Alcohol checks to be "low key"

Alcohol checks at tomorrow's football game will be kept as "low key" as possible, according to ASUI Kibbie Dome Manager Ed Chavez.

"Anyone bringing safe containers into the dome will be asked if their containers contain alcohol, and if they say yes, we'll let it go at that," he said. "If they get obnoxious and cause complaints, however, they will be removed from the dome, and we will press charges."

He said there will be no searches "unless someone comes in all bundled up in eighty degree weather. In a case like that, we will ask a person to open his coat. Purse and packs will be checked only if they are large enough to hold a bottle or something; that is just checking for safe containers."

According to the official university container policy, safe containers are any containers which hold less than a gallon, including vacuum thermos bottles, plastic jugs or plastic bottles, leather beverage containers, picnic jugs, plastic and paper cups and other reusable containers.

The policy specifically prohibits glass bottles, cans, ice chests, containers larger than one gallon, kegs, garbage cans, hubcaps, boards, sticks and metal pipes.

ASUI President Bob Harding told living group presidents last night the "ask not search" policy will be changed if "there is a lot of drunkeness and destruction."

Administration requests regents not to consider fee increase

by Marty Trillhaase

A showdown over a proposed $29 per semester fee increase will not materialize at next week's Board of Regents meeting. Instead the regents will act on nuts and bolts issues.

That meeting is scheduled to take place in the SUB Thursday and Friday.

The administration has requested the board not to act on the increase proposal, pending further study of student opinion on the matter.

The regents had postponed judgment on the increase package at their September meeting in Boise. The action may have reflected the regents' desire to study student opinion more fully.

Among the major items to be taken up by the regents are a proposed sports pavilion for Boise State University, enrollment statistics at the four state universities and colleges, and a code of ethics for student recruitment.

The BSU pavilion is the second concept considered by the board. The first was rejected last spring. The cost of the new project is estimated at $14 million. The board is scheduled to make a final decision on the matter.

Registrars from each of the four universities and colleges will submit enrollment figures for the Fall 1978 semester. Under a system initiated last year, full time equivalencies will be compiled as follows:

- A undergraduate FTE will consist of 15 credits.
- Each 12 credits in graduate studies will constitute one FTE.
- Law and WAMI students will count as one FTE regardless of credit loads.

Under regent policies, the figures are under embargo until next week's meeting. Indications are the U of I figures will remain substantially unchanged from last year. Increases in engineering and art and architecture are expected, however.

The regents will also consider a formal policy for recruitment of high school seniors. The report was submitted by the Idaho Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers.

Currently, no formal code of ethics exists for recruitment.

The bulk of the regents University of Idaho agenda is concerned with approval of grants. The university is requesting approval of roughly $1.1 million in grant applications and some $713 thousand in accepted grants included among the grant applications:

- A $8,782 grant from the Nee Seche Tribe to the anthropology department for test excavations near Kamiah
- A $48,986 grant from CETA VI to student advisory services for a needs assessment study of Latah County women.

Accepted grants seeking regent approval include:

- A $21,731 HEW grant to student advisory services for a program entitled "Veterans' CIP."
- A $42,682 continuation grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to the vocational rehabilitation department.

Regent approval is also being sought for a new regional veterinary medical program that would replace the current U of I-Washington State University agreement. The new program would include both schools as well as Oregon State University.
ERA supporters demonstrate here

by Diane Sexton

The Idaho Coalition for Equality demonstrated in Moscow Tuesday in support of the Idaho state legislature’s ERA ratification deadline by March 22, 1979.

About 25 ERA supporters marched from Franklin Square to Senator Frank Church’s local office, urging him to support an extension of the deadline: “We expect your support of this campaign and encourage you to use your influence to assure HJR 638 consideration during this 60-day legislative session.”

As a symbolic gesture that there is no time limit for equality, the demonstrators bunched in front of Church’s office. A calendar date must be set by 30 March for the extension bill to be voted on at this Congressional session.

Larry LaRocco, Church’s North Idaho representative, assured the group he would relay the message to the senator.

Church released a statement from Washington later that day. He maintains his original position on the bill and will vote for extension provided a rescission bill is attached, making it constitutional for states to nullify their original decision.

Thirty-eight states must ratify the Equal Rights Amendment for it to become law. So far 35 states have ratified it, but three, including Idaho, have voted to rescind.

The coalition maintains that the passage of the extension bill, HJR 638, “cannot be subverted by attempts to amend it to include consideration of restrictive riders.”

In his statement to the press, Church said, “Quite apart from the merits of ERA, we are dealing here with the serious business of amending the Constitution of the United States. It is essential that the procedure adopted be evidenced, giving the state legislatures the right to vote for or against. If we adopt a formula which acknowledges only affirmative action, while ignoring the votes of state legislatures which seek to rescind an earlier decision aproving the amendment, we would be setting an impossible precedent for the future.”

ERA supporters fear there will be an attempt to filibuster by opponents when the bill is being considered in the senate. They have urged Senator Church to vote for cloture at the first opportunity should this happen. Cloture would end the filibuster and demand a floor vote.

In its statement to Church, the Idaho Coalition for Equality asserted that “the passage of HJR 638 will reinforce the United States Constitution’s support of and belief in equal rights for all people without regard to sex.”

Senate approves appointments, tutor funds

by Kathy Stacki

The ASU Senate Wednesday approved all but one of ASU President Bob Harding’s board appointments, passed a resolution concerning the Valadine meal card system and amended and passed a bill to provide tutoring funds to tutorial services.

The appointments bill was considered line by line, and the only real debate came with communications board appointees Tim Racicot and Wayne Brethauer.

