Computer card cost comes high

by Bill Lewis of the Argonaut Staff

A proposal that students be charged for computer cards used at the University computer center has sparked charges of misplaced priorities within the University from a member of the ASUI Senate and a sharp defense of the proposal from the center director.

If a proposal before the student faculty advisory committee on computer services is approved, students will be charged $1.72 for every one thousand cards they use at the center, according to Bill Accola, center director.

The proposal to charge for the cards comes at a time when the center is adding six new positions primarily to aid in administrative work. The new positions are evidence according to ASUI Senator Kim Smith of misplaced priorities within the University.

"Finding the money to finance the new positions while not finding the money to continue providing the cards for students in another form evidence of students interests being considered last," Smith said at a meeting with Accola yesterday.

Smith who outlined his objections earlier in the summer in the Lewiston Morning Tribune is unjustified in drawing a parallel between the plans to charge students for the cards and the new positions, Accola said.

The new positions do not come from state appropriated funds but from money bought into department through fees charged in the University and to private firms for use of department computers Accola said.

Increased costs were cited as the main reason for having to charge for the cards. Accola said it costs about $8,000 for the computer cards purchased by the center. About forty percent of the cards used at the center are used for academic and research purposes as opposed to administrative purposes, according to Accola.

If the plan to charge for the cards is approved the cards could be purchased at various outlets around campus and at vending machines in the computer center.

The cards will be sold at current market prices and the center does not intend to make a profit from the cards, Accola said.

Both students and faculty members will be charged for the use of the cards, Accola said, although he did concede that various departments might pick up the tab for cards and might not pay for cards purchased by students.

"Teachers aren't expected to give students paper for notes or reports that are required in class and we shouldn't be expected to provide materials like the computer cards." Accola said.

"Nobody has ever talked to us on the back while we provided the cards for free," Accola added.

Smith who said he would take the issue to the University Faculty Council if the proposal to charge for the cards is approved said students aren't expected to pay extra fees for classrooms or chalkboards.

The first in writing proposal to charge for the cards came on May 26 of this year which mentioned charges by Smith that the center was trying to push the new policy through while students were away from campus.

Accola said the proposal was put at that time because of University budgeting procedures, and not as a devious way to approve the plan. He added that a decision was made over the summer to put off final approval of the plan.

Over half of the University's in the United States which the center could find information about charge for the use of cards in their computer center he said.

Smith said in his letter to the Tribune this summer that there was no charge for the use of cards at Boise State University. BSU is presently considering charging for use of the cards, however Accola said.

A statement in Smith's letter that the cards were distributed for free at Idaho State University is incorrect, Accola pointed out.

ISU has charged for the use of the cards for years, he said.
Senate to hear budget requests

by Bill Lewis of the Argonaut Staff

Controversial requests for ASUI money will be considered by the ASUI Senate at their meeting tonight.

Among the most controversial is a measure proposing a $4000 allocation to the Gem of the Mountains Yearbook to make the publication "more self sufficient."

According to Senator Bill Butts, the measure may not be acted on by the senate which is waiting for budget requests from other ASUI Departments. Although the ASUI has $35,000 in its general reserve, the Gem appropriation would face tough going if the senate acted before other requests are submitted, Butts said.

ASUI President David Warnick said he wouldn't comment on whether the appropriation was needed, adding that he has given ASUI department heads authority to make any supplemental budget requests to the senate and he is depending on the senate to "make a good decision."

Senator Mike Hebling said the Gem staff would have to demonstrate that the appropriation would be justified before it would be approved. Hebling was confident however, that the appropriation could be justified.

A $2000 allocation for ASUI Issues and Forums will also be considered tonight. The appropriation would replace money withdrawn from Issues and Forums by the University administration last semester.

Although the appropriation is considered large, according to Butts, it may be approved because Issues and Forums budgets were set last semester assuming the money would be provided by the University. The University money was withdrawn after the administration took over support of the Drama department that was previously provided by the ASUI.

A bill that would allocate money to the University SEND program, a scholarship drive being carried on by the University Development Office and the Alumni Association, will be tabled and held by the senate, Warnick said.

The future of the SEND drive is presently in doubt, with the failure of the University to provide money for the program, and the resignation of University Development Director Frank McCreary. Warnick said the money may be appropriated later if the University decides to provide money to fund the drive, although the University has given no indication that such a commitment will be forthcoming.

Stadium board revises existing container policy

by Randy Stapillus of the Argonaut Staff

The stadium board pushed just a little further toward establishing an alcohol policy that all factions of the University can agree upon last night.

Senator John Hecht submitted a new resolution that passes stating which beverage containers can be allowed in the stadium, as well as which ones cannot. Hecht listed among those items allowed inside: "vacuum thermos bottles, plastic bars or bottles of leather beverage containers and similar re-usable containers."

At the meeting, Hecht clarified his resolution. "There is the rule of conditional entry," he said, adding that visitors to the dome might have to carry large containers to satisfy gate attendants. Such containers might include "ice chests, plastic garbage cans and gallon containers."

