PEA travel requisition ignites flurry of questions

By JOHN HECHT

Confusion about the relationship between the ASUI and Palouse Entertainment Associates (PEA) brought about by inaction by the ASUI President and the Senate continues to cloud the entertainment picture at the U of I.

The current status of an agreement between the two groups drew attention this week when a request for travel to a national convention was approved for PEA officer Ed Gladder. He left Wednesday morning after "walking through" the requisition Tuesday.

PEA has "contracted" with the ASUI to bring concerts to the U of I. Senate Bill 163 passed last Sept. 28, setting the terms of the agreement with PEA, but the university administration declined to sign the document. In lieu of other alternatives, PEA and the ASUI have been working with a "gentlemen's agreement" since.

If the contract had received administrative approval, it would have expired at the end of the fall semester. The Senate intended to examine PEA's performance to decide whether to continue the agreement and on what conditions.

In absence of review action by the Senate and the ASUI administration, PEA has continued on under last semester's gentlemen's agreement.

Gladder was chosen to attend the National Entertainment & Career Activities Association (NEC) convention now underway in San Antonio, Texas. The NEC holds the convention each year to promote better contact between student entertainment buyers, agents and performers.

PEA President Brian Davies said he was felt Gladder would be the best representative to send as he had been to an NEC before. Gladder went two years ago when he was ASUI Entertainment Chairman. He was then a student.

Gladder met with ASUI Vice President Gary Quigley Monday afternoon. Also present was Senate Finance Committee Chairman George Ambrose. Gladder presented the proposed costs and justifications of the trip.

Quigley said his first reaction was "Oh, no, not another last minute requisition," but after discussion with Gladder, he felt the travel expense was justified.

Quigley said Ambrose concurred that the Entertainment Department travel budget was set up for this trip.

"We discussed the problem of competition in concerts relative to WSU and Spokane," Quigley said, "and the difficulty in developing contacts within the industry and getting contracts. I decided to okay the trip when I assessed where entertainment might be if we didn't send someone."

Quigley said he also attempted to contact ASUI Senators Mark Limbaugh, Rusty Jesser and Jim Shek, who agreed two weeks ago to act as an informal committee to review the status of the PEA contract. However, he was able to talk only to Limbaugh, who didn't have an opinion.

According to Quigley, the informal committee has not yet met. However, the situation with PEA has been nudged by the apparent lack of execution of other sections of the agreement.

One section says, "PEA shall pay 50 per cent of the net loss on a concert within 14 days." Both Vettrus and Davies feel there probably was a loss on last December's Ry Cooder-Jesse Colin Young show. However, the books have not been cleared.

Davies said he has submitted all the expense information on the concert he had, but has received nothing back from the ASUI.

One of the problems is that there currently is no person officially in charge of determining such billings. The position of ASUI Finance Manager has been vacant since Dec. 31, when Jim Carver's appointment expired. Assistant Finance Manager Jim Sabala has been acting in that capacity, but as of yet no official appointment has been made to the position.

ASUI General Manager Vettrus has postponed the accounting for the last concert until all the bills have come in.

"There is also a problem with billings from media," Vettrus said, "as sometimes they take quite a while to get to us. I don't want to start the process until we are sure we have everything. I think we are ready now."

Davies said he has been waiting for money owed PEA from the Waylon Jennings concert, but as yet he hasn't received a check. That concert generated a profit for both PEA and the ASUI.

Another part of the agreement was that PEA and ASUI would split the cost of long distance travel incurred on behalf of concert promotion. However, Debbie Oyama, ASUI financial secretary, said she has received no instructions to bill PEA for its share. Such direction would come from the Financial Manager or the General Manager.

Telephone bills indicate that the phone line set aside for PEA has incurred costs of $713.48 since the July billing date.

A third provision is that in case an outside promoter set up an agreement with the ASUI to produce a concert, PEA would receive 50 per cent of the ASUI share. That only such concert was the ill-fated Country Joe-Dan Hicks show several weeks ago. Vettrus said if such a split were made, that PEA they would probably be talking about "only $100."

The original memo of intent with PEA came from former ASUI President David Wernick July 29, 1976. That agreement said PEA would have authority to commit the ASUI budget "to the extent that the Entertainment Manager had in the past."

The memo said it would remain in effect until Sept. 30. PEA is continuing to operate under the agreement, and Davies said he is hoping to have more concerts this semester.

ASUI will need to face the entertainment problem within the next several weeks, especially as ASUI budgets are prepared. Even if the modified agreement continues, it is unlikely the U of I administration will execute a formal contract. If such is the case, neither PEA nor the ASUI will be protected from the financial vagaries affecting the entertainment business.