Racicot, a freshman ag economics major, came out of GOA with a 2-1 do not pass recommendation. Senators Jim Wright and Kerrin McMahan voted against him, claiming he was not in the communications field and his views on “limiting editorial freedom” were reasons for their opposition.

During his GOA interview, Racicot said he felt editorial freedom should be limited under some conditions, according to Wright and McMahan. He later said he would approach any problems or ideas on Communications Board with “an open mind. That is what we want to approach anything,” he said.

“Communications people are really touchy,” Wright said. “Tim is enthusiastic, but I don’t think his enthusiasm can or will overshadow his knowledge of the basic ideas of freedom of speech.”

Senate Pro Tem Rick Howard said, “We have a lot of vacancies and I don’t think we can be too picky.”

Racicot was appointed with 8 votes, 2 no votes and 1 abstention.

Wayne Brethauer was the other appointee to heated debate and was ultimately denied a Comm Board position.

He came out of GOA with a 3-0 do not pass recommendation. Senators Victor Nott, Wright and McMahan said Brethauer’s lack of knowledge and his “off the wall” answers to interview were the reasons for their recommendation.

Brethauer’s appointment failed by a voice vote.

In other business, the senate approved a resolution asking senate’s permission to add guest limitations in the new Valadine meal card system.

Howard, the author of the resolution, said discrepancies between what was promised last spring with the new system and what has actually happened prompted the bill.

“It is just another incident where the students were given something without being told what they are getting,” Howard said. “We have gone to get something on this and other issues where the student is being neglected.”

ASA Vice President Gerry Wright stated that the Senate will not be a starting point for this resolution. “This is only the beginning, however. When Food Services get their copy of this resolution, they’ll probably put it in their file cabinet,” he said. “We have to do more about the Valadine system and other things, but this is a good start.”

The senate also approved an amended bill transferring $1,500 to tutorial services. Originally the bill allocated $2,800 but according to acting finance committee chairman Rodney Sparks, alternatives to just one-on-one tutoring will cut back costs.

Jeanette Driskell (Learning Resource Center) gathered a lot of questions and I talked and agreed that more work-study tutors, group tutoring and tutoring for credit are alternatives that will save money,” he said. He also said Driskell will keep a running record of finances and may ask for more money later in the semester if needed. Tutorial services was totally cut from the budget this summer.

The senate also passed a bill which will put an impeachment provision on the ballot in the next general election.

The provision will maintain the ASU Constitution allowing both elected and appointed ASU officials to be impeached. As it now stands, the constitution only allows impeachment of appointed officials. Elected officials must be recalled.

Vista and Peace Corps to visit campus

Recruiting representatives for the Peace Corps and Vista will be on the university campus Monday through Thursday, Oct. 2 to 5, seeking applicants to fill approximately 2500 volunteer openings that begin this year throughout the nation and in 63 overseas developing countries.

Information and applications will be provided from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the SUB lobby each day of the drive. Special seminars on the Peace Corps and Vista will be presented. The seminars will be Mon., Oct. 2 at noon in the SUB Sawtooth room and Tues., Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the SUB Cataldo room.
Harding defends senate pay cuts, may restore some salary

by Marty Trillhaase

Despite the numerous resignations that followed his decision to cut senate salaries to $1 a month, ASU President Bob Harding said the pay cut had little to do with it. He added he may restore some salary to senators, but said funding for legislative lobbying has a higher priority.

Harding made those remarks during a taping of KUOI's "Media Analysis" Wednesday. The program was scheduled to run later Wednesday evening, but due to Dobler-Monaghan debates ended last night

by Marty Trillhaase

After a week of debate on the outside, the scheduled debate between State Sen. Norma Dobler and her challenger Pat Monaghan on abortion took to the SUB Ballroom last night.

When it ended, Dobler pulled the curtain down on the ASUI Issues and Forum sponsored series by pulling out.

Ever since the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing some abortions on demand, the issue has been an explosive one between right-to-life organizations and groups supporting the court's decision.

But Dobler said the state legislature is virtually powerless to counter the mandate—short of joining with four-fifths of the states in calling for a constitutional convention. That could be dangerous, she said. Despite claims that the convention could be limited to the changes it would make, Dobler countered that life and human life are not the same. No one knows when human life begins, she added.

The question is not a legal but rather religious one, Dobler said. "It is very naturally and very emphatically wrapped in religion," she said.

Monaghan charged he never raised religious issues, but biological issues. "Ask the people what they're doing. They'll tell you," he said. "If it's not alive, why do you have to kill it?"

At the conclusion Dobler said the debates had used her and the students. "Every time before the last debate, it was clear I had been taken in," she said. But she said she had agreed to complete her end of the bargain.

"At this point, I believe I have more than fulfilled my end of the bargain," Dobler said. She indicated several friends had been victims of obscene phone calls.

Voters' loss

Even before she began her end of last night's debate, State Senator Norma Dobler knew she had lost.

And she decided the price of continuing her political career may be too great.

Dobler pulled out of a series of debates with her challenger Pat Monaghan last night following a debate on abortion.

That ends the debate. In the long run, it is the voter who suffers. But don't blame Dobler.

Last night's debate was an exercise in pure futility. The Idaho Legislature can do nothing about the 1973 Supreme Court decision that it hasn't already done—short of calling for a constitutional convention.

Despite all the evangelistic oratory he spewed forth, Monaghan could not really challenge Dobler on the point that a constitutional convention could lead to more problems. Such a convention is serious business.

The last one held in the United States succeeded in overthrowing the government and its charter—the Articles of Confederation.

Abortion is not a pretty issue. The idea is hateful to a good many of us. But for a state legislature which has tried all reasonable means of containing it within the bounds set by the high court, it is a dead issue.