Hecht listed among those items not allowed inside: "supermarket size containers; cans, plastic bottles, large open plastic cups, and any other beverage containers that would be a fire hazard."

Hecht also ruled out items people know will be enforced: "snack boxes, plastic bags of food, "hot dog" containers, and aluminum cans.

Hot joke heats owner

Three University of Idaho students became involved in a hot situation Friday night when a practical joke they were playing on a fellow student backfired. The three students decided to turn Lynn Streator's '62 Chevrolet pickup into a honeymoon vehicle while it was parked near theault Upham dormitory.

Wrapping the truck with toilet paper and placing a "just married" sign on it at about 9 p.m., they returned an hour later to find that the paper had been removed. Assuming that Streator had removed the paper, they thought nothing of it.

When an inspection was made of the truck during the daylight hours, it was found that the paper had been burned off, causing damage to the truck. The three ranksters denied having set the paper on fire when the police arrived. There was no report on the extent of the damage to Streator's truck.

Beer breaks blue bottle

Being a member of the Society of PARTS (Friends of the Arts), the Storylady is always eager to introduce new talent. This fresh new writer, who probably holds America’s literary future in his hands, was discovered in the Moscow Post Office. Here is a selection from his first, now, which is sure to be a best seller.

It’sentertainment of Things Better Forgotten” by Parcel Post

“The Universe in a Glass of Beer”

Many years had elapsed during which nothing of Moscow had any existence for me, when one day in winter, I stopped in a bar for a beer. Mechanically, weary after a dull day, with the prospect of a depressing morrow, I raised the glass to my lips. I felt my sleeves sticking to my forearm, wet from the slop on the bar top. The first notes of “I’ve got a tiger by the tail!” burst out from the juke box. No sooner had the liquid touched my palate than a shudder ran through my whole body. I stopped, intet on the change that had taken place. Something strange had invaded by senses, but what? Whence did it come? How could I define it?

Undoubtedly what was thus palpable at the depths of my mind was the visual memory, being linked to the taste of the beer. The instant I had seen the glass of beer, I had tried to follow them into my conscious mind. And suddenly it returned. It was the beer and music of which I had partaken on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday nights at Mort’s Club in Moscow, many years ago. Once I had recognized the sensation, immediately the interior of Mort’s appeared, the arrogant bartenders, the wet bar top, the pushing, shoving crowd of pseudo-cowboys, the smoke-filled air, and “I’ve got a tiger by the tail!” playing on the juke box... and with Mort’s, there appeared in my mind the whole town of Moscow, the University, the Ad lawn, the pounding wind, the pounding rain, the U.C.C., Har- tung’s blue eyes, the driving wind, driving rain, train whistles, Greek row with toilet paper in the trees, the hurling wind-hurtling rain... in that moment all the Teen Burgers in the A-W, the lines in front of the Kenworthy, the man in the white suit who won’t let you park at Safeway, the happy hour at the Alley... the whole of Moscow sprang into being from my glass of beer.

Kibbie Dome grand opening

Students and other Moscow area residents will be able to see the insides of the Kibbie Dome for the first time this Thursday.

Dome Manager Dennis Hedges said the “Open House” will take place between 5-8 p.m. Thursday. “This should be a good opportunity for the students to see it ahead of time - a sort of sneak preview.”

All four entrances to the dome are expected to be open, and visitors can walk around all the open areas. “There will be no flow patterns” according to one University official.

Hedges also said there will be a verbal tour over the public address system, however. There is still construction inside the dome. “Hopefully, we’ll have it cleaned up by Thurdsay,” he said. “It will be hard, but we’re working hard to meet that deadline.

The first major event inside the dome is the football game between the Vandals and Idaho State University, a week after the VandalAlbum will be followed the next evening by a concert. "Everything’s really going to hit the fan in the past few weeks," said Hedges.

Wanted: student opinion

A needs priority list is being set up by the University Recreation Committee, and the committee wants student opinion on what forms of recreation should be emphasized at the university.

A release from the committee said they “do not define primary recreation as the passive consumption of intercollegiate athletics, nor as active participating sports.” They advise students to “make your own definition of recreation as a guideline.”

Mining safety course

What do you do when you’re trapped in a mine with a broken leg?

That’s a situation few people know how to deal with, and that’s why the University of Idaho mining, engineering and metallurgy departments offer a mining safety short course at the beginning of each semester.

The first three weeks of training show how to use oxygen apparatus, gas masks, what to do in case of a fire, how to prevent accidents and how to give first aid, says Samuel Chan, associate professor of mining engineering.

Instructors include people from the U.S. Bureau of Mines, Mine Enforcement and Safety Administration and the Central Mine Rescue Agency in Wallace, a state agency. These groups are giving static electricity demonstrations at Moscow schools this week, Chan said.

The class is open to students of any major and the man requirements - quiz at the end of the class. Chan said. The class gives one college credit.