Senate business--Wright receives nod
black seat undecided

Senate-appointee Gerry Wright received approval 10-1 by the ASUI senate Tuesday night, and the senator was sworn in immediately following confirmation.

Wright was assigned to represent the Gamma Pi Aka, Alpha Kappa Lambda, Beta Phi and Farmhouse. The senator was also appointed to the GOA Committee.

In other action, Senate bill 313, providing for the establishment of the telephone service, was referred at press time for comments on the rationale of the formal appointment.
Tuesday senate meeting will decide Marching Band's fate

By ROD O'DELL

The fate of the Marching Band may be at stake next Tuesday, Feb. 22, as the ASUI senate decides whether to continue the assessment of the two dollar student fee that is the primary basis for the band's funding.

Senators will hear arguments for and against the fee at a 7:30 p.m. meeting in the Senate chambers. A vote will be taken on whether or not to continue the fee and its presentation.

Of campus residents, totaling $2 per cent of the total student body, will be represented at the fee decision by a single senator, casting a one-vote for opposition to the proposal.

Roger Bredeis, off-campus student majoring in electrical engineering, said, "No, I don't think we should support the band. I'm tired of footing the bill for everyone else's education and recreation. If they need additional funding, they ought to take some money that was added on for athletics."

Another off-campus resident, said she opposed the fee and its use. Barbara Abrahms, a psychology-sociology major, stated, "Oppose the use of the fee in general. If fees are to be raised, then it should go to the library. I go to the games, but I would rather have a decent library than the band."

Most off-campus residents, however, supported the fee. Cindy Steazek, French Hall wildlands recreation management major, said she thought the fee "could be put to a lot better use in other areas, like women's sports and scholarships. The $2 is too high also, it's a lot to charge per student."

The critical factor in the senate decision is the designation of representatives among the senators. Only one senator, Stacey Silva, is appointed to represent the off-campus interest. While other senators have attended off-campus seminars, only Silva has been formally assigned for representation.

As off-campus students generally oppose the measure and on-campus residents support it, it is expected that the vote will align according to living group sentiments.

As the only off-campus representative, Silva will be able to cast a one-in-twelve vote, although she stands for 52 per cent of the total University population.
Marching band

I have never played in a marching band. I am not an avid attender of events where marching bands are in evidence and I am an off campus student. But...

I do appreciate anything that is consistently done well. I am able to recognize a valuable promotional tool when I hear it and even though many off campus students do not support the continuation of the marching band, I do.

There are one hundred and seventy students involved in the marching band. The annual budget as now backed by the students of this institution is roughly twenty five thousand dollars.

There are not many expenditures on this campus which show as high a return for the investment dollars spent. For instance, I can think of several members of our top heavy university administration who receive an annual salary well in excess of that amount. I agree the volume level may be the same but the band is still a much better buy.

Sure, two bucks here, two bucks there adds up. But that does not seem to be any effective way that students can expect to halt the ever increasing drain on student finances. A student decision to cut expenses by dropping the band fee would only mean that the regents would find a way to up registration fees by a like amount.

So lets not cut collective throats. Lets spend our money on something worth paying for. A damn fine marching band.

The Argonaut will not publish a paper next Tuesday. This is due in part to the three day weekend and the unfortunate scheduling of Argonaut staff psychological evaluations early next week. The Argonaut will return to normal operations on Fri., Feb. 25.

Roots: an African view

To the Editor:
The 12 hour expose of “Roots” by ABC was, for many of us, both a pleasurable and meaningful television program that has ever appeared on any television in our history. Most of us have seen an agonizing educational and highly emotional experience for most African students and campus.

True, slavery has been with men since people started to live together in communities. It is customary modern history for one group within a country to feel superior to another group, in time, moves are often made to dominate and enslave. While this was common practice in the old kingdoms of Africa in Europe and Asia, historians have conceded that slavery in Africa was in most beneficial forms. Slaves were never to be mistreated, they could own property, intermarry, lead campaigns and even become chiefs. Slaves were not dehumanized.

Transatlantic trade in African human cargo is merely one of the endless tragedies that started before Africa as a result of her contact with Europe. Like Kinta Kunte, many slaves were kidnapped, others were victims of intertribal wars engineered by the slave traders for the sole purpose of obtaining cargo, yet others went on the promise of lucrative jobs across the wide seas and a quick return to Africa. It was an age of ignorance. Up to today, modified forms of the same tactics seem to be working in Southern Africa.

Roots has exposed to the general public the true experiences of Kinta Kunte and his descendants in Virginia. African historians are now piecing together the mechanism of African slavery. When the facts are out both Africa and all her sons and daughters have more to struggle to save the whole world will find a new sympathy and understanding.