That's not necessarily justice. But then there isn't much justice in putting a state senator with a proven record of social concern on trial for a decision she did not make.

But Dobler could have played dirty. She could have blamed the entire mess on the court and simply charged a convention was too dangerous. She didn't. She was honest and spoke her convictions. She is a true lady.

Monaghan, however, consistently accused Dobler of not being truthful. Mr. Monaghan is not a gentleman.

ERA and equality

Editor,

Amending the Constitution is serious business and should not be taken lightly. Ever since the passage of the Prohibition Amendment, the amending process has been used sparingly. There are two major problems with the Equal Rights Amendment, one is that ERA lacks the kind of widespread support necessary for an amendment, the other is that the legislation we have now can achieve the same goals. ERA obviously lacks as strong support when you consider these facts—the first ten amendments were ratified in 27 months, and after that the average time to ratify was 19 months. None has ever taken four years.

The most recent amendment, that of lowering the voter age, took less than four months. And ERA advocates want seven to 14 years.

Legislation we currently have can achieve ERA's goals—Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act bars sex discrimination in employment, there is the Equal Pay Act of 1963, 1972 Education Amend., the 14th Amendment guarantees "any person...the equal protection of the laws." It's not that some people are against abolishing sex discrimination, it's just that they feel a constitutional amendment is not the way to do it. ERA is a huge weapon against an increasingly shrinking and costly process. It takes the signatures of 10 percent of the members of the ASUI to initiate a recall election, which is a lengthy and costly process. It takes the signatures of 10 percent of the members of the ASUI, a six or 240 day period, the ASUI Senate seems to be gaining some momentum, and even looking forward to the student elections six weeks hence. Wednesday the senate passed a bill which would allow for the "impeachment" of an elected official. This will need to be passed by the students, and thus considered the normal regard the ASUI is currently held, might be the most popular item on the ballot.

The concept of impeaching elected ASUI officials has been long bruited around the SUB, where most of the members of the species swarm. The talk always seems to stem when some official or another has done poorly, or even nothing, in the eyes of his or her peers.

Currently elected officials can only be removed through a recall election, which is a lengthy and costly process. It takes the signatures of 10 percent of the members of the ASUI to initiate a recall election.

...Broadly speaking, "Malfeasance" is the commission of an act which is unlawful, especially by a public official. "Misfeasance" is a lawful act in an unlawful or improper manner, especially with infringement on the rights of others. "Nonfeasance" is failure to do what duty requires to be done.

It is perhaps there is a few deficiencies in the current impeachment clause, which the proposed amendment will only compound. How is it to be done, and to whom? The language was taken from the 1969 edition of the ASUI Constitution, and there is no one left around who can suggest explain of what the original intent was.

Charges can be brought by any ASUI member, in other words, virtually any student. Presumably the charges would allow certain certain actions or actions which caused displeasure about the official. Then the "Senate" must conduct a "proper" hearing, which nowhere in the Senate Rules and Regulations or its bylaws is explained or determined. It is questionable there are grounds for appeal. Impeachment could be used frivolously, to halt the ASUI.

Hopefully, the senate will not just stop at the amendment, but will expand its changes into clarification of what to do and how if and when impeachment comes. If such processes have been created and used for media removal (with more structure and protection) it would be nice to see such protection for others in the ASUI.

It is possible there are other areas of the constitution which need change. This just might be the right time to start them. It seems to take the senate a while to deliberate and arrive at a decision, and with the elections only six weeks away, it should start now.

John Hecht

serious consideration. But many of those who would be drafted would very likely see the war as a death sentence. A crucial drawback to passing ERA is that it would be impossible to achieve immediate results. There would be no "magic-wand" effect, nor would there be a change of attitudes run deep, and just because the law of the land changes doesn't mean people will change. With blacks and whites being equal in law, all prejudices still are alive today.

Ever since the American Revolution 200 years ago, women have been pushing for equality. The concept of ERA will never die as long as the human spirit of rebellion lives. ERA advocates, like their children, want what they think they can't have and are blind to many of the consequences of having to get what they want. The Constitution is a permanent form of government, but it is not because Americans consider equal rights for women dangerous or irrelevant, but because they see that an amendment is not the way to go about changing things. If they can't have the people don't want it, why change?

Abortion and law

Editor;

The letter by Irene Johnson demonstrated that there is a clear understanding of the Supreme Court decision regarding abortion.

Roe v. Wade 410 U.S. 113 (1976) did not state that a woman may not use abortion as a practical purpose of dying during its first nine months of existence. The decision was based on a constitutional right to privacy. This is a fundamental right that may be regulated only by a compelling interest. Since state interest does not exist during the first trimester of pregnancy when the decision is left to the mother and her licensed physician. During the second trimester the state's interest in the mother's health permits it to reasonably regulate abortion. At the fetus is viable the states may proscribe abortion except for the preservation of the mother's health and the health of the baby.

Ms. Johnson misconstrues the ERA when she states "The ERA may lead to a stop discrimination against males by requiring their consent for abortion as after all abortion is discrimination against just because their sex keeps them from carrying a child." This argument's consent was reviewed in Planned Parenthod of Cent. Mo. v. Dan-form 428 U.S. 52 (1976). A state may not require the consent of the pregnant woman's husband during the first trimester. Since the state itself cannot prohibit abortions during this period, it cannot withdraw authority to the husband. Since Roe v. Wade was based on a woman's right to privacy, I am dubious that the passage of the ERA would mandate a result contrary to Roe v. Wade. Will the 1st amendment allow a person to make unpresurized, emotional statements; prudence would suggest that Ms. Johnson read the court decisions that she alludes to. A little knowledge about complex legal questions is more dangerous than her knowledge at all.