AAUW book sale slated

Bookworms will help earn money for student fellowships as they buy books at a sale Oct. 3 and Oct. 4 at the Moscow Hotel.

Sponsored by the American Association of University Women, the sale will feature books and records, says Bonnie Johnson, a representative of the group.

The sale will be from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 3 and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Oct. 4, according to a news release from the AAUW.

Books and records are still needed, Ms. Johnson said. They may be deposited in a drop box at the Washington Water-Power Company. Especially preferred are National Geographics.

Reader’s Digest condensed books and children’s books, she said.

Germans meet

The German Conversation Hour, the “Kafeeklatsch,” meets Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Campus Christian Center. This is the first of a series of weekly meetings held there every week during the school year.

At each meeting, starting about 4:15, a short German film will be shown that deals with aspects of German culture, politics, history and current affairs. The meetings are informal and offer conversation and listening to the native Germans speak. Interested persons are invited.

You won’t find a better automatic return turntable at this price

A turntable that’s reasonable, priced doesn’t necessarily mean a compromise in quality. The PL-12D-II has a multitude of quality features which include: 4-pole, belt-driven synchronous motor; automatic return and shut-off; anti-skate control; oil-damped, damped dual tonearm; anti-skate and cueing control; hinged dust cover; wooden base; 33-1/3-45 rpm speeds and many more features, that you’d expect on turntables selling for much more. A superior buy.

A long road home

The plot is usually found in some cheap dime novel, or portrayed in a B-rated movie listed in the TV Guide as "To be announced." However this recurring drama is played out on the highway stretches between Moscow and Pullman.

The difference in the drinking age between Washington and Idaho is literally killing us, and the alternatives seem to be out of that question. I refer to an incident which occurred this past weekend resulting in the death of a WSU student on his way home from the Idaho bars.

The mass migration which consumes the Moscow-Pullman highway each weekend evening, gives little indication of the mass horror which develops upon the return of the intoxicated horde.

The old adage of having "safety in numbers" is lost in a maze of near misses and direct hits which accompany the trip back to Pullman.

It's easy to put the blame on the people who chose to spend a night at the bars, because it's their choice to make the trip to and from. However, it's just as easy to put the blame on the State of Washington for not allowing 19 year olds to drink within its boundaries.

Ah yes, I know it's the same old story. But the same old question. Why can't the drinking age be changed? But I ask, what is it that makes a Washington State 19 year old that much wiser, or responsible when they drink in Idaho.

The incidents will continue, and the facts are still true, but the names will be changed in order that the innocent may die. I'm signing off now, so we'll play the national anthem and ask, "Washington State, do you know where your children are?"

Ed Troxel, we need a foot

An Open Letter to Vandal Coach, Ed Troxel: Dear Ed,

It looks like your Vandals may have difficulty in booting the ball out of town. With only five games left in the season, they'll be hard pressed to qualify for either of the major bowls.

The team's offensive line has been inconsistent, and the defense has struggled to contain the opposition. Injuries have also taken their toll, with several key players missing time due to injuries.

The fans are looking for a team that can win, and they're frustrated by the recent string of losses. Some fans have even started calling for the coach's head.

As you know, there's a lot of pressure on you to turn things around. The fans expect a winning season, and they're willing to put up with some losses if they see improvement.

So, Ed, keep your focus. Remember that football is a team sport, and everyone has a role to play. Work together, and you can still make it to the post season.

Sincerely,

Ted

Vandals by any other name

There's trouble in River City, and it's spelled with a capital "T." An increase in vandalism on the University of Idaho campus has many living groups concerned with the problem of what they can do to prevent it.

Incidents involving Idaho's new problem range from the relocation of a one ton anchor, to the devastation of the Alpha Phi kitchen. The victims are looking for a way to solve the problem, but so far, they have been met with a wall of silence from the administration.

"They're out to getcha," Hall

Who controls the stadium?

Students at the University of Idaho may once again ask, "Who controls the stadium?" The recent beverage container policy which the administration forced on us makes it fairly clear that the students don't. Only after scheming, fighting and threatening to disinvest mass disobedience did the students convince the administration it should relent. Obviously, this isn't what we planned for when the senate agreed to pool the stadium.

It was the belief of the student leaders that all such policies would come from the stadium board and would be reasonable in nature. Of course the university's iron fist retains final authority to approve all such policies. But when a policy such as this is not agreeable to the stadium board and when students are gone for the summer, it is clear that the stadium board is alone in control. It was the feeling of the present senate that all such decisions should be subjected to meaningful student input and debate.

But upon learning that the stadium board and the administration positions were not reconcilable, the administration didn't decide to subject the issue to debate. Instead, it decided to promulgate a policy unacceptable to students while they were on summer break.

This sort of administrative behavior doesn't exactly contribute to the student's understanding of the administration is made up of reasonable and fair-minded people.

On the contrary, the administration must do much to unify student opposition by using these means. Hopefully, they have learned a lesson. Any policy that significantly affects student interests must be acceptable to them if it is to be enforceable.