Off-campus

To the Editor:

The only thing you aroused in me last Tuesday was a negative reaction. What kind of man can claim to be a conservative Republican with a power hungry mania? Strange as it may seem, being an editor in a free society does require a certain amount of responsibility. I wish I could get it open. Krossman, What is eating you about Steve Symms? You don’t have to hide behind emotions, you have almost half a page to air your grievances, and I’ll bet you speak up or shut up but don’t cry your sorrows to the student body. You’re a big boy now, if you have reasons for your dislike then hop on your typewriter and share them.

And try to remember that Steve Symms won hands down in the election for his seat. That’s more than you can say about Idaho. Maybe by your standards Idaho isn’t in the twentieth century but then by Idaho standards maybe you really aren’t in Idaho.

Micro gripes

To the Editor:

Some words concerning the recent employee strike against the new management of the Micro Movie House.

You may notice that we are no longer out front picketing. Our anger, however, has not gone away.

After four days of effective striking, the new owners of the Micro agreed to hear our grievances, but apparently did not consider them valid. Six people are now out of work for defending the right to express opinions and being respected as thinking individuals in a working situation without fear of being arbitrarily fired.

I feel very strongly that small business that is unresponsive to its workers and irresponsible to its community breeds big business that is unresponsive to its workers and irresponsible in its relationship to the world community. The same attitude prevails.

I live in Moscow because I would like to believe that there is still room here for "humanism," for alternatives to the mediocrity, exploitation and depersonalization that are becoming the trademark of the American way of life. But apparently even small expressions of the search for quality living can not be left untampered with. I would like to express one last feeling. The Micro is no longer a theatre for the people.

Lost priorities

To the Editor:

I wish to relate my feelings about in-state tuition for the University of Idaho. I most adamantly oppose it. If the University needs more funds, which it does, it seems rather absurd to abate only the students attending the University of Idaho. I feel the state lost sight of her priorities by making Boise...
State a University, thus throwing a strain on the entire higher education system. Tuition is the only means of correcting this problem. I believe it should be uniformly absorbed by all of the state funded secondary institutions. This would boost the entire system instead of penalizing just one.

Symms lover sounds off

To the Editor:

In all the time I have spent at this university, I have never seen such a fear-ridden statement as the one by Mr. Kosman in the Feb. 15 Argonaut. Although I don’t always agree with him, Steve Symms is the exponent of freedom in Congress. Any consistent philosophy of political freedom will hold that government is nothing more than an agent of coercion, and as such should be limited to the protection of its individual constituents freedom of action, i.e., their rights. The fundamental right is the right to life, which may not be abridged except by due process of law, the conviction of a crime that warrants that punishment. His corollary is the right to one’s property, the freedom to use it as one sees fit as long as it isn’t used in positive harm of another person or his property. This right has never been respected by our government. In the beginning, it was eminent domain, then income tax, then the misapplication of the 14th amendment and the anti-trust laws.

Mr. Kosman and his collectivist colleagues fear the enforcement of these rights because they fear that they would not be able to have the government force the productive in society to support those who can’t support themselves - the parasites.

Support a limited government and you will support a truly free society.

State University of Washington
What do they do? Campus cops: security’s their job

By ROSEMARY HAMMER

Perhaps one of the most important, yet least understood areas on this campus is the Moscow Police Department university substation.

"I’m in control," he explained. "The old campus security force simply was not effective. They had no arrest power and no legal authority to investigate criminal activity. In the event any evidence turned up, a crime was declared and it was necessary to turn the matter over to the city police, who were often too busy to deal with the problem.

In addition, the security crew was not allowed to carry guns. Alcohol should not be consumed in public areas of the campus building illegally. The campus police are armed, but they are not assigned to the areas they never had cause to use the 357 magnesium guns they carry. "They are designed for self-defense against the perpetrators of violence, not for use in the streets." Schmitz stressed.

With the advent of “real live policemen” on campus, many students feared the privacy of their dorm rooms might be curtailed. Laws prohibiting the consumption of alcohol on university property, they thought, might be more diligently enforced. Campus police, however, are not interested in broken doors in search of beer-swilling students. "We will not go into the dorms with warrants," said Schmitz.

"It’s very nice after a hectic day to have a quiet beer," he said. But he warned, students might run into trouble if they drink outside of the privacy of their rooms. Alcohol should not be consumed in public areas of the dorm, he maintained.

In the same vein, Schmitz does not favor any change in the city ordinance that prohibits the sale of alcohol on the ASU golf course. Proponents of a beer license for the course argue they would be able to increase profits, and no longer depend on the subsidy currently received from the university. Schmitz, however, does not buy this argument. "We have sufficient drinking establishments in the downtown area, we don’t have to compound any existing problems by bringing a drinking establishment on the campus," he said.

