1 percent backlash to jostle education

by Marty Trillhaase

The chairman of the Idaho Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee served notice to the State Board of Education Friday, predicting a difficult financial period and urging preparation.

State Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, noted the situation follows passage of the one percent initiative. That measure limits property tax rates to one percent of actual market value.

As a result of its approval by the voters last month, the state is facing estimated revenue losses of roughly $120 million. Since about 70 percent of state revenues go towards education, some financial backlash can be expected.

The Idaho legislature, which convenes next month, is responsible for enacting the measure.

Barker had just returned from a Denver meeting of the Education Commission of the States in which California’s Proposition 13 was studied. That measure, from which Idaho’s tax cutting bill was drawn, has caused several fiscal problems for Californian education, Barker said. But the state’s possession of a $5 billion surplus has allowed a somewhat gradual financial adjustment period, Barker said.

But that is not the case in Idaho, he said. While an estimated $19 million increase in state revenues is expected, Barker noted it will not offset funding losses to local governments resulting from one percent.

People expect the legislature to provide a financial cure-all to the problem, but that’s unrealistic, he said.

“There is no bail-out,” Barker said.

One possible method of allowing some leeway time would be to delay implementation of the initiative until Jan. 1, 1980. Barker said he was hopeful the legislature would follow that alternative. But he noted the Democratic caucus is pushing for a Jan. 1, 1979 implementation date.

Although the nature of the final draft of the initiative is at present unknown, Barker cautioned board members to prepare for difficulty.

“I would say we simply can’t afford what we have today without a tax increase,” Barker said. He added such a move could be political suicide.

And tampering with the initiative itself may trigger recall movements, Barker said.

Inaugurations on agenda

by Kathy Barnard

The ASUI Senate will inaugurate a new president and vice president and six newly-elected senators in its meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the SUB Chiefs Room.

The senate will also consider the appointments of a legislative liaison and two senators.

Freshman Dave Boone has been appointed to the ASUI legislative liaison position. Ramona Montoya and present senator Scott Fehrenbacher have been appointed to the two senate vacancies.

A bill appointing senators to specific living groups will also be considered.

If approved:
— Senate Linda DeMeyer will represent the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, Hays Hall, Delta Sigma Phi fraternity and Willis Sweet.
— Senator John Wani will represent Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and off campus students.
— Senator Victor Noble will represent Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Snow Hall, Beta Theta Pi fraternity and Houston Hall.
— Senator Margaret McManus will represent Alpha Phi Omega sorority, Chrisman Hall, Phi Kappa Tau fraternity, Sigma Nu fraternity and off campus students.
— Senator Jim Wright will represent Whitman Hall, Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Pi Beta Phi sorority and off campus students.
— Senator Suzanne Groff will represent Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, Shoup Hall, McCoy Hall and Farmhouse fraternity.
— Senator Tom Crossan will represent Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, Graham Hall, French Hall, and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.
— Senator Hugh Shaber will represent Forney Hall, Gray Loess Hall, Sigma Chi fraternity.

Regents approve fund drive

by Marty Trillhaase

BOISE—The Board of Regents Friday gave the green light to a modified funding plan for the proposed varsity center addition to the Kibbie Dome.

The plan relies totally on outside contributions. Hence, no student fees will be employed in funding the $1.7 million project.

The action was taken at the December regents meeting held on the Boise State University Campus.

Originally, the administration had suggested a $2 million project. Outside contributions were to have amounted to $1.2 million of that figure. The remaining $1 million was to have come from student fee shifts and portions of a proposed $10 student fee increase.

The varsity center addition concept has won the limited backing of students and their government. Students voted for the project in last month's ASUI election by the narrowest of margins, 704 yes to 697 no.

The ASUI senate vote was even tighter. The senate tied 5-5 with then-ASUI Vice-President Gerry Wright casting the tie breaker in the affirmative.

But financial pressures mounting from passage on the one percent initiative may have triggered a reevaluation by the administration.

"We've had a number of discussions on this one, and I have determined what we really need is authorization to proceed with a fund raising campaign," President Richard Gibb told the board.

But he added that doesn't preclude the administration from bringing up another funding plan at a later meeting.

Gibb said he may seek board approval for another plan which would rely somewhat on university income. An example of that is income received from developers of the University Mall. The mall located on the Pullman Highway sits on university land.