It is quite obvious that the stadium board's real significance is not in actual control of the stadium, but merely as an institutionalized lobbying group. This, again, is what the ASUI intended. What can be done? For starters, the board must be more willing to take its problems to the students. Very few students, for example, really know how foolishly some of their monies are being spent. $15,000 for nets for golf and baseball practice was spent along with $181,000 for a PA system that won't be adequate for rock concerts. Then there is the problem of lighting and unrolling the turf. The Physical Plant says it won't be ready for the first concert or even until the football season is over. When these problems arise, the board must get support for its position on all such issues must be developed.

Another problem is that some of the stadium board members are not minding their own business in their dealings with administration. As an example, they are trying to get the resolution concerning the beverage container policy. This is nothing but a farce. It is an additional problem that the stadium board and the university administration to this point are affecting the stadium. If the university administration of the stadium board do not become just another expensive version of the ISU Mini-Dome in which ISU President Davis once banned rock concerts.

But Trox, we're still in desperate need of "a real toe." We'd like to boot this "piece of trash" out of the U of I Administration for good.

Sincerely,

Ted

We are all aware that women are working towards goals in various fields but I have been wondering what happens to these women after they graduate. Since college women are still in the more traditional fields, what are they doing with their English, Home Economics or Anthropology degrees?

I spent the weekend with friends in Yakima and we spent some time with this question. Carolyn was not working at all in electronics. Carolyn feels electronics is a male-dominated area, she would like to see more women in the business. Carolyn has always known that her field is difficult and shy away from it. When women are working, they usually have a high sales record. Carolyn thinks this is because they have to know how to sell the equipment to customers, whereas men work in the office, and don’t believe a woman’s word on the information given on different equipment.

Therefore, the assumptions stemming from the advertisement we are all brought up on, that a woman is incapable of handling computer or stereo equipment, male voics tell us the facts; such and such ceremonies are performed. There are following nutrients or this stereo equipment delivers this and that, while a female voice says, how well the children will like the cereal or how well the furniture holding the equipment fits into the décor of their home.

Carolyn believes some of these assumptions would disappear if women would buy their own stereo equipment. She sees women depending on men for their music; those few that do buy their own stereos depend on men to choose the equipment for them.

She suggests classes be set up to teach women how to use audio and stereo equipment so women gain confidence in their ability to select electronics equipment. This would also provide consumer protection, so decisions are made on their own judgements of what they need rather than relying on salespeople.

We finished our conversation and I felt some of my questions weren’t enough. It’s enough just to see women like Carolyn learning new skills and doing well. We all need some success stories and I see Carolyn as one who we could hold responsible for this childish act. I suppose the answer is to give women as much leeway as another “Greek” function but that would be an unjustified assumption. We are in its infancy as a country; is there are many Greeks who are dismayed by their brother’s antics.

I suggest that those college students responsible could stand up and take credit to their responsibilities. I think college students are the only group of people that could do this thing.

Toilet paper has better use

Editor:

On my way into school Thursday morning I was greeted with a terribly depressing spectacle. I am referring to the countless rolls of toilet paper draped over the trees in front of the Tri-Delt house. It is beyond me how a person or a “group” of people could do such an assinine thing.

Why the typing errors Argonaut?

Dear Editor:

For the past couple of issues I have noticed an increase in type errors, spelling, and general layout in the copy. I'm not really trying to be a nitpicker, but I would hope that a better quality newspaper would be possible in the future.

I don’t know if you have sloppy proofreaders, or if you actually care how to spell. However, I believe the copy problems can be improved in the future.

What seem to be the problem

Marshall Hall

Editor’s Note:

I'm actually glad you asked the question, we are trying to tell people the reason for the problems.

Food for thought

The objective of all dedicated University employees is to thoroughly analyze all situations, anticipate all problems prior to their occurrence, have answers for all these problems, and to move swiftly to solve these problems when called upon... HOWEVER, When you are up to your ass in alligators, it is difficult to remind yourself that your initial objective was to drain the swamp.

Drinking, no contest

Coors’ America’s fine light beer has published a poster entitled “Welcome to Kibbie Dome, Home of the Vandals.” Well come on now. We all know they didn’t have it.

We seem to have lost sight of our perspectives, obviously, the need to build a stadium is not built to accommodate a mass gathering for the furtherance of alcoholism and beer. It just wasn’t. In fact, if almost any rational individual were to see a stadium in which football is played it would not be defined as a drinking establishment. It just wouldn’t, because it isn’t.

Yet through the years of liberated Idaho legislation, students have increasingly found it easy to drink and consume alcohol and cite the excuse for celebration as the football game and inevitable victory.

But we don’t win very often and following that logic I think people would be home drowning their sorrows in comfort rather than celebrating the loss in rows of cement bleachers. Too hard perhaps. After all, the Vandals have won once in the last enam of the team this kind of thing. In Mudville (I mean Moscow.)