Schmitz said he does not oppose safety codes for non-student adults and another for students. There’s no room for double standards in law enforcement," he said.

Most U of I students will never see Schmitz officially or any of the officers in control. "The most contacted is perhaps 3 to 5 per cent of them, and then only about 1 per cent are in serious trouble," Schmitz said.

The campus police make about 10 more arrests per month. Burglary, larceny and vandalism are the most frequently reported crimes.

As the college campuses throughout the United States, rapes occur at this university. No rapes have been reported since 1974. However, if the woman does not report the crime, the police can do nothing, Schmitz said. A police officer will be added to the force, and Schmitz hopes female assault victims will be less hesitant to contact the police, since they will now be able to talk to another woman. Schmitz is happy about the addition of the ERA.

"I can’t think of any place a woman doesn’t belong," Schmitz said.

Campus police duties are much the same as for any policeman’s. They patrol the campus 24 hours a day, following no particular pattern. In addition to the sometimes monotonous task of writing routine traffic tickets, they conduct major and minor investigations, such as accident follow-ups. They are also responsible for writing reports, and often must appear in court to testify.

According to Tom Richardson, administrative vice-president, the difference in cost between the old campus police force and the campus police is estimated at an additional $5,000 to $10,000. He said that about what it would have cost us to hire an additional security person," he said. Funds for campus police operation, $135,306, come from the university’s general budget.

However, the university does not have direct control over the campus force. “In Idaho, not just anybody that wants a police force can have one” Richardson said. To bring the operation into the realm of legality, the city of Moscow pays the salaries of campus officers. The city is then reimbursed by the university.

Schmitz, however, is paid directly by the university, to strengthen university control.

Landlord-Tenant bill closer to confirmation

Boise--The Landlord-Tenant bill moved closer to becoming law Wednesday as the Idaho House passed the measure by a 56-12 vote. The bill will now move to the Senate for consideration. By press time, the bill had not yet been set for the Senate hearing calendar.

The bill establishes the grounds and requirements for filing legal actions between landlords and tenants. Specifically it provides for a tenant to file a notice against a landlord, allowing triple damages for violations by landlords, requiring the return of security deposits except under certain circumstances. Further, it removes the provision for the landlord to sue for triple damages in actions by a landlord against a tenant.

The bill allows a tenant to sue a landlord for failure to provide reasonable weather protection or to maintain in good working order such things as plumbing, electrical, ventilating, or sanitary facilities. The landlord may also be cited for maintaining premises in a manner hazardous to the health or safety of the tenant. Another provision of the proposal would permit a landlord to sue for return of a security deposit as required by law.

Under the provisions of the bill, a landlord would be required to refund to each tenant, within 21 days after the tenant vacates the property. The landlord shall be in full except for damage caused by the renter’s negligence, and no part of the deposit can be retained to cover normal wear and tear.

If a portion of the deposit is kept by the landlord, the bill provides that the tenant shall be given a signed statement of the amount kept, detailing the purpose for retaining the amount and detailing a list of the expenditures.

A tenant is required to give a landlord three days written notice before an action against the landlord can be filed.

This bill is not as comprehensive as the three previous attempts made in 1974, or the one proposal made in 1975, but because of that fact it stands a better chance of receiving the approval of both legislative houses. All predecessors to this bill attempted to be comprehensive and cover all areas of landlord-tenant relations, but have met much opposition in the legislature.

The purpose of the bill, according to the sponsor, Rep. James Golfer, R-Bolivar, is not to restrict the property rights of landlords, but to reach the approximate 20 percent of tenants who don’t have oral agreements.
Handicapped to display art

Idaho's handicapped will be given the chance to grow artistically as well as athletically as a result of a very special arts festival program planned in conjunction with Special Olympics programs.

Diane Walker, University of Idaho associate professor of women's physical education, said Idaho has received a $1,500 grant from the National Committee on the Handicapped (NCASH). The funds will be used through the Idaho Alliance for the Arts to develop the Idaho Special Arts Festival program. Idaho is one of just 15 national sites selected for the program, according to Walker who is NCASH state representative.

She said the non-competitive festivals “help develop an artistic responsiveness in the handicapped and there is much general learning in it for the handicapped. Probably most important,” she said, “is the positive feeling of achievement this experience can give participants.”

The festival will include such categories as film music, theatre arts including dance and drama, visual arts and folk arts including needlecraft and handicraft, Walker said.

Participants may exhibit completed projects or give a demonstration of the techniques used in the craft. Teachers will also be available to conduct workshops so that the handicapped can learn about other crafts, Walker said.

In unanimous consent, the ASUI senate moved Tuesday night to commend the ASUI secretary, Bev Henderson, on her third anniversary of service to the ASUI for “exceptional faith and dedication in the capacity of ASUI secretary.”