In other matters, the board approved a new class withdrawal policy aimed at tightening rules concerning withdrawal procedures.

Under the policy:

—Students may drop a class anytime during the first four weeks of a semester without receiving a "W" on their permanent records.

—Students may accumulate no more than 20 credits of "W"'s during their college careers.

—Those who wish to withdraw from classes and have reached the 20 credit limit may petition to the petitions committee of the Council of Academic Deans.

The regents also approved a new policy eliminating the distinction between "residency" and "extension" courses. The move places all courses under consistent academic standards.

What remains now is a reevaluation of "extension" courses by appropriate academic departments. Following that, those courses can be approved as regular courses.

The end result could amount to closer academic control over U of I courses offered away from campus.

The regents also approved the following:

—An updated U of I antidiscrimination policy and an updated affirmative action policy.

—An updated policy concerning privacy and handling of student records.

—An amendment to the ASUI constitution specifying impeachment procedures for elected officials. Students approved the measure last month.

—Authorization for the State Historical Society to request up to $44,000 in federal grants to complete masonry repairs to Memorial Gym. The building was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places and as such is eligible for Historic Matching Grant funds. The grant is on a 50 percent matching basis.

That's an unpleasant alternative, Barker noted. But he added, "I just have to tell you that with this situation, it's going to be tough."

He advised the board to adopt a tough stance toward cutting unnecessary costs.

That may have been reflected later in a move by the board to tie salary increases to President Jimmy Carter's anti-inflation guidelines. That means an average salary increase at the institutional level is not to exceed seven percent.
President-elect Howard eyes ASUI

Editor's note: This is the second part of an interview with ASUI President-elect Rick Howard. The third part is scheduled to be printed Friday.

by Kathy Barnard...

Argonaut: How much of the administration's proposed $29 fee increase do you support and why?

"I support exactly what the ASUI Senate voted on, but I think we all have a duty to support the majority decision of the senate. That's what they're there for, and that's what I'm gonna do. They've come out for the $2 intramurals and the $5 for women's intercollegiate athletics. They've come out and opposed the $6.50 for the student health center, the $5 for the SUB, and $5.50 for the student identification photo thing and the $10 for student facility use."

Argonaut: Would you support an ASUI fee increase, and do you see one coming in the next year?

"At this time I wouldn't. In light of several things that have gone on, I don't think the students want new taxes to get more input from students before I would support it. I feel that good communication we can work with the money we have for our departments."

Argonaut: Can the present level of service be maintained without an increase?

"No, I really don't think they can. There are some things we can do to make things a little more efficient. But just because of inflation and other costs that have arisen, we're going to lose some services. But I think we can work together to minimize that loss."

Argonaut: Which services will be cut?

"I don't want any one department to have more of a loss than any other. I think we'd try to cut proportionate to each department, but I'm sure it won't work out that way exactly. There'll be some that will be more hurt than others. It varies."

Argonaut: How do you view the relationship between the ASUI president and the ASUI departments and boards?

"I think the departments and boards are important because of their function in the business structure of the ASUI. I think the department heads should be given quite a bit of managerial control, because if you don't give them any control, don't let them work out their own ideas, they're not really going to do the job you want them to. They'll be more or less a puppet with no independent thinking. I want people to try out some new things and some new ideas."

"At the same time I want to really work with them as far as communication. I'd like to know before I read somewhere else about a problem. I also have my own ideas. I won't be saying to a department head 'Hey, I want you to do this.' But I'm going to sit down with them and say 'This is my idea. What do you think?'"

Argonaut: Do you feel you can handle criticism from your departments, especially the Argonaut and KUOI-FM?

ASUI Communications Board members each semester. Now all members are appointed spring semester. If passed, the bill provides for three board members to be appointed each spring, and four board members each fall.

In other business, the senate will consider transferring $1,320 from the newly established repair and replacement budget to the capital outlay portion of KUOI-FM's budget to purchase and build cabinetry for the station's control room.

Argonaut: What are the functions of the student media?

