Argonautinsiders know tonight, literally all at dawn in front of their television sets for an evening of entertainment that they will never forget.

The Board of Regents policy manual for institutions of higher learning states: "The use of institutional facilities, equipment, materials, employees, or students for any purpose, not supplanting the uses for which such facilities were made available, shall be held only by-and-with the written permission of the university's use of such equipment by any member of the university faculty.

But the Argonaut did not answer any questions about the evidence that this practice was widespread or if it was discovered. for research, as the board has stated it was found to be widespread in 1965. The board had been held by KUID, but was [omitted].

During the past year, KUID has received almost one half of a million dollars worth of new equipment, thanks to a grant from the federal government, partially matched by the state of Idaho.

The Argonaut investigation revealed that KUID's major director is Don Adair, Mike Klein, Joel Bell and Ron Segota—served as the chief executive of KUID's operations for a total of five years. Meanwhile, KUID's coordinator, a full-time student, said she had not been aware of KUID's existence.

The University of Idaho Handbook of Faculty and Professional Affairs states that "the summer months are offered for the holding of seminars and meetings and for the advancement of scholarship and learning." Evidence, however, points to the fact that such seminars were not held or even existed.

A commercial advertising statement is found in another section of faculty, which states: "Admissions of facilities for non-academic purposes, must be approved by the president of the university." This could possibly be interpreted to mean the use of radio-station facilities but only if the administration was given evidence. Evidence, however, points to the fact that such seminars were not held or even existed.

And a director of KUID, who was interviewed by the Idaho Argonaut said he was aware of the seminars and meetings and that KUID was one of the three organizations involved.

One seminar would project the use of radio-station facilities or facilities for profit-making businesses or organizations.

Two Separate Incidents

The Argonaut investigation uncovered two separate incidents of unauthorized use of KUID personnel. One involved a NUMS member from the same classroom and a junior who had been held by KUID, but was [omitted].

According to the handbook of policy and procedure, consulting services involve use of equipment and facilities and requires a formal agreement between the consultant and the university. When asked if this is the case, KUID's coordinator, Dick Haggart, said he had not been aware of KUID's existence.

Furthermore, the commercial was done for the service of a junior who had been held by KUID, but was [omitted].

Argonaut Feature Writer

Long lines, an unexpected sell-out and a highlight of the weekend's events and a performance at the opening of the Marybank Opera and Ballet, "Tower of Wings," the Saturday night presentation included a select group of the Golden and Silver Age of Viennese operetta.

The program, a collection of\nperformances from the best of the operettas, was presented with a 44-piece orchestra under the direction of Henry L. Hahn. The cast included such stars as the lead singer, Harriett A. Smith, and the leading man, Edward D. Fairbanks.

The program was preceded by the screening of a film about the history of Viennese operetta, followed by a brief talk by the director, Henry L. Hahn. The audience was then led into the main performance area, where they were greeted by a large crowd of people who were eager to see the show.

The program featured a variety of operettas, including "The Merry Widow," "The Czar's Bride," and "Die Fledermaus." The performers were dressed in period costumes and the music was arranged by the orchestra under the direction of Henry L. Hahn.

The audience was enthusiastic, with many cheering and shouting for more. The performers were equally pleased, with several taking their curtain call with a bow and a smile.

The program ended with a grand finale, involving all the performers and the audience, and then everyone was invited to attend a reception in the ballroom of the Marybank Opera and Ballet.

Idaho Marijuana Petition—Now More than a Mosquito on the Voter's Ballot

To the Editor:

As many of you are aware, the Idaho legislature has decided to initiate the process of decriminalizing marijuana, a subject that has been a contentious issue for years. The petition was filed by a group of concerned citizens who believe that marijuana should be treated as a less harmful substance and decriminalized. The petition aims to gather signatures from interested individuals to validate the petition and bring it to the attention of the Idaho legislature. The petition needs to gather a certain number of signatures to be successful, and it is an ongoing process that requires the support of the community.

The petition is a step forward in the fight for marijuana reform, but it faces challenges. The opposing forces, including the law enforcement community and conservative groups, are likely to challenge the petition and the efforts of those supporting it. The battle is not new, but it is a continuing struggle for justice and reform. It's crucial for those interested in the cause to stay informed and engaged in the process, supporting the petition and advocating for its success.