Senate Resolution 12 cited Henderson's service to the ASUI as an “instrumental part in the success of the ASUI,” and that she has had direct influence on “all ASUI members in a constructive and beneficial way.”

Henderson, who started with the ASUI in 1974, told senators that she has no plans for resigning immediately, although she will leave “soon or later.” She said she was unsure how long she will remain with the ASUI, because her husband will graduate from the worldwide education, “Moving to Vermont is what we would like to do, but there's nothing definite,” she said.
A dynasty playing in obscurity

By CRAIG CARTER

When you associate the word “dynasty” with college athletics you think of schools like UCLA, Oklahoma, Notre Dame, Idaho...Hold it! The U of I? The Vandals up there with the likes of the Bruins, Sooners and Fighting Irish? Obviously we aren’t talking about football or basketball. This sport has no cheerleaders, gets few fans out to watch the action but is the winningest team the university has produced. If you haven’t guessed the name of the game, don’t feel bad, the Vandal tennis team is used to living in obscurity.

Despite the fact the Vandal netters have won ten Big Sky Conference titles in the last eleven years, they have won a very cool reception from sportswriters and fans. This season promises to be similar to those of the last ten championship years, and a key reason will be the return of Steve Davis, the defending Big Sky Champ and Vandal captain.

Starting his third year for the Vandals, Davis is already on his way to a good season with one tournament victory under his belt. In last weekend’s Idaho Indoor tournament Davis took top honors out of a field of 60 other players. Davis said that the win adds to an important aspect of the game. “It gives you a lot of confidence to know that you are the best one out there,” he said.

Confidence was something a lot of schools must not have had in the tennis game Davis had displayed by winning three state titles at Capital High School. Only a few schools contacted him and as Davis said, “I wasn’t highly recruited. As a matter of fact only two coaches talked to me, one from Boise State and one from North Idaho College.”

Davis had from Idaho was the result of a high school trip. “I was up here for the Borah Symposium and got the chance to play with the team. The coach never did come to Boise to talk to me,” he added.

What gave Idaho the inside track was the engineering department. Davis had decided to go into the field and neither BSU nor NIC could offer Davis what he wanted. When Idaho finally did come around with a partial scholarship, he accepted.

His rookie year in college tennis ended in respectable fashion. Davis posted a 14-12 record in singles and a 19-7 record in doubles. Using those “toughening up lessons” he learned as a freshman, last year as a sophomore, Davis won 21 singles matches while losing only 6. In doubles he went 21-5. Along with that he won the Big Sky Crown.

Hard at work in preparation for this season, Davis and his teammates put in “around four hours of practice and conditioning a day.” Davis is somewhat cautious when appraising his play this year. “The players say I’m hitting the ball better this year than I was at this same time last year, but I don’t know. The real test will be when we get outside to play. You hit your strokes a lot different when you’re outside than when you’re in the Dome.”

Being a top player doesn’t mean that there aren’t letdowns. “There are always disappointments in tennis but here at Moscow I’d have to say the limited budget is the biggest one. We could do so much more if we had the money. The schedule isn’t the best and we never get the recognition we deserve,” Davis contended.

And how does the Vandal tennis squad look so far? “This is the best team Idaho has had since I’ve been here. Maybe the best team ever,” Davis said emphatically. Looking back at previous Vandal teams and the accomplishments they have achieved, maybe this year Steve Davis and his teammates will be noticed by more people. And if they aren’t, they will probably continue to do what they have always done...live in obscurity and win tennis matches.

Harriers win relay at Seattle

By ED O'BRIEN

Track coach Mike Keller took six members of the Vandal team to Seattle, Feb. 13 for the U of Washington sponsored Invitational Indoor Track Meet and brought back more than his share of the honors.

Edmundsen Pavilion, with it’s 220 yard, unbaked tartan track was the scene of the meet, which featured the U of I relay team of Ben O’Dowd, Rick Bartlett, Warren Reed and Malcolm May winning the 4x400 meter event. The time of 3:20.2, was the second fastest time in the history of Edmundsen Pavilion. Last year’s 3:18.2 U of Washington relay team holds the record at 3:18.2.

O’Dowd ran at lead off and once again with Malcolm May anchored the last leg. Coach Keller has decided to stick with the present running order until the NCAA meet in March. The relay team will be starting out of a pack there, like in the last race inPortland.

Jeff Reinking, a transfer student from Bellview Community College took first place in the 600 yard run with a time of 1:28.8. Jeff was a member of the Idaho track team last year but injuries kept him from competing.

O’Dowd also competed in the 440 yard race with hopes of qualifying for a second NCAA event. He finished second at 49.5, behind Oregon State’s Curtis Byrd with 49.2. Ben experienced some confusion with the landmarks and as a result ran 10 of 440 feet in one of the fastest times of 48.4 or better to qualify for nationals.