"I see several functions. First and foremost, it's a service. They need to report things that are going on. Criticism of me and the ASUI government is also important. Sometimes, it can get out of hand, but so can everything else. Another thing that is really important is promoting an image of the ASUI as a whole. We need to be careful that we don't promote a bad image wrongfully. If it's true, then criticism is justified. One of the functions of the Argonaut and KUOI is to be careful in promoting a bad image. It would also be helpful if a few more positive aspects of the ASUI were shown. I'm going to try to work with the Argonaut and KUOI, and just once in awhile, when I see something of interest come up say, 'This is going on. If you're interested, I'll give you some information and you can do what you want with it.'"

On the Council

The Council passed a resolution eliminating the "residence" requirement for academic departments. The resolution also approved a policy that is called "extension" courses. The policy would give regular credit to students who complete a "course" that was not approved as regular credit. The policy was recommended by the academic department and approved by the senate last month.

The Council also approved a resolution for the University of Kansas. It will bring the total that will be collected to the Memorial Union to about $6,400 in the spring of 1979. This was also approved by the National Register of Historic Places as eligible for the Kansas State Loan Grant fund."

The University ad hoc committee on the student behavior policy was asked to meet in the spring to discuss the "student behavior policy" that has been in operation for the past four years. The committee was asked to make recommendations to the senate on the "student behavior policy and handling procedures for immature students."

The senate also passed a resolution in favor of the department's $4,000 in the spring to complete the Academic Department Union to Memorial Union. The senate also approved the National Register of Historic Places as eligible for the Kansas State Loan Grant fund."

Get out of the sandbox

New ASU officials take office Wednesday, and, as the semester end approaches, it puts one in a reflective mood.

An old maxim states that those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it, and without discussing personalities, the history of the past administration shows a need for changes.

The relationship between the president and the senate was strained last spring.

Some departments have had difficulties with both the former president and the senate. Budgets were a major problem, as the senate shirked part of its responsibilities last spring, and the president, instead of acting with the senators and the department heads, made budget cuts in consultation with the administration. Last spring the senate played parliamentary games, and this fall the senate was afflicted with resolution fever.

All of this sounds like sandbox play, and one is often tempted to dismiss it as such—except the elected officials are playing with toys that affect student services and student pocketbooks.

Sandbox play does not provide effective representation for the students whom our elected officials profess to serve. The greatest favor the new officials could do for the students is to learn from their predecessors' mistakes, and recognize and carry out their responsibilities to the students instead of playing in the sandbox.

boise — The ship isn't sinking—yet.

But one could easily get the impression that Idaho government is generally out of whack. The state's high production and building education in particular has all the humor of a doomed Lusitania.

And it has the jitters of the voyager who has just seen a torpedo, launched from an unknown depth, headed in his direction.

The torpedo is, of course, the one percent initiative. In a move that could only be described as pure overkill, the Idaho voters approved the property tax slashing measure last month.

With less inspiration than it takes to fire a shotgun at a spider's web, the voters and sponsors of the initiative have unleashed a fiscal and constitutional disaster upon the state.

Several portions of the draft, drawn closely from California's infamous Proposition 13, remain so vague that there is some doubt about the legislature's ability to correct the defects.

The measure has also stirred great consternation among educators. Idaho spends roughly 70 percent of its budget for education. With estimated revenue losses of about $120 million, there seems to be no doubt that education will suffer.

Of course that was not the story before the election. Candidates from both sides of the fence were promising their support for education. They wooed worried voters with claims that education would not suffer at the hands of the tax revolt.

This led one Board of Education to support candidate last week that education had never been so popular.

Entertainment since changed. Call it what you will, but it appears that reality has set in. And while no one particularly likes the idea, education is facing some budget cuts.

At the moment, the best hope is a budget along the lines of this year's. That, of course, means the students stand to lose a substantial amount in spending power, amounting to $3 million at the University of Idaho, according to a series of contingency budgets prepared under the direction of Gov. John Evans.

Inflation and other increased costs have not been the target of such limits.

The Idaho Legislature, which has the ultimate responsibility of implementing the measure, is now showing signs of more conservatism. The Republicans exercise a 50-20 majority in the Idaho House of Representatives.

But the more "moderate" senate is also showing signs of more conservatism. State Sen. Speed Budge, R-Soda Springs, a popular right winger, was elected president pro tem of the senate last week over a more moderate Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls. High had co-chaired the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee for ten years.

Even the Democrats are showing signs of one percent fever. That caucus has proposed implementing the initiative on Jan. 1, 1979.