Actually, the opportunity for challenges are lost to the cans and containers issues last week. What could be more challenging than a beer without a lid (like Kibbie Dome)? Sneaking in those carefully concocted plans to drink beer and then pledge project of the week. Prizes could have been awarded for the greatest success to pass through the gates. Stadium officials would have been baffled for days at the drunken state of the spectators.

But now, the students have lost their thirst for the daring in their quest for the drinking. And the tragedy is that the football game is only incidentally involved to the events in the bleachers.

We look ahead and become imbued in demolition delights at the upcoming football games. Worse could happen. The drinking age could be 21 -

The great misomder

Yake

Being one who’s interest resides in seriousness of riduculousness, I’ve once again decided to launch off into total absurdity. It seems that the Kibbie Dome has been stirring up a lot of hot air lately, so many people believing that this project could turn out to be one of the great mis-dorns of all time.

Before any more lungs get sprained off, a lot of mis-sense must be cleared up before the scene heats. The Civil Engineering Department is turning over its classes to everyone anyone calls our silver and gold elephant a dome. To the matter is that the structure is no more a dome than I am a writer. So put the book from the structures class that I never managed to complete, the picture will be analyzed in quasi-engineering technique.

By the book, a dome is a facility closely resembling a basketball cut in half. This means that each of the cones coming together is subjected to an equal stress in the area. Therefore it is intuitively obvious that a building cannot be a dome, for the simple fact that in Idaho, everything is out of whack.

That leaves us with just one kind of structure to call our monstrosity. Yes folks, it can be rendered if it was actually an arch. I wonder if Arch would be flattered if he knew the Vandals were playing in a stadium named after him. If you are wondering if he just looks like, a good example would be one of those quaint huts the Army building out house is another example. However, the prime example of our new covered stadium covered with beer can stuck in the mud. In view of the present stadium alcohol policy, this seems unduly ironic.

It is also too bad that the University couldn’t have suckered some beverage company into building the stadium with their logo across the top. I could just see it now, Budweiser might have paid $500,000 for the roof but the Coors people would have a DOME! I think the dome anyway has been designed to look like a giant flip top. Just think of the concepcion possibilities.

But the greatest irony is the recent dismay over the actual name for the stadium and what the name has been shortened to. All I can say is that if a journal ever decides to advertise a Kibbie-ASUI Activities Center every time an article was written a picture of the Kibbie Dome he’d run out of typewriter ribbon before the first paragraph was finished. Our thanks to the charge of usurping student power, if a name changes the power, then there must be no student power in the first place.

From a writers angle, it looks like better for worse, we’re stuck with a rose that now has another name. The thing about crying over the split milk, our Stadium Board members and ASUI president, working with the Administration and athletic department as to what we can do with our new “dome” in stead of playing “Name that Stadium.”

There’s something in the air

To the Editor:

There’s a lot of flies around Moscow this time of year, and they’re really beginning to get to me. When I even more so is the fact that what’s attracting them–no, not Dan Yake’s dog residue, but the crap we have put up around here.

Take the computer center. They want us to pay for using their cards, which I am sure would cut down on the use of the phone. Some of the students are here so they can’t make use of the computers.

And then there was the recent history service!

Last year there was an investigation of this area which turned up plenty. But all but one of the investigators chose to cover what they found.

The ominous resignation of Frank Mcreary a few days ago. I have had the pleasure of meeting him, and he is one of the really good people of cooperative officials in the administration.

Min. View Cutoff
At least three different acts of vandalism hit the U of I campus this weekend, ranging from window breaking to theft of kitchen silverware and cooking utensils.

Friday morning a window was broken in the kitchen of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Six windows have been broken in this sorority since the beginning of the school year. Earlier in the year, screens on several of these windows were stolen or damaged.

At Friday night, the wooden Pi Beta Phi sign in front of the sorority was stolen. Wooden fragments of the sign have been found, indicating it has been damaged. The sign remains missing.

Sunday morning the Alpha Phi sorority suffered extensive vandalism and the loss of a large amount of silverware, when an unknown number of persons entered the sorority kitchen through a window.

Mrs. Jane Ackley, house mother of the Alpha Phi sorority, stated that "garbage and food were thrown all over the kitchen. It took us about two hours to clean it up."

Mrs. Ackley listed 100 knives, 100 forks, 40 spoons, a can opener, a 5 pound block of cheese, a 3 pound can of coffee, and a carton of eggs as being missing. Value of the items has not been determined, although the can-opener alone is listed as perhaps $30.

A non-enrolled spouse can obtain a student-spouse activity card for $15, said Harry Todd, Assistant Manager of the Student Union.

This card entitles the holder to attend all student activities and athletic events only at student rates which includes football and basketball games, concerts, plays and swimming pool.

However, limitations cause the card to be different. The card denies the spouse (husband or wife) use of the library, the infirmary and convenience store.

The identification number on the special holders card will be the same as the social security number rather than a registration number. A red background on the photo signifies those people get in free or at a student discount.