“Should he do this weekend at the Dome,” Keller said.

Scott Knoblich, participating in the 2 mile run, finished sixth, but his time of 9:13.6 was a personal best.

This Saturday in the Kibbie Dome, Mike Keller and the Vandal track and field team will play host to some of the finest junior college teams in the northwest. Keller plans to give the whole team a chance to compete and many of the runners will be participating in off events. The meet will feature: Spokane Falls Community College, Spokane Community College, North Idaho College and Everett Community College from Washington.
Swimmers split on the road

If there is an award given for endurance, then surely the Vandal swim team would take it.

The team faced four competitors in three days traveling from Tacoma, Washington, to Burnaby, British Columbia, and back to Tacoma.

Last Thursday, the Vandal swimmers faced Highline Community College and Western Washington State in a double dual meet at Tacoma, Idaho won both duals, defeating Western Washington 86-16 and Highline 63-50.

Against Highline, the outcome wasn't decided until the last event—the 400 yard freestyle relay. The Vandals won that race with a time of 3:24.6 to Highline's 3:24.9.

On Friday, the Vandals met NAIA champion Simon-Frazer at Burnaby and suffered a 59-47 defeat.

Individual winners for the Vandals in the meet included Steve Cobb in the 200 meter butterfly (58.0). The 400 meter relay team of Vamanti,

Cagers play home finale

The U of I men's basketball team will close out their home season this weekend when they host return matches against Weber State on Friday and Northern Arizona on Saturday in the Dome.

The Wildcats are expected to start the league's leading scorer Stan Mayhew, who is averaging 22.6 points a game, at one forward position. Bruce Collins (15.3) at the other, Jim Erickson (15.0) at center and Bob Holgate (10.4) and Mark Mattos (8.8) at the guard spots. Mattos also leads the league in assists with 150 on the season for a 6.8 per game average.

Jarvis said his tentative starting lineup for this weekend will be James Smith (17.2 points per game average), and Bill Hessing (10.3) at the guard positions, Jimmy Neuss (3.9) at center, and Terry Tate (3.3) and Craig Stahl (7.7) at the forward spots.

The Axers, under the direction of John Borkett, are expected to start Jeff Spencer (6.3 point average) at center, Will Talinge (13.3) and Tryst Tingle (12.6) at the guards, Mark Gossweiler (18.1) at one forward and David Henson (12.3) or Dwight Boyles (7.8) at the other forward spot.

This game will mark the last home appearance for Vandal seniors James Smith, Jimmy Lee and Jim Neuss.

Both games are scheduled to start at 5 p.m. with the junior varsity meeting the Washington State JV's on Friday at 5:45 p.m.

Then it was back to Tacoma Saturday to take on Puget Sound where Idaho suffered another setback. Worn down from both traveling and competition, the Vandals lost 69-35.

The bright spots for the Vandals were John Demeyer's first place finish in the 400 meter freestyle with a season best of 4:27.9 and Bob Morris' first place win in the 200 meter breast stroke with a time of 2:40.6, also a season best. Bill Currall captured the one and three meter diving competition with his finest scores of the year.

The competition marked Idaho's last regular season action. They will compete in the North Pacific Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships, which began Thursday and will run through Saturday, at the University of Washington.
Would a 2-year scholarship worth up to $10,000 interest you?

If you’re a college sophomore, and a scholarship leading to a career as an Officer in the U.S. Navy appeals to you, this may be just the opportunity you’re looking for. If you’re selected, we’ll provide full tuition during your Junior and Senior years, pay for your books and educational fees, and give you $100 a month for ten months each year to help cover living expenses.

There are two different options you can apply for. The first is the Nuclear Propulsion Candidate Scholarship Program (NPGS). To qualify, you must have one semester each of calculus and physics (or two semesters of calculus), and have a B-minus average or better. It is available to men only because of statutory restrictions on women aboard combatant ships.

The other two-year Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) Scholarship Program option requires that you have a C average or better. It is open to men and women.

For both options, you’ll need to pass Navy qualification tests. And, quite frankly, it will help if your major is math or in the physical science or engineering area.

If you think you’ve got what it takes to qualify, you’ll want to act now. The deadline for receipt of applications for the 1977-78 Academic Year is May 1, 1977 — and once vacancies are filled, you’ll have lost your chance to earn a scholarship.

Contact your local Navy Recruiting Office, see the Professor of Naval Science on your campus, or call 800-841-8000 toll-free, anytime.