Should the Republicans second that move, educators would have roughly two months to prepare budgets following final legislative adjournment.

The Board of Education may simply be caught through the preparations for what may never happen. But consider the following:

—Reports came back from the board's November meeting in Gooding of increased student fees and imposing tuition. The proposed increase figure cited then by one reporter went as high as $200.

This month, the figure may have been downgraded to $40.

Justice asked

Editor, To the point: (Dec. 12) a small group of faculty and students will be asking for your support in Amnesty International's "Prisoner of Conscience Day" held in remembrance of our two dead prisoners, Jose Crespo and Beatrice Minta.

Amnesty International is a non-political organization dedicated to releasing people all over the world who have been unjustly detained and possibly tortured.

But like everything else, it takes money. Our expenses include a $200 contribution to our international center in London in order for them to continue research into the plight of these prisoners. In addition we write to prison wardens, influential government officials and others, working for the release of these men.

Please help us by giving a dollar or two. One of the objects of our collectors can be identified by their black and blue sign and green collecting cans. In addition, we will have booths manned in the SUB and Moscow Mall.

In the name of human rights, we thank you.

A priori complaint

Editor,

My colleague, Dr. Menkes, plays with words in a prizingly careless way for someone who teaches languages. She uses in different contexts words like "baby," "infant" and "child" when we speak of "fetus" or even "embrun". Soon, she will call an egg an elephant, a hat a bird, divorce a crime, sex between unmarried people a sin.

This is very important since we all agree that we should not kill and anti-abortionists should concentrate on this single point: is an embryo a human being? Is a brain a conscious mind when we generally agree that what makes man different from animals is his ability to think?

I personally think that we become human after birth in our relationship with other humans, but I am ready to be convinced that humankind comes earlier, between the time the sperm is ejaculated and birth, if serious evidence is offered instead of a priori.

Self-righteous

I have read the ubiquitous Christian messages and noted one in particular that stated: "The righteous is better than a non-existant." May I infer that the self-righteous shall get stufed?

Don’t push belief

Open letter to Pro-Life Organization,

Haven’t you carried this little (no) joke far enough? You tell the people that which repulse the people you claim to love. This is tough to take before I’ve even had my morning coffee. For being such strong followers of Jesus, I would think you would realize that your tactics are hardly the way to a better life. If you would close your Bible for a moment and open your eyes, perhaps you would see the light of the world as it really is. Then, if you maintain your views (which is fine with me and most people) you could at least be more constructive with your theses.

Like no fault insurance, the world would be impossibly better if one would pray for themselves and let their brothers and sisters do the same.

Conscience Day

I hope everyone this morning looks at the Amnesty International posters around campus and around Moscow. They contain two names deserving our attention—Jose Raul Crespo of Uruguay and Afica Mhlanga of Swaziland. Do not think of them simply as "prisoners." That designation means too distant, too abstract. Think of them as human beings imprisoned for their conscientious beliefs.

The whole point of Prisoner of Conscience Day is to give you a means of improving the future for particular, identifiable persons. Our efforts are aimed, not at achieving as yet unanswered questions, yet their respective governments have imprisoned them without charges. Simple justice is all we of Amnesty International ask.

Since justice is costly. Please "give a dollar for freedom" to aid the efforts of the local Amnesty chapter. With dedication of time and money we can possibly attain the release for Crespo and Mhlanga. So please don’t let us lose our ability to aid destitute families.

Spelling advice

Editor,

As you assume your new editorial duties, I strongly recommend that you employ a more stringent review of spelling details.

Examples: a $100 bag of "Columbian" would imply either weed grown in the Columbia River basin, or something from the times of Christopher Columbus, approximately 500 years ago. In the latter case, I would recommend removing the bag as an antique. If, however, you refer to weed originating from the South American country, it's spelling is Colombia. To a Colombian, it would be similar to saying America is the Yeowny Blyztyz uv Amayrycah. In your commentary on the Mormons, you propose a new spelling for evangelical. Ms. Sexton (same article) introduces nonexistent (sic).

Furthermore, you might suggest to your advertisers that correct English usage might stimulate more business. Example: Sound World declares, "This system provides the most control over...any product in its category." This alone would steer me away from the product.

Syntactically yours,

Geology Dept.