Cards can be obtained from Todd in the Student Union office from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Todd requests that applicants must show evidence of eligibility entitling them to be a holder of this card.

The third speaker is John K. Elg, a prominent Chicago attorney and president of the Salt Lake Temple. His topic on Dec. 5 will be "Biblical Law for Living."

The speakers on Jan. 23, 1976, discussing "The Eternal Image of Man" will be Dr. Ernest W. Hartung, UI president, and Dr. Truman G. Madsen, professor of philosophy and Brigham Young University. Madsen also holds the Richard L. Evans Chair of Christian Understanding.

Additional activities planned for the fall of 1976 will be announced at a later date.
Warnick wants wanton whims

"I was very pleased that four of my appointees were approved, but very disappointed that Tim Sampson didn't make it," said ASUI President David Warnick, upon learning the results of the GOA and Senate hearings on his five appointees to the senate.

Warnick attributed the defeat of Sampson, one of his five nominees to fill five vacant senate posts, to "conflicts" several senators had "with his personality."

He also blamed several articles and columns appearing in the Argonaut, including columns by Sue Schou and ASUI Senator Kim Smith.

And he denied charges Smith made last week accusing Warnick of nominating Sampson relating he would lose, "I may have known all the senators would not be appointed" he said. "But they were good appointments."

Warnick added that "Sampson would have made the best senator of the nominees."

The thirteen senators are ranked in order according to the number of votes received.

"Warnick said he was definitely planning to appoint Kerry Jeaudoin as his next nominee. Jeaudoin is a resident of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, the only Greek Warnick has thus far appointed.

Final confirmation of Jeaudoin, a senior, is expected at tonight's senate meeting. Warnick said "I hope he gets in," but refuse to speculate on his chances for confirmation. "I've already gotten into trouble about saying things like that," he said.

Dance halted due to noise

A U of I open air dance suffered an early death as a deluge of complaining phone calls forced the Moscow City Police to shut the dance down shortly after 11 p.m. Saturday night.

The concert, featuring three bands, was held in the Gault-Upham parking lot. The location of the bands between the wings of the buildings created a reflection of the sound that could be heard for distances exceeding one half a mile.

Though students stated that the noise wasn't very loud, the echo chamber effect of the buildings caused the sound to increase in intensity as it got farther from the University. Apartments on "A" and "C" street suffered particularly as the noise ricocheted off the walls that faced the University.

One resident of an apartment on "A" street was able to record the concert even though his apartment was nearly one-half mile from the Gault-Upham parking lot.

In all, the police stated that they had received 39 calls complaining about the concert. 25 of these complaints came during a 21 minute period between 10:30 and 11 p.m. The Moscow police stated that during this time their phones were tied up, others persons may have been trying to call in and complain."
Vandals prove tough for NAU

A determined Vandal defense created plenty of opportunities and the offense capitalized on them to spoil Northern Arizona's homecoming game 22-12 Saturday afternoon.

With a record crowd of 10,000 on hand at Lumberjack stadium in Flagstaff, the Vandals scored first on a one yard TD plunge by Robert Brooks. With the conversion kick good, Idaho took a 7-0 lead and stayed on top the rest of the way despite a relentless Axer squad that refused to give up.

The win gives Idaho a 1-1 record and was a pleasant initiation into 1975 Big Sky action. Although the victory was a boost to Vandal morale, there is the shocking ISU squad to reckon with at Kibbie Dome this weekend.

The Bengals started the season by upsetting a favored Wyoming team and backed it up by stunning the number two ranked Division II team in the country, Las Vegas Nevada. Idaho State stopped Nevada cold and thoroughly defeated them in the Mini Dome although the score was only 15-7.

Vandal Head Coach Ed Troxel said "The win Saturday was a big one for us since it was Northern Arizona's homecoming and they were just off a big win. This will be good for the team's attitude and should give us some momentum."

Troxel admitted that the offense wasn't controlling the ball enough, but he noted that at times they looked great. He praised the effort of quarterback Dave Comstock who was named Big Sky player of the week after having a sensational day.

After Idaho's 7-0 lead in the first quarter the Lumberjacks controlled the ball for almost the rest of the half although they couldn't get many points on the scoreboard. NAU closed the gap with two field goals to make it 7-6, but with 7-seconds left in the half Vandal-quarter Bill Kielty attempted a 39 yard field goal. "It was a fake and holder Comstock tried to hit J.C. Chad-band in the end zone, but it was intercepted. However, off-setting penalties gave Kielty another opportunity. This time the kick was good and at the half it was 10-6 Idaho.

In the third quarter the Vandals adjusted to the Axers defense and then Comstock burned them with a 52-yard touchdown scamper to give Idaho a 16-6 lead.

NAU had threatened to score a few plays earlier but a key interception by Barry Hopkins saved the day. Again the Lumberjacks started a penetrating drive but mistakes made them go for a field goal which was no good.