S.E. Neher

Editor's note: As mentioned in the last issue, the Irene Johnson who wrote the letter about the ERA and abortion lives in Moscow, and is not a U of I student.

Abstinence

Editor;

In the past, and even quite recently, I have observed letters of support to the issue of abortion. Some writers claim to be pro-life while others call themselves pro-choice. I acknowledge that the abortion issue is an important one and worthy of the attention it is drawing. Abortion is not, however, the problem to be resolved. I would like to see this letter to the cause of the problem.

In our present "liberated" society, why, if not most, feel that there is nothing morally wrong with sex outside of marriage? I am not speaking here simply of those individuals who play sex as if it were a sport, a game called, "One Night Stand," in which one needs to "score" in order to win. But I also speak of those couples who have a deep love for one another, though they are not yet as made any formal commitment to each other. These sorts of people should be given the chance to confront the abstinence issue.

People who abstain from sexual intercourse during their courtship years, why permit themselves to have intercourse with their spouses after seriously planning the family and age structure and determining the mutually desired means of conception, will the process be facing an unwanted, or at least unplanned, child far less of the time than the non-committed group. Furthermore, if the problem should arise the married group already has a family unit in which to raise the child and they will not be left to have an abortion or to put the child up for adoption. Our unwed and sexually active group has the options of abortion, adoption or "shooting wedding." In fact, as mentioned in a U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare study, "only 26 percent of the women obtaining abortions in 1975 were married at the time of the procedure." The responses go on to say that unwed married continued to have abortion ratios (number of abortions per 1000 live births) far higher than those of their married counterparts in 1975. And finally, the aggregate abortion ratio for unmarried women was 17 times higher than that for married women. Our society is soberly statements and ones which clearly show who is creating the demand and having the problem. I feel that it is quite clear that it is their ethical precepts which are leaving women with such dismal choices.

I concede that there will always be the threat of rape and that there is a serious ethical problem due to their absence without consent to intercourse. I believe that it is as a would be ought to consider the cause of the problem of sexual attitudes and behavior, as well as the problem itself. Why don't we try to nip this problem in the bud.

Letter to Gibb

Editor;

The following is an open letter that I sent the president of the University of Idaho on Wednesday of this week. At that time we received the picnic nor replied to the invitation, which may indicate his lack of interest in student opinion.

Robert White

To: President Gibb Ph.D.,

Rounding dog of the Physical Education Dept. and Prime Devil to the minorities of the University.

Administration

Dear Running Dog:

While you were undoubtedly invited to the school of Mines picnic Sunday Sept. 24, 1978, to 6 p.m. in Glade Park as a guest of the Molly McGuire's. An informal discussion of your economic policy, compensation, Law, most of the Library, and the College of Mines (may 1000 students) infuse your transportation before football will be undertaken. A secondary topic is the potential of $2.1 million (or about 200 six-packs of beer per person in the university) on the unnecessary addition to the super Potato Barn known as the ASUS-Kiibbe Dome. At present the Molly McGuires would like the program to win at least 50 percent of its games before sinking this large sum of money into this added comfort.

The Molly McGuire's are happy to player our $1000 game. Some of the more militant members have volunteered their transportation. At present this consists of tar, feathers and an 8-foot rail: therefore the executive council, with two exceptions, advises you to decline its kind offer.

Sincerely yours, Robert White

Football absurd

Editor;

I don't resist Betsy Brown's call for letters to the Argonaut nor can I limit myself to boundaries that she addressed.

First of all, I might suggest that the university's attempt centered by student awareness because of a general trend toward desensitization. A week of concrete and flourish lectures on irrelevant topics, the first common, is good, drunk and horrifying. Usually, it is the second, third and etc. If an issue is to activate the student, impota, response must be immediate (rather than "contingent" or "next semester") retaining to money, alcohol, or both, in general). In short, most of the students can't academies any more or less than football. They are equally sincere. There is an opinion in my mind that whoever drew up that contingency plan is a litte warped. But then so is the U of I's coliseum. And any alumni who makes contributions for (or contingent upon) the glory and (ignor?) of football rather than academics or more civilized sports.

How about the senate's swift action on the Gem? $13,000 for a horse that is likely to lose as much as they could their (contingent) to allocate for the Learning Resource Center. What's more important anyway?

A university can be a social club, a playground, a fairyland, where one doesn't need to grow up, employment for thousands of or place where people can live and grow and help each other. It depends on each one of us and all of us together. My vote is to eliminate football and the Gym (for starters) and get a little more serious about the purposes and potential of a university.

Thomas von Alten

Initiative One

Editor;

University of Idaho students should carefully read and be fully aware of the initiative on the ballot. The initiative is modeled after a California constitution amendment and contains much language that is confusing and some provisions of questionable constitutional validity. If passed, local government revenues could be reduced about $140 million. This would mean that local governments would lose about two-thirds of their property tax revenues and hundreds of thousands of teachers, policemen, and other local employees would be laid off and local government would require reorganization. If passed, state government would lose the share of $140 million in revenues, a 15 percent cut in state appropriations would be necessary. Both the 30 percent and 15 percent cut in state appropriations would result in massive cuts in the University of Idaho budget.

Student advisory services, career planning, student counseling, and many academic programs would be the hardest hit. There is great danger that university fees may have to be raised to save some hard pressed academic programs if the 1 percent initiative is passed.

Editor's note: Because the Argonaut received so many letters for this issue, space limitations compel us to hold some letters for Tuesday's issue.