Correction, "Negro" is Short for Negro

To the Editor:

Regarding the comment by Pete Kasprzyk regarding "Negro" being a shortened form of "Negro" is a form of racism and should be avoided, I must respectfully disagree. The term "Negro" was used in the past to describe people of African descent, regardless of skin color or cultural background. It was not a derogatory term in the same sense that it is today. The term "Negro" was a neutral term that did not carry the same connotations of racial inferiority that it does today. It is important to acknowledge the historical context of the term "Negro" and recognize its evolution over time. The term "Negro" has been replaced by "Black" in modern usage, but understanding its historical use is crucial to fully comprehend its significance.

Hello Yellow Brick Road
Idaho Looks Good - Only On Paper

John Orwicke

In a widely distributed article called "Yellow Brick Road," Prof. Jerry Ilg, investigating information on an extraordinary rise in the cost of education, reports on the dramatic increase in the costs of attaining a college education.

Itf was found that the costs of attending college have risen dramatically, with the result that many students are finding it difficult to afford the necessary tuition and fees. The article notes that many students have been forced to take out loans or work additional jobs in order to cover the costs of education.

The article highlights the fact that the cost of college education has increased significantly over the past several years. This increase has been driven by a variety of factors, including rising tuition costs, increased administrative costs, and higher student loan interest rates.

The article also notes that the cost of education is not just a problem for low-income students. Even middle-income students are finding it difficult to afford the costs of college education.

The cost of education is not just a problem for students. The article notes that many college administrators have also been forced to raise tuition costs in order to cover the increased costs of education.

The article challenges the notion that college education is a worthwhile investment. It notes that the cost of education is not the only consideration when deciding whether or not to go to college. Other factors, such as the quality of education and the opportunities for career advancement, must also be considered.

The article calls for a reevaluation of the cost of college education and for the development of more affordable and accessible educational opportunities.

When questioned whether a bidding procedure would have reduced the number of false allegations (justification given for the hiring of his son), Hargart conceded, "That would be true.

But Hargart said that the work for the newspaper was not as satisfying as his teaching position.

"I was doing something I was interested in doing and I did it well," he said.

Hargart, who is also a financial advisor for a couple of industries, is now back in the classroom.

He said he had been approached by several companies with lucrative offers, but he turned them down.

"I was looking for something that would be a little more challenging," he said.

Meanwhile, Hargart and his Spokane bank have established a deferral program to aid students in need of financial assistance.

"The program is designed to help students who are facing financial difficulties," he said.

But he added that the program was not a way to avoid paying the student loan bills.

He said he was helping students to understand the importance of financial planning.

Hargart said the program was open to all students, regardless of financial status.

By Don Shellen

The Idaho Vandals overcame wind, rain and tournament officials to win the West Regionals Saturday and place third in the 1974 Boise State Classic basketball tournament.

The roof fell in for the Vandals during what could have been described as a continuing invig.

An overwhelming crowd gathered in the Administration Building yesterday morning to view the continuing dramatics of the Rees tenure hearing. The community is expected to begin deliberations on Rees' fate today at 10 a.m. after the Reagan administration gave its verdict on the case.

The review of the broad-based Rees affair has revealed a world at war under penalty of death. Determined to prove something from both sides were given the task of proving their points. The faculty, elected by the student body, has declared that Rees must be removed from his post as a professor of journalism.

KUOI Responsible for Stereo Room Removed Close

Stereo lounge patrons are not happy with the recent removal of the stereo lounge. The lounge was removed after the University of Idaho Student Senate voted to remove the lounge to make space for additional seating. Many students are upset with the decision, and they are calling for its reinstatement.

Stereo room patrons feel that the removal of the lounge is an act of vandalism. Many students have expressed their opposition to the removal of the lounge. They have even held protests and written letters to the student government. The university has responded that the removal was necessary to make space for additional seating.

Interviews for program director and scholarship director are still open, and all students are encouraged to contact the Arts Department at 822-7001 for more information. At tonight's senate meeting there will be a vote on resolution on the issue that supports the administration's proposal to remove the lounge. The Senate will not be able to increase all students and should be aware that the lounge will not be available for use.

Bill Riden, an attorney and former member of the Idaho legislature, was to be the FOB Lounge Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m. to answer anyone's questions.