No tame Christ

Editor, In the novel, "The Lion, the Witch, and the War" by C.S. Lewis, one of the main characters is a lion names Aslan who represents Christ. In discussions of the lion, the remark is made "Is he safe?" Replies another, "Who said anything about being safe? Course he isn’t safe but he’s good. He’s good. He’s the King, I tell you." Aslan is not a tame lion, nor can we tame Jesus Christ. We cannot reduce the omnipotence to our own comfort and safety. More and more I think of the Christian life as the Grand Tension. (Tension as in a kite string, not headache.) On one side is the Real Person I am: redeemed by the Lord, loved by the Lord, but struggling with the remaining sin that’s still happening in the 24-hour segments of my life. This Real Person is not some hateful, wormlike person. I am beloved of God, a child of God’s family. Martin Luther explained his understanding of people who become Christians, “At the same time they are righteous, they are also sinners. They are like sick men in the care of a physician. They are sick in fact, but healthy in hope, in the fact that they are beginning to be healthy.” On the other side of this Grand Tension is the Almighty Will of God which Paul calls “the holy law.” This is all God is and all that he wants to be. It is the strong claim of God’s purpose for my life: the call to unite with his complete righteousness, or as Luther would say his complete healthiness.

To cut down on this tension in life, people try a var-

ty of solutions: One: Some try to diminish or tame the mighty claims of God to make themselves more comfortable. This has been done over and over, but it doesn’t work. Whenever the immensity of the claim is reduced, you also reduce the appeal. Jesus Christ has to be king regardless of the claim, or the risk.

Solution two is an attempt to find some way of increasing my own contribution to righteousness: If I could only grasp certain key secrets of life I could work my way up the ladder and out of the struggle, and in that way reduce the tension. This idea helps us explain the widespread but fading appeal of the book Jonathan Livingston Seagull; people don’t want to be simply a part of the pack. They want to be individuals. There’s nothing wrong with that; but when you leave the real world to do that, watch out. Even in the New Testament Era, there were people who wanted to make Christ into a super spirit, so that they could be super-spirit. Then they could bypass the troubles of ordinary people who had just discovered this spiritual break through. It should also be noted that the ethics taught in ILS are very thin. When Jonathan goes back to the other seagulls, he feels a basic contempt for their concreteness, therefore his ethics fail to Search and rescue course offered

Information on how to coordinate a search for a hiker, skier, mountain climber or other person lost in the out-of-doors will be given in a University of Idaho Continuing Education workshop Monday through Friday, Jan. 15 to 19.

The class is planned for county sheriffs, search and rescue coordinators, park rangers and others who are on the scene and in charge of a search and rescue mission. The course will stress the needed skills, including search theory, strategy, planning and utilization of resources.

The first four days of the course will be spent in the classroom. The fifth day will be spent in a field exercise with members of Latah County Search and Rescue units participating. Course participants will organize and manage a simulated search under winter base camp conditions.

Dr. Charles R. Stratton, associate professor of English and training officer for the Palouse/Clearwater Search and Rescue unit, will be the workshop leader.

Others teaching include Brooks Hanford, Washington State University; Sgt. Maj. Gene Nef, military science program; Edwin Anderson, Latah County search and rescue coordinator; and Nels Andersen, Idaho Civil Air Patrol.

Visiting instructors include Rick LaValla, president of the National Association for Search and Rescue and coordinator for search and rescue for the State of Washington, and Jim Brady, training specialist with the National Park Service Albright Training Academy.

The registration fee will be $110 before Dec. 29, $115 after that. The fee includes some meals, plus supplies and materials. Fees are refundable, except for a $5 service fee, if students withdraw before Dec. 29. After that, refunds will be made on a replacement basis only. Certified volunteers are eligible for a 10 percent discount.

For more information or to pre-register, contact the office of continuing education, 885-6486.

principle of creation, the ideal relationship between the creation of the universe and the Creator. It outlines the ideal relationship between "God and man, man and man, man and women, between people and creation," said Jacobson. "The first part defines the orderly stages of growth and the process of time that took part in the creation of the world. It has to do with both the visible substantial world and the invisible substantial world and the relationship between physical and spiritual things. The second part explains the fall of man or what we call the cause of crime. We believe this isn't the ideal world and at some point something happened where man fell away from God. It considers the root of sin or the original sin and explains it so we can clearly understand what went wrong with people. "God originally planned an ideal world, but there was a deviation. Within man we see a contradiction. We want to do good but we tend to do the opposite." By understanding the truth, you can have a stronger belief and that belief will give you power to live your life. Jesus said 'The truth will set you free.' Truth will make you free from the things which hold you back."