Correction

A mistake appeared in Tuesday's Argonaut in an article about a television interview with former US, Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren. According to the article, Warren...came to Boston last spring to accept the Dretzin Award at Brandeis University. The article also implied that the interview was made last spring.

In fact, Warren received the Dretzin Award in Boston in the spring of 1971. The television program was aired the day that time, and was first aired over station WGBH in Boston in 1972. Former Chief Justice Warren died in 1974. "The Warren Years" will be shown 5 p.m. Friday on KUID TV, Channel 12.
Did you ever go on a field trip to the museum when you were in grade school? I can remember having to ride the yellow, shock-absorber-less bus all the way downtown, line up by twos, and proceed through the galleries in a hushed manner. We peeled and ached, smudged the display cases with our grimy fingers, tried to touch the stuffed animals and crawl up to the dinosaur skeletons for closer inspection. At lunch time we would cluster back onto the school bus and dig deep into grease-spotted brown paper bags for tuna salad sandwiches and crisp dill pickles. Then we would fall asleep with our heads bobbing on our partners’ shoulders on the long trip back to school. It was with these fond memories I entered the Seattle Art Museum to view the King Tut Exhibition.

This trip to the museum was very similar to my grade school experience. I went to the museum with a large group, the Idaho Marching Band, and we got there by bus. We didn’t have to go in pairs, but did shuffle quietly through the galleries and ooh and ah at the exhibitions. Instead of paying only $1 to see the exhibit and wait in the gargantuan lines, admission was $4 per person, and we filed right in at 7 a.m. without waiting in line. There were no cameras or large bags allowed inside, and a woman carefully, but in a friendly manner, looked at everyone as they came in. One girl was asked to get rid of her chewing gum before entering the museum. Once inside the exhibit, you can leave, but then can’t get back in. At 7 in the morning, after a wild and crazy Saturday night, that is a very frightening thought.

The exhibit was arranged in rooms corresponding to the rooms in the tomb. Articles shown in the first room were articles found in the first part of the tomb. Each artifact was in a plexiglass case mounted on a dark square column. Descriptions of the artifact were on all four sides of the case. Wherever you were standing, you could read about the artifact.

There were five rooms in the exhibit representing the five rooms in King Tut’s tomb. The walls were adorned with large black and white pictures and descriptions of what was in the rooms when they were discovered. Some of the pictures contained quotes from the tomb’s discoverer.

On exhibit were pieces of jewelry, furniture, alabaster perfume and cosmetic jars, chests, statues and Tut’s death mask. The workmanship that went into the objects on display was incredible.

Most amazing of all the pieces on exhibit was Tut’s death mask, which covered his head and shoulders inside the ‘casket’. It was solid gold and inlaid with lapis lazuli and other stones.

I really could never say enough about the exhibit. It was overwhelming in its beauty and the simplicity of its lay-out in the museum.

This trip to the museum ended pretty much the same way as my grade school trip did, too. The entire band went to breakfast at the museum’s restaurant. Then we all piled back onto the bus and fell asleep on the way to the King Dome to practice for the Seahawk game.
Up With People dances its way across nation, into people's hearts

Up With People, a fast-moving musical variety group, will be performing Monday at 8 p.m. in the Lewiston High School Gym. Ticket prices are $4 for adults, $3 for students and $2 for children under 8 years.

The 100-person cast performs a two-hour show and will be available after the performance for questions about joining the group. Any student 18-25 years of age can join Up With People.

Last year, five University of Idaho students, Scott Cooper, Cindy Ball, Trudi Zimmerman, Gloria Stevenson and Cherie Lawrence participated in the group.

Former member Scott Cooper said he enjoyed his year traveling with the group. "I like putting a smile on people's faces and feeling the warmth of the audience," he said. Generally, a member stays with the group for one year, usually from July to July. For 3 to 5 percent stay in Up With People as staff members.

No special talent is required to join the group. "All that is needed is personality and the ability to get along with people," Cooper said. After talking with a cast member after a performance, an application can be filled out and tentative acceptance is made. Once final acceptance is given, the member goes to the group's national headquarters in Tucson, Ariz.

Members train for a few months, then hit the road. Cooper said he traveled through over 20 states and 12 foreign countries. Up With People members stay with families in each town in which they perform.

In addition to meeting people of different cultures and religions, cast members can also earn college credit. If so desired, Up With People does five benefit shows for children and old age homes, handicapped, deaf and blind groups.

Up With People is a nonprofit organization not affiliated with any religion. Persons interested in visiting members or joining Up With People are urged to talk to a cast member after their Lewiston performance.

Singing and dancing their way across the United States and the world, the 100-member group, Up With People, will make a stop in Lewiston Monday night.

Local KUID-FM show gets syndicated

KUID-FM's highly acclaimed classical music program, "A Man and His Music," featuring Dr. Floyd Peterson, professor of music, is being offered for national syndication through the National Federation of Community Broadcasters. Every non-commercial radio station in the country will now have a chance to air this program.

"A Man and His Music" first aired in February 1977 and is now broadcast every Sunday at 5 p.m. Peterson hosts and produces the show. C. Parker Van Hecke, KUID-FM station manager, is executive producer.

"A show good enough for syndication is not necessarily harder to produce," said Peterson. "It's an interesting challenge to try and do an off-the-cuff show like that, but it certainly has a wider audience potential."

"Right from the start, we knew we had a winning program," Van Hecke said. "The incredible musical knowledge of Floyd plus the high quality FM signal plus the need for fine arts programs. It deserves to be syndicated nationally."

Bring on the opener!

When a football club's 0-3 you wouldn't think there'd be much to get excited over. Yet without getting theatrical, I am excited about Idaho's home opener with Northern Arizona. Why?

