rules," says Reser. "I simply pay for it in the way that I can make the golf course pay for it at the same time.

Reser is part of the newly created Department of Golf Course Management, which supervises any operation undertaken by the course. Chairman Rick Smith reported in an interview that Snyder is in a temporary position to Reser, which he said was decided by the committee voted to discontinue. "We felt the committee recently recommended approval of Dick Snyder's new contract, which calls for a change in his salary due to inflationary increases," said Smith. "Bill Reser was the only reporting manager to have been approved for his contract which must be renewed each year by the ASU Board. Other committee members who voted for approval include George Gossen, Bill Reiss, Jack Chestnut, and Mike Krieg.

Snyder hoped to see the job and the manager of the golf course since 1968, when he installed it, and was retained from nine to eighteen holes. This is a very unusual provision, where normally most do not manage golf courses, but continue their activities by operating the pro shop at the course. Snyder's new arrangement is a steady goal that seems keeping the course in proper playing condition, usually the responsibility of a different person.

Snyder was given over-all control of the two-year plan and was told that the ASU would be in charge of all business connections and the administration of the course.

Snyder also hoped to see his golf self-support one year earlier and save the ASU about $7,500. Last year, even though we fell $1,000 in the loss, "I still paid all of the costs of the course and kept the money for the ASU."

Presidential Primary Favorited

The people have never been wrong" stated Bill Cronkright Tuesday night at the Palladium Forum after securing the presidential nomination. The attitude characteristic of the attitude of the late W. A. Crapo, owner of the Coeur d'Alene Hilltop, who predicted the behavior of Idahoans and the course of events.

Harry Sewell, one-time Idahoan, Independent candidate for governor outlined the meeting with "An Independent View of the President's Career." The Independent candidate's view of the presidential primary could make the early process more interesting to the people in the secret meeting that is the national convention.

"There is a real return of the party system," he said, "and an upswing toward a substantial degree of political activity and that political action is what we have been talking about." A real return of the party system, or the return of the party system, or a return of the party system is a return to the old days when we had a substantial degree of political activity and that political activity is what we have been talking about."