In the fourth quarter, Comstock was sidelined after experiencing dizziness in the high altitude. Ken Schrom got the nod and moved the club well hitting tight end Steve Duncanson inside the 20 and then connected with wide receiver Tim Coles in the end zone.

Coles leaped high over a Lumberjack defensive back to pull in the 12 yard touchdown pass and put the Vandals out of reach at 22-6.

NAU came back hard again in a Lumberjack defensive back to pull in the 12 yard touchdown pass and put the Vandals out of reach at 22-6.

Troxel said next Saturday's game against Idaho State will be a real clash. "It will be a highly emotional battle. We'll have to watch out for their mistakes and their defense has been super so far this year."
Teacher evaluations change
by Blain Beersch
of the Argonaut Staff

The Faculty Council has unanimously approved a form for student evaluation of instructors to be used this year only when a new form, developed especially for the University of Idaho, is being prepared.

Nick Ogden, director of the Student Evaluation of Teachers Program, said approval of the Educational Testing Service's Student Instructional Report (SIR) is only for the academic year. This will allow Ogden and the Faculty Council's Advisory Committee on Student Evaluation of Teachers Program to formulate an evaluation "Best suited for the job!"

The need for an interim form was brought about by general dissatisfaction with the old nine question form of previous years, according to Dr. Barbara Meldrum, vice-chairperson of the Faculty Council.

Meldrum said students and faculty alike were generally unhappy with the old form as the results were fairly predictable in advance.

The old form could only to be of subjective value, but also asked as the first question the overall rating of the course, according to the advisory committees report.

The interim SIR should eliminate these problems. The form asks 39 questions and provides for 12 additional questions by the department or instructor.

The 39 questions are broken down into four sections. Section one contains 20 questions of general opinion. For example "questions such as "the instructor used class time well" or "the instructor was well prepared for class" can be answered either Not Applicable, Strongly Agree, Agree, Disagree or Strongly Disagree.

Section two contains 11 questions ranging from "What is your sex" to "Which one of the following was your most important reason for selecting this course?" All questions in section two have multiple choice answers.

Section three asks eight quality-summary questions. These are the "Overall, I would rate the textbook as" and "I would rate the value of this course to me as" questions. A scale from excellent to poor is used for this rating.

Section four provides space for 12 questions to be added by the school, department or instructor.

The evaluations will be administered by support personnel (secretaries, etc.) or by students. They will be delivered to Ogden who will have them run through a computer and a tabulation sheet of all the answers as well as information about the instructor will be given to the instructor.

The original answer sheets with the student's signature will be kept on file in Ogden's office. The only way an instructor will see them is if they are used in a court of law, tenure hearing, etc. against the instructor, said Ogden.

The tabulated results will show a standard curve for the instructor, according to Ogden. If this curve is weighted to the low end of the scale, it would indicate problems with the instructor or course. Of course, if the scale is at the upper end of the scale, it would indicate that the instructor is doing his or her job well.

This should eliminate student biases for the instructor's "entertainment value" or flamboyancy, according to Ogden.

Euell to crunch way to U of I

by Carolyn Harada
and Jeff Coupe
of the Argonaut Staff

In a world obsessed with war, overpopulation, coups, assassinations and a dreadfully serious inflation rate, isn't it nice to know that we're still able to walk out to the back lot and find enough edible weeds to make ourselves a meal? Think of the numerous trips to Roseaurs for munchies you'd be able to save if you knew the finer techniques of finding these verdant delicacies. "But how do I find out what's nutritional and where do I find these green gifts?" you may shriek.

Well shriek no longer. Save your cries of anguish for Sept. 25 when the crashing noise you hear will be the arborium coming down.

"Termite's Hartung's plan to once and for all do away with Blue Mountain's backdrop? No—quite the contrary. "It's like the taste of wild hickory nuts...so get a taste of Euell Gibbons. This 64 year-old gourmet naturalist of breakfast cereal fame, will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday. September 25 at the U of I SUB.

Gibbons will discuss 'Stalking Mother Nature's Supermarket.' Gibbons seeks to tell people about the storehouse of nutrition in each field, ditch, and vacant lot nearby. His home freeway is an ecosystem rivaling the Garden of Eden, for existing side-by-side are day-lily buds, Bird's Eye Lima beans, seaweed, Peppersidge Farm bread, gooseberries, and hickory nuts.

His talk is sponsored by the Issues and P' orum Committee of the ASUI Programs Office. The program is open to the public free of charge.

He is not an anamnciated natural food freak, but a gourmet with wild predilections. Gibbons exhibited his love for foraged food early in life. Born in 1911 in Clarksville, Texas and moved to New Mexico as a child, he concocted a candy bar from hickory nuts and sweetbackberries at age five.

"Whenever I read that phrase 'conquest of nature,' I feel a little depressed," says Gibbons. "Man is a part of the total ecology. He has a role to play.

Later, when drought and depression wiped out the family's food, he was able to keep his mother, brothers and sister from certain malnutrition—and possible starvation.