There's a number of reasons. To begin with, can first year coach Jerry Davitch knit together a rag-tag offense which features a fairly strong backfield, but a yielding line? Will Idaho's defense hold up as well as they did under Washington State's blow? In short, can the Vandals defeat a club that is ranked No. 2 in the Big Sky and among the top ten in the Nation? Can't wait to find out.

Extra Point
by Scott Tudehope

Half the fun of football for me are the things associated with the sport. Although we won't have to fight off the chilly night air with liquid supplements, it's still a lot of fun trying to make it through "customs" with our beverages.

If this is your first Vandall game, don't go away at the half. Because that's when the U of I Band shares the field with the Vandallers. Both groups recently marched in the Seattle-Detroit game, televised on CBS-TV. They're super and really shouldn't be missed.

One change returning students will note is the cheerleaders. Gone are the "spud butt" uniforms, and in their place are the USC-style of dress. Skimpy but foxy, we're one step closer to the Cowettes.

For those of you who can't make it to the opener, today's issue might help. Somewhere in the sports section you should be able to find a running tally (so you can keep score while listening to it on the radio), and starting offensive lineup.

To make it as authentic as possible, spike your cola with your favorite poison, screams like hell when we score, and curse even louder when radio announcer Bob Curtis calls lineback Rick Linehan "Ron," or refers to Mike McCurdy's hometown as "Koo- na" instead of "Cue-na."

Like I said, I'm jacked about the opener!

Vandals look for upset

The University of Idaho Vandals will try to win their first game of the season and extend a two year dominance over the Lumberjacks of Northern Arizona Saturday at 7:10 p.m. in the Kibbie Dome.

This will be the first home game of the season for the Vandals who have yet to win a game in three attempts. We're not going to try anything new," stated Idaho head coach Jerry Davitch.

"but we are going to try to execute better."

Lumberjack head coach Joe Salem, echoed the same thoughts. "You can't change offensively. You just keep doing the same things that you have been, only you just try to improve each week. You'd have problems too if you'd just lost your quarterback and starting running backs. But we have been impressed with the Idaho defense."

The Vandals defense, which has played well all year, will try to stop the explosive Northern Arizona offense. Starting at tailback for Arizona will be the 5-11, 196 pound Sr. Allen Clark. Clark has rushed for a total of 1890 yards so far and only needs 343 more to break the existing NAV record for career yardage. Davitch calls Clark the best tailback he's faced all year. "Watch for a lot of sweeps to go his way."

Northern Arizona's strengths lie in their specialty teams and the fact that they don't make many mistakes offensively in their end of the field. If the Idaho defense can play like they have all year, and keep turnovers to a minimum, it should be an exciting game to watch.

In 1976, Idaho beat the Lumberjacks 22-12 spoiling their home-coming game. And in 1976, the Vandals defeated NAU 31-14 in the Kibbie Dome. "We haven't slacked up for this game at all," said Salem, "This is a crucial game for us. We are 3-0 now, but we haven't had the schedule Idaho has. We are expecting a good game.

"I can't tell you how much we're looking forward to playing at home this week," said Davitch. "I believe our players are looking forward to playing at home this week.

Women hit Oregon, Washington

The women's field hockey and volleyball teams are both on the road this weekend, the first to Oregon, the latter to Washington.

Field hockey opens its season at Willamette College in Oregon, in the Willamette Invitational Tournament. Others participating in the tournament are Willamette, George Fox, and Pacific Lutheran.

The team opens its home season next Wednesday, Oct. 4 against Washington State at 4 p.m.

The volleyball team is trying to regroup after last weekend's disappointing opening. They travel to Whistin for an invitational tournament Saturday.

The team loses five matches last Saturday, but played well, according to Coach Amanda Burk. "We lost two close contests, and I feel this was a toll on our women. We are a very skilled team. These women have the desire and the togetherness it takes to have a winning team, so I'm very optimistic about our future matches.

The team's next home match is Tuesday, Oct. 3 against Lewis-Clark State College, 4:30 p.m. in the WHEB large gym.

Kappa Sigma take golf tourney

The men's intramural golf tournament held Saturday, turned out 98 golfers. The winning team was the Kappa Sigmas, consisting of Pat Donnelly, Doug Nelson, Layne Dodson and Tim Gleason. Their total team points was 326.

The Delta Tau Delta team was a close second with a sum of 330 team points.

Individuals with the best scores were TMA 1-Tim Marineau, 75; KS—Pat Donnelly, 77; DTD—Jeff Hepworth, 77, and TC—Gary Bates, 77.

What do you really want in a stereo system? Isn't it just this: the best possible reproduction of music, from records and radio, at the lowest possible price? Then this system merits your careful consideration.

The key to its exceptional musicality is the new Advent/1 loudspeaker. It has the same amazingly accurate tonal balance, extended high frequency response and power handling ability as the larger, best-selling Advent Loudspeaker. In fact, it comes within a half octave of matching the bass performance of its big brother, at a far lower price.

But great speakers are not the whole story. This system is powered by the Yamaha CR-220 am/fm stereo receiver, with all the quality and features we've come to expect from Yamaha. Its craftsmanship, low distortion and reliability match those of the biggest, most expensive Yamaha models.

The natural completion of System 519 is the new Garrard GT 25P semi-automatic turntable. Its simplicity and elegant styling place it far ahead of all competitors. Particularly important is its low tonearm mass, which imposes no limitations on the wide-range Ortofon FF 15E cartridge.

"Friends Unlimited" offers guidance, sharing, satisfaction

by Susanne Neville-Smith

Can you spare three to four hours a week for an experience that could possibly render more than you put in? If so, Friends, Unlimited needs you.

