Teacher evaluation changes

A new teacher evaluation formic was recently announced by the Idaho State Board of Education. The new form, called the "Teacher Evaluation Instrument," will be used to assess the performance of teachers and assist in making decisions about their employment, advancement, and professional development.

The evaluation form includes several new features, such as a greater emphasis on student learning outcomes and a focus on classroom management. It also includes a new section on self-assessment, which will allow teachers to reflect on their own teaching practices and set goals for improvement.

The new evaluation process is designed to provide a more comprehensive and accurate picture of a teacher's performance. It aims to help teachers identify areas for growth and provide feedback that is specific and actionable. The new evaluation system is expected to be implemented in schools across the state in the coming months.

The State Board of Education made the decision to revise the teacher evaluation form in response to feedback from educators and stakeholders. The new form was developed through a collaborative process involving teachers, administrators, and other education professionals.

In addition to the new evaluation form, the State Board of Education also announced changes to the teacher certification process. These changes include a new emphasis on classroom management skills and a requirement for teachers to complete a certain number of professional development hours each year.

Overall, the new teacher evaluation changes are intended to support the growth and development of Idaho's educators and improve the quality of education for students across the state.

This is an Introductory Lecture

Among the teams, the basketball and baseball cover the most public attention. With the opportunity to do well in both seasons, the teams have the responsibility to represent Northwest men, both at home and in the national spotlight.

The basketball season is a chance for the Northwest to demonstrate its athletic prowess. The team has shown potential for success in previous seasons, and with the right efforts, they can make a memorable impact on the national stage. The basketball team plays a significant role in fostering school spirit and pride.

The baseball season offers a unique challenge. The team faces tough opponents with a demanding schedule. However, the baseballers' resilience and determination are evident, as evidenced by their consistent practice and hard work. They work closely with the coaches to strategize and improve their skills, aiming for victory in every game.

Both teams carry the weight of representing Northwest's athletic spirit and character. The dedication of the players and their commitment to their respective sports reflect the values of Northwest and its students. As the seasons progress, the teams continue to strive for excellence, aiming to bring glory to the Northwest community and achieve their full potential.

Farwell memorial gym

Idaho's basketball team will christen their new home, the Kibbie Dome Activity Center at tomorrow night's game with Washington State. The move from Memorial Gym should make visiting teams very happy.

In the past, Idaho opponents have been faced with the Vasculas in the tight confines of Memorial Gym. For many, viewing such a task was comparable to General Custer and his squaw playing at the Little Bighorn.

In the "Snakepit," Idaho fans have often intimidating opportunities teams into playing well below their abilities. But this might not be the case in the spacious new facility. The basketball complex will seat about 7,000. With the average turn-out for a U of I game the place will be at least half full. Thus, the distinct homecourt advantage the Vasculas held in the past may be somewhat nullified.

And what the fan reaction to the new facility will be is yet to be seen. Will Idaho fans be as enthusiastic and intimidating as they were in Memorial Gym? Only time will tell.

But one thing is certain: many people will miss watching home games in one of college basketball's biggest little "Snakepits."

Congratulations from 1918 editor

As a former editor of the Idaho (1917-1918) I may congratulate you on bringing us into the age of the telephone. The "clean bill of health" was, of course, inevitable, but the telephone, once it comes, will be the miracle of the age.

The first telephone inaugurated in Idaho was at Caldwell in 1892. Since then the population of the state has increased from 20,197 in 1890 to 249,000 in 1918. The telephone has revolutionized our lives. It is now possible to talk over a telephone from anywhere in the world.

As I said, the "Snakepit" was applied only to the basketball team, and was not applied to the football, baseball, or track teams. This was verified by checking the 1918 "Gave," of which I was also editor-in-chief. It was not until later that it was applied to the University students, and eventually, to Idaho student activities. So much for that.

As for the Argus, it was then a weekly, printed twice on the campus, having two to three pages. It is now probably more than ten times the size it was then, and I would say it has a happy copy.

The Moscow-Latah County Library has just received the 1975 portion of the SUMMER EMD PLACEMENT FELLOWSHIPS, a program designed to provide first-hand experience opportunities in the search.

This dollar is a state-by-state totaling of 90,000 jobs available in summer. He will use this time away from his academic duties to photography the people and activities, with whom he presently lives.

From the public print, the N.E.A. grant will allow me to do the photography which I believe is invaluable because of my teaching experiences.

The one-year grant begins Jan. 1, 1976. Former January and August, Woolston will complete research material accumulated over the past two years, then begin the full time photography of human life.

Woolston’s purpose in picking the N.E.A. grant is to record the activities, people, machinery and the land from the area. He also hopes to portray in his photographs a historical progression in the world’s largest state and a particular area.

Polar wheel-lending

Woolston’s idea of photographing came about from several sources, the main Pen-nywadee was: “It was a result of re-use and appreciation. I grew up in a rural area and have now moved to a small town. I was empowered to note current educational in-"not an expert," a noted the lines to bring in a large city, along the Greenbelt of the future, where “the work.”

“I’m seeking work at a natural change in today’s fortune is in the white picture, where it is seen and where it is going,” Woolston said.

As a result of the grant, Woolston hopes to spend a year completing a photography book. His first book, “Beaver” , was published last fall.

While the N.E.A. grant provides funding, Woolston is a photographer. Woolston expects his academic duties will benefit directly from the work.

“Fifteen percent of the grant money will be devoted to color photography which may be helpful to 1 student when he and a color program is introduced at the univer-

“Woolston said.

As a condition of the grant, Woolston must make a report on the activities of the grant program, as a photograph within 60 days after completion of his activities.