Rosalie Sorrels:
The travelin' lady from Idaho

By DAVID NEIWERT

Rosalie Sorrels is one of those rare performers whose music has earned her scores of followers wherever she is heard, be it in a music hall or on an old Victrola, but who has gained little recognition outside of those circumstances. That in itself might not be so unusual but for the fact that her many admirers include writers for major music magazines, Rolling Stone included.

Wherever Rosalie plays, audiences discover an irrevocable charm that converts them from hesitant concert-goers into lifelong fans.

Now Sorrels is coming to Moscow to work her charm on local music-lovers. She will be performing in the Ad Auditorium at 8 p.m. next Friday, February 25. Tickets are $2.50, and are being sold at the SUB desk, Bookpeople of Moscow, Magic Mushroom, and Paradise Records.

Born and raised in Idaho during the Depression years near Boise, Rosalie's appearance will be something of a homecoming for everyone, including herself. In addition, Bruce "Utah" Phillips, who performed on campus last year, will be with her as something more than just a warm-up act.

Rosalie's music is rich with jazz and folk influences. She grew up in a home atmosphere saturated with music, and when in high school she became a jazz devotee. "While everybody else in my class was making it to Glenn Miller, I'd be down in the listening booth at Boise Music turned on to Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, Miles Davis," she says. That was when they thought you were weird if you listened to Stan Kenton.

Rosalie was married and had several children before she began making a profession of recording music. Her first album, not including a number of folk anthologies she did while teaching guitar at the University of Utah, was entitled If I Could Only Be the Rain. She gained a strong following but virtually no recognition. In the process, when her second album Travelin' Lady came out in 1972, she received rave reviews in major magazines, including Rolling Stone and Cosmopolitan. Her most recent album, Always a Lady, released last year, was the recipient of similar kudos. She has, amazingly, yet to achieve a major following.

Somehow, one gets the feeling that success in that form is not what Sorrels is looking for. Instead, she just wants to make good music and earn enough of a living to support herself and her five children. "They may not like my style, boys," she sings, "but they'll know who I am."

But the point is, a lot of people like her style. Among fans and true friends, she is able to count people like Hunter S. Thompson, Jerry Jeff Walker, and David Bromberg. Not to mention the inimitable Utah Phillips.

Bruce "Utah" Phillips has been one of Rosalie's closest associates in the music world, and is also one of her closest friends. A guitarist-singer of some reputation, he also gained a bit of notoriety for his campaign (or rather, non-campaign) for the U.S. presidency last year on the "Do-Nothing" ticket.

He appeared in concert at the University of Idaho last year as a part of the Holly Near show. Both that performance and the upcoming one were brought to Moscow by the Friends of Rosalie Sorrels and the Women's Center.

Bruce and Rosalie are known to give a performance that is always a treat. There are no drawbacks, they are simply wonderful to be around.
Three views of one crime

By SUSAN SAMPLE

In every bit of black, there is white; in every male, there is female. Commonly referred to as "Yin-Yang," this concept plays an integral role in the University of Idaho's upcoming production of the Japanese drama "Rashomon," according to director Carl Petrick.

Based on the short stories of Ryunosuke Akutaga,w "Rashomon" unravels the tale of a double crime—the murder of a samurai warrior and the rape of his wife by a notorious bandit. Through flashbacks, three separate versions of the crime are revealed by the victims. Essential facts remain the same, yet the motives of the characters change with each interpretation.

"In the West, we judge an event to be either true or false, black or white. There are no shades of gray," Petrick explained. "Yet in Oriental thought, an event can be simultaneously viewed as true and false. This is the notion of Yin-Yang illustrated in the play."

Each version of the crime is determined to be a biased interpretation and thus false. Yet, each account is simultaneously acknowledged to contain certain elements of truth.

"Murder and rape were chosen by the author as they distinctly show how one incident can be perceived in several different ways," Petrick remarked. As both crimes violate the human person by expressing a complete lack of respect or feeling for life, they easily command our attention and emphasize this point. "And since medieval Japan was an extremely male chauvinistic society, it's interesting that rape was selected, especially in light of how it is dealt with," he added.

There are as many truths as there are eyes to witness an event, for people see only what they want to see, comments the cynical author Akutaga. Similarly, rape can be perceived from different perspectives—from the male point of view as well as the female. In each, the role of the victim can be seen to differ.

Through the eyes of the bandit, the samurai's wife is seen to actually desire the crime. With the development of the following scenes, however, her role changes from acceptance to coping with the reality of it to complete rebellion against the rape experience. Voicing her own mind, the wife becomes)

Moscow's Fine Arts Festival

Throughout the month of April the community of Moscow and the University of Idaho will experience a Festival of Fine Arts. This festival, presented by the University Fine Arts Committee, will feature month long art exhibits including Indian paintings in the SUB, mural paintings by local artists and numerous other exhibits. Saturday, April 23, "Day of the Young," will be held in the Home Economics Building. It is described as an exhibition ofstudent art and music for people ages four to 104. In addition there will be two performances by Bellet Folk of Moscow the evenings of April first and second and a performance presented especially for Moscow school children on the afternoon of the first.