"The Harvest of tomorrow is the product of the seeds you plant today" is the motto of Friends, Unlimited.

Brek Seiniger, director of Friends, Unlimited, says, "a good volunteer is someone who gets a lot out of being a Big Brother or Sister."

Volunteers are people over the age of 18 who have a reasonable sense of stability in their own lives and have a little time left over for a young boy or girl. Community organizations, senior citizens, students, working men and women and professionals can all serve as volunteers.

Friends, Unlimited is designed to provide a structure relationship for the young person by offering companionship, role modeling, exposure to community activities and guidance on a continuing basis. Time shared cooking, shopping, swimming, hiking, hunting, fishing or whatever the two siblings can dream up offers personal growth to both.

Jim Ackley, a senior in accounting at the U of I, is a Big Brother to Shawn Litoureune. Jim moved to Moscow from Fillmore, Oregon, and is attending school on a ROTC scholarship. "I've always wanted a little brother. I guess that's because I'm the youngest of three," said Jim.

Shawn is eight years old and in the Safeway and Moscow Community School. His mother is a student and works in the University also. Shawn has two sisters, creating "Brothers" last May.

Janis Whittinger is a senior in clothing and textile design and lives at French Hall. She became a Big Sister a month ago to Sandi Jorden.

Having always had a little sister, Janis found the thought appealing and applied at Friends, Unlimited. Janis and Sandi have gone swimming, bowling, and on a picnic. Their latest adventure was observing the Barbara Mullins art show at the SUB.

Sandi Jorden is nine and attends school at McDonald. Her mother is employed by the University and Sandi has two brothers.

When Sandi was asked what she had enjoyed most of all the things she had done with Janis, she replied, "oh, just everything!"

To become a Big Brother of Sister, drop by the Friends, Unlimited office on the second floor of the Latah County Courthouse, or call 882-7562 and talk with Brek Seiniger about arranging an interview.

After the interview the volunteer is matched with a young person who shares some similar interests. Then a joint interview is held where they meet each other and arrange for further contact.

Volunteers usually commit themselves for at least a year to insure a continuing, dependable relationship.

Third and Main town meeting discusses parking garage, crafts park

by Sandi Stocki

Constructing a downtown parking garage, increasing cultural aspects in the central business district and deciding the use of vacated buildings were among the main citizen concerns at the 3rd and Main town meeting Wednesday.

About 200 residents attended the open mike session designed to let everyone in the community direct the fate of downtown.

Merchants, landowners and students discussed what they need and want in Moscow.

"The major decision tonight is the parking garage," said student Stephanie Gilman. "Spending a million dollars on a parking garage is a waste, I don't want it," she said. She added that the city council will vote Monday night on whether to spend $1.5 million on a parking garage.

Sam Widell, director of the law firm, said that the proposal for a parking garage must be in by Oct. 6.

"I have never had any trouble parking," said Sandi Widell, Palouse. Widell said he enjoys the stroll up and down Main St. and doesn't mind walking a few blocks.

But Ron Nelson, speaking for the Moscow Downtown Retail Association, said he supports the parking structure. Nelson said the merchants are concerned there isn't enough customer parking area. Lack of parking convenience could mean lack of business.

Another citizen agreed that there isn't a lot of parking area in Moscow. He suggested that part of Spokane's downtown shopping success was due to two parking complexes.

On a raise of hands, Ernest Hartung, the program moderator, estimated 40 percent of the people present were for the parking structure and 60 percent against the idea.

Concerned about the cultural growth of Moscow, George Driscoll, local blacksmith, said that the planning process has been concern for craft business. "If people will appreciate the human industry," he said. A crafts industrial park needs to be created, he said.

Stressing the importance of crafts, music and dance, Brian Driskill wants to retain the personal touches in downtown. "The town is nothing but a big family; when you separate it on the outskirts, it's gone," she said.

Many people spoke on what they think is the downtown idea. An allotment of each, encouraged more greenery and awnings on the walkways and a slower paced pedestrian area.

On the short range goals, everyone should be patient, said Jim Burns, a designer for the project. A use must be designed for buildings that are vacant or will be vacated downtown.

Burns asked what will happen to the old post office, where will the lens go, and where will a new school be located, and what will move into the area that are vacant.

Proposals include restoring brick buildings that are vacant, creating a community center, relocating the library closer to the Main St. and making Safeway a skating rink.

Many residents think it's a good idea to upgrade the alleys and provide public drinking fountains and restrooms.

For long range goals, patience was the message expressed by Mayor Don Mackin, Carl Kilsgard, chamber of commerce president, and Seiniger. "One of the biggest problems is that planning is slow and frustrating and people give up. It's important that owners and tenants on Main St. don't give up," said Mackin. Seiniger reminded the audience that Main St. is still a U.S. and state highway and until the state makes a decision we may be wasting money to reconstruct there.

City Council member Linda Pall reiterated the feelings of merchants, users, planners and residents that more people make there opinions known at council meetings and planning meetings for 3rd and Main.

You can make a difference, she said.
Health center funds psychologist

by N. K. Hofman

The Student Health Center has added a clinical psychologist to its staff this year. What this means is the Student Counseling Center can have five psychologists instead of four.

"The counseling center has been understaffed for some time," said Dr. Jim Morris, one of the center's psychologists. The funding from the health center for additional psychologist is "a response to that problem. It came as a result of the cooperation between us that has been going on for years."

"We have an excellent working relationship with the counseling center," said Dr. Robert Leonard, director of the Student Health Center. "We see the values of each other and we use each other. We know each other and we call each other. We use three-way referrals between the counseling center, the two psychiatrists who come in once a week, and the health center."