Gibbons once wrote a whimsical novel about a poor schoolteacher who masques as a millionaire by inviting professors and potentiates to block-tie banquets of natural foods. It was that book, striped of dialogue, characters, and plot, that eventually became "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," his first book on wild foods.

Gibbons' other books include "Stalking the Blue-Eyed Scallop," "Stalking the Healthful Herbs; "Feast on a Diabetic Diet," "Stalking the Good Life" and "Stalking the Far Away Places."

Housing situation tight, but dorms show openings

The housing situation in and around Moscow is still bleak, but according to a U of I housing official there are still about 10 dormitory spaces available.

Robert R. Parton, housing director, acknowledged living spaces were tight this fall, but added, "We came out very well compared to a lot of other schools." He was referring to the fact that enrollment was up all over the country this semester.

Parton said he knew of no plans at this time for construction of additional University housing. "We couldn't get housing built in time for next fall anyway," he said.

Family Housing director Donald L. Surfus said there is still a waiting list for family housing but it is mostly people who did not arrive for the semester. He suggested that persons still looking check with the ASUI referral service or consider purchasing a trailer.

Surfus said the housing situation could change with spring semester, but it was hard to predict. He added it could depend a large part on how many students can't find jobs and decide to stay in school.

A survey of Moscow landlords produced a dismal picture of one bright spot as of Thursday morning there was one vacancy reported at Hawthorne Village. The number to call is 892-3516.

Law librarian feted

The College of Law Librarian and a publisher's representative were presented with plaques for their diligent efforts to teach the very dry, but also very necessary subject of legal research.

McLeod's plaque will hang in the basement floor of the law building, now to be known as the "Walter McLeod Student Exchange Library." This area had previously been referred to as "Lower Slobia," the name said to have been bequeathed by McLeod himself.

Some students at the presentation were heard to say it had tended to be a floor of the law building after McLeod's death, with no further effort to upgrade the law library.

Berrymé said that nothing like this had ever happened to him before.

Bullet meant for Ford misses

A woman fired a shot Monday as President Ford left a downtown hotel. But the President was not injured and Secret Service agents rushed him to a waiting limousine.

San Francisco Police Lt. Frank Jordan said the Secret Service had taken a woman into custody identified as Sarah Moore, about 40.

"She was standing between 36 and 40 feet away from the President," Jordan said. "She produced a .38-calibre revolver and fired one shot, fortunately striking no one."

The presidential jet left San Francisco International Airport about 20 minutes after the shot rang out. The President arrived at the airport after a high-speed race from the city's downtown section.

The shot was fired as Ford emerged from the St. Francis Hotel. The loud report stumped the cheers of the waiting crowd to screams, and police rushed into the throng.

Capt. William Conroy of the San Francisco police said the Secret Service had checked on the woman Sunday night because she was on a list of potential threats to the President.

"The Secret Service examined her and passed her," Conroy said.

He said she was a known activist who had been involved with the massive food giveaway organized last year as an effort to free kidnapped heiress Patricia Hearst.

The woman, whose full name was given as Sarah Jean Moore, no known address, was taken bodily from the crowd and brought into the hotel.

Police stationed themselves outside the room where she apparently was being held on the mezzanine floor.

The President's plane took off from the airport at 3:55 p.m. It had been scheduled to depart at 4:10 p.m.

Mark Knight, 22, a freelance photographer who was perched in a bush across the street from Ford's car, said he was watching the President emerge from the St. Francis when he heard the shot and saw the woman.

"The shot rang out, and all the attention went to her," Knight said. "The Secret Service men were on her in a second and the crowd moved away from her. It was a woman, wearing a blue pants suit and cowboy boots."

"The Secret Service men got on top of the President, almost, and pushed him into the car. Then they took off.

Service station owner has shocking experience

Lawson told police the young woman entered the station and asked to use the phone. The attendant said as he showed her to the phone, she turned toward him and, "calm and smiling," shot him.

"It was like sticking your finger in a wall socket," he said. He is still shaken and sore from the robbery Wednesday.

"It was the worst pain I ever felt," he said. "My whole right side was jumping. I couldn't control my muscles."

Lawson said the woman was joined by a man who leaned over and pulled the wires from the darts in his belly, then helped the woman clean out the cash register of an undetermined amount. One of the darts was left in his flesh.

Police said eight of the weapons, called the "Taser Public Defender," were stolen from an office in Miami Shores.

The Taser, which Lawson said reminded him of a gray flashlight, launches two small carts attached to batteries by 18-foot wires. The darts can penetrate one and one-half inches of clothing and the 50,000-volt charge is described as incapacitating and very painful.

The weapon's makers, Taser System Inc. of Los Angeles, describe it as a nonlethal crime prevention device for stopping attackers in their tracks. Literature that comes with it states that in early testing, a blast from the gun using only 30,000 volts flattened a 250-pound bull.

Lawson, who weighs 140 pounds, was knocked senseless, his hearing and vision blurred. Doctors at Miami International Hospital said an inch-long dart was removed from Lawson's right side, just above his waist.