But this is just a small part of events that will occur throughout the month of April. There will be a slide lecture entitled "Barns of the Palouse," Buckminster Fuller and others will be coming to lecture and there will be a foreign film festival. Of special interest and sensitivity Center, the legend of intrigue and suspense is scheduled to run through Feb. 27. Sunday's special showing is set for 6:30 p.m. Tickets, available at the PAC and Theatre Arts Department, are $2.75 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12 and high school students with activity cards. U of I students are admitted free with valid student identification cards.

Erosion sends Palouse farms down the river

By BILL LOFTUS
The Palouse has an erosion problem. Latah County loses 1.4 million tons of topsoil a year according to one estimate. Dr. Merle Kaiser, who has written several articles about the Palouse region, credits it with the “dubious honor” of being one of the top two erosion trouble spots in the nation. According to another estimate, 150 million tons of Palouse Topsoil are eroded yearly and wind up in the bottom of the Snake and Columbia Rivers.

Mike Harker was presenting another aspect of the erosion problem yesterday. Harker is a grad student in agricultural economics at the U of I. The title of his program was “The Nature of Mandated Soil Erosion Control.” The presentation was centered around how a law passed in 1972 will affect the farmer economically. The law is known as the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972. Or more concisely as Public Law 92-500.

The law is supposed to eliminate all forms of water pollution by 1985. Non-point sources like sediment-laden run-off water included. Point sources of water pollution are mainly industrial and originate from known places, non-point sources aren’t specifically tied to one location.

Harker developed a model that tried to show what the economic factors were on a farm and how erosion was influenced by them. He had to rely on guess-work for some of his figures, because it isn’t known how tillage intensity and farmland productivity are related and how the growth of weeds and tillage interrelate. The intensity of tillage does determine erosion, though.

From his economic model, Harker predicted that if the law is strictly enforced, the government will have to compensate the farmers for some of the costs involved in eliminating erosion. However, the law’s actual enforcement is still a long way off and how it affects the farmer and erosion on the Palouse will be an issue for the future.

Harker’s present analysis of the problem is for short term situations. He expects to continue to develop the long range implications later. At least his work will help provide a basis for evaluating some of the practical sides of the issue when the problem has to be faced in the not too distant 80’s.

Strike over, business healing

BY JIM BORDEN

Micro-Moviehouse owners and ex-employees have resolved their differences and business is back to about normal, according to Jack Clark, owner.

"Business picked up Wednesday and three people bought real-deal cards," Clark said. Real-deal cards are purchased for $10 and entitle the holder to eight shows at the Micro, he explained.

The resolution came after Micro employees walked out Saturday and began picketing the theatre, protesting what they called a poor selection of movies and other owner-employee grievances.

Clark met with Sam Prigg, spokesman for the employees, on Wednesday to discuss the matter. Clark had refused to talk to the group prior to that because he was under the impression they wanted to run the theatre as a cooperative, and he felt some of their other proposals were unreasonable.

"I admit there were some misunderstandings on both sides, and I wasn't completely sure what they wanted," Clark said. He said he has no hard feelings and no animosity toward the group, and he hopes there is none toward him.

He explained what had been decided on each of the employees' proposals which were: the striking employees get their jobs back, that they have the right not to work during films they feel are distasteful, that they form a grievance committee, and that employees have the right to express their opinions.

Three join Alumni Hall of Fame

U of I's Alumni Hall of Fame has inducted fewer than 70 alumni in the university's 88 year history, but three will join the hall of fame this spring.

Chemist Malcolm M. Renfrew, university president Gerald W. Thomas and architect-engineer Arthur L. Troutner, Jr., are recipients of the U of I Alumni Association, Inc. honor.

Renfrew received national recognition for his work assisting in the development of Teflon. He was also a co-inventor of an epoxy resin which is used as the base for most marine paints now used by the U.S. Navy.

He served as head of the U of I Department of Physical Science until it was split into separate chemistry and physics departments in 1967 and as Chemistry Department head until 1973 when he stepped down to concentrate on teaching. He retired in May 1974, receiving an honorary doctor of science degree from the university.

Thomas received a bachelor's degree in forestry from the University of Idaho in 1941. He was granted his master's and doctoral degrees from Texas A & M University, College Station. He is currently president of New Mexico State University, Las Cruces.

An inventor, architect, engineer, sculptor, boat designer, artist and photographer, Troutner graduated from the U of I in 1949 with a degree in architecture.