Recommendations from the Board of Regents meeting July 19-21 1978 proposed a $6.50 increase in student fees to help fund the new psychologist position and also to cover inflated personnel and utilities costs. This proposal is part of the administration's still undecided $29 fee increase.

"If people said, all right, cut back, I wouldn't cut out the psychologist," said Leonard. "How necessary are psychologists to the university?"

"This in part depends on your philosophy," said Leonard. "Once we have a student here, how much effort should we put into keeping him here, no matter what? I suppose something is faced with divorce or death in the family, or the fact that he doesn't know how to study or relate to people. These things can keep students from being a success in college. Is it our responsibility? In my opinion, yes."

"There's also a new state law: college facilities must be accessible to the handicapped. Does this apply to the psychologically handicapped? I think so," said Leonard.

"We can maintain some people who have problems in school now who would have had to leave a couple of years ago," said Morris. "We also work with people who are already doing well in school but want to do better."

"Much of our (increased) capability in dealing with emotional health problems is due to the improvement in expertise of both the health and the counseling services," said Morris.

"We couldn't be more pleased with the relationship we have with the health center. Adding a psychologist to our staff enables us to do more things," Morris said.

"We can expand our services a little more to help people who come to the Placement Center. Sometimes people come to the placement center and they don't know what to do. If they need career counseling, we can pick them up right then. The placement center doesn't have the capabilities for private counseling and testing that we have here," Morris continued.

The mutually-supportive relationship between the counseling center and the health center is such a good one that other colleges have asked for a demonstration of a model of it. Leonard said, Dr. Jim Morris and Hal Godwin of the counseling center and Dr. Donald Chin of the health center will present a paper, "Counseling and Medicine: a team approach to the treatment on emotional problems on campus" at a meeting of the Northwestern College Personnel Association.

Moscow immigrant June Young embraces new life

by Marty Trillhaase

One would expect people to be somewhat settled down by the time they reach their mid-fifties. The children are nearly grown by then and it seems time to take life a little easier.

June Young doesn't believe that. Last month, she joined the hundreds of new arrivals in Moscow. Young, at 54, is determined to assimilate.

June left Florida last month equipped with a desire for change. She faces her new world with hope... and a characteristic smile.

The distance she has traveled amounts to more than miles. Florida is vastly different in many major respects. June represents a new breed of Idahoan. Like most western states, Idaho is experiencing some of the most drastic growth in its history. Boise alone is rated as one of the fastest growing cities in the nation.

In that respect, Florida and Idaho share a quality: They owe their growing numbers to people like June.

Aside from that, June couldn't have chosen any place as different. Florida is comprised of an older population. June chose a college town for her new home.

Easterners tend to be more insensitive to others, June said. Westerners, on the other hand, are more outgoing, she said.

These are not new reflections. One of the first aspects of the west noticed by transplanted easterners is the general friendliness of its people.

While not a sociologist, June is getting a first hand look at the locals. And she set out to do it through her new work—the art of waitressing.

Her experience with a large segment of Moscow society is vast, however. As a mother of six, June is no stranger to young people. And she says she particularly enjoys their company.

"I like young people. You meet them easier and they're more outgoing," she said.

June also likes hard work. She must. She has a work schedule that would leave even the most ambitious among us breathless—two 40-hour a week jobs at Country Kitchen and University Inn. A measure of exhaustion would be excusable.

But right off the bat you notice something about her. She supplies the usual trappings of a chain restaurant without becoming mechanical.

It's not easy to forget her. A cup of coffee brings the same attention as a major meal. She seems to be more interested in meeting you than in promoting Country Kitchen.

"I thought if I met five young people a night, that would be good," June said. But she has apparently caught on with her clientele—usually students who want to shirk the homework with a bottomless cup.

"Many now know me by my first name," June adds with delight.

Still that kind of response has surprised her. "It's different. Here people are asking why I'm doing this since it's such hard work," she noted.

And occasionally her new friends supply tips on prospective employment. "In Florida they could care less if you're working."

June is no stranger to rural America. She was raised in a small Pennsylvania town. In effect, moving to the Palouse is like completing an odyssey.

Requirement Number Four

“Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor, and do all your work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath to the Lord your God; in it you shall not do any work, you, or your son, or your daughter, your manservant, or your maidservant, or your cattle, or the stranger who is within your gates; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day; therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.”

Frisbee club organizes

“Frisbee anyone?” asks Steve Bonar, a student organizing a frisbee club for students, staff and faculty.

Any level “friz freak” can join, said Bonar. At present a novice teams up with an experienced thrower to learn. “We’re shooting for everyone to be able to come and have fun,” he said. At the first meeting 25 people attended.

Bonar emphasized playing not competing and plans to make a phone list of interested people so they can get together on their own and throw. Members of the club will give a 10 minute exhibition during half time at the Nov. 11 home football game, he said.

Bonar has contacted clubs in Seattle and Portland. If a team is organized we will play “ultimate frisbee” with these teams, he said. The game has two 25 minute non stop running halves and seven people play on a team at one time.

Practices are 1 p.m. Sunday in front of the Kibbie Dome, inside if it rains, and 9 p.m. Tuesday in the dome. If you have frisbees bring them to practice said Bonar.

Bose Model 360.

Funny, it doesn't look revolutionary. But it is. The Model 300 Sound System. Alpha System is the first stereo system that shows you, with unaltered sound the way music is made. The two-channel, three-speaker system produces a whole new concept in stereo sound. Bose won't disclose the specifics. In fact, they won't even say what the system is. All you'll have to do is listen. Or you can call us for more information, you'll want to listen anyway.