"That brings us to the third part of the principle, the principle of restoration or recreation. It is about the consummation of history in the last days, the mission of the Messiah, the mission of Christ 2000 years ago and why Christ has to come again."

Moon's followers believe Christ is coming to destroy evil, but the world will not be destroyed. "God loves unconditionally," said Jacobson. "We're all creations of God, so he can't stop loving us. God isn't going to destroy someone and send him to an eternal hell."

"A lot of people look at the Second Coming as the last days. We look at it like it's going to be the first days."

Although the Divine Principle is based on a "message of love," the Unification Church has received a lot of publicity and most of it negative.

Many parents, whose children have joined the Moonies, claim the training and conversion techniques of the church amount to brainwashing or mind control, according to national publications. The parents say the individual is robbed of his free will so voluntary acceptance of the church is not possible.

But Jacobson draws a broad line between "brainwashing" and the methods of religious instruction employed by the church.

"Our workshops and seminars are all set up for teaching and lecturing. We do that as many ways as we can. Some people join our church by listening to tapes and some join through spiritual experiences and are guided to it."

"I think people are always afraid of the unknown—of something new. For lack of understanding, lack of a better word, they call it brainwashing. It doesn't anger me, but I think it's sad that people are so quick to jump on the bandwagon and spread that kind of rumor. But I'm sure history will be the judge."

In an interview with Newsweek International, Moon said, "Many young people are neglected—they're thirsty for love. So they become followers and members of our family. Some parents feel jealous and others have no opposition except for the fact that their sons and daughters are following me, someone who comes from Korea."
Regents accept $800,000 in grants

The University of Idaho Board of Regents accepted $800,298 in grants and awards to the university at its meeting in Boise Friday.

Among them was a grant of $168,814 from the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare to the radio-television department for educational broadcasting facilities; a grant of $3,799 also to the radio-television department from the Idaho Commission on Arts to produce a film entitled "Snowangel"; and a grant of $19,630 from General Motors Corp. to the mechanical engineering department for a project to study the feasibility of using fiber-reinforced plastics in automobiles.

The larger grant to the radio-television department will enable KUID-TV to expand its production facilities and provide more local programming, said Art Hook, general manager of KUID-TV and FM.

Among the equipment to be purchased under the grant are two one-inch video tape machines and two TV cameras with field capability. The video tape recorders will allow the station to delay and rearrange network programming more to the station's scheduling advantage, Hook said.

Using the arts commission grant, KUID-TV is adapting for television the one-act Broadway play, "Snowangel," written by Lewis John Carlino. The TV version, filmed on location in the old Congress Hotel in Palouse, Wash., stars Maggie O'Donnell and Bruce Gooch in the lead roles.

The show is directed and produced by Alan Bell, KUID producer, and Judy Dickerson, a 1978 theatre arts graduate from Boise. Last spring, Dickerson directed a student production of the play, which also starred Maggie O'Donnell.

O'Donnell is a junior theatre arts major from Williston, N.D. Gooch, a 1976 theatre arts graduate originally from Uniontown, Wash., performs with the Oregon Shakespeare Festival at Ashland, Ore.

The project to study the use of reinforced plastics in automobiles is directed by Dr. Ron Gibson, associate professor of mechanical engineering and engineering science.

The purpose of the project is to characterize vibration response in fiber-reinforced plastics in cars," he said.

Government guidelines on gas mileage have prompted the increased use of fiber-reinforced plastics in car bodies in an effort to cut down on the car's weight, Gibson said.

All testing materials will be supplied by general motors.

This phase of the experiment will test the plastics under room conditions. Gibson hopes later to test the plastics under various environmental conditions.

Civil engineer Hall retires after 31 years

After a 31-year career teaching structural design courses, Dr. Bruce Hall, a 1956 aerospace engineering graduate of the University of Idaho, has been chosen as a member of the Idaho Institute of Steel Construction.

He also served on National Science Foundation panels selecting grant proposals for funding. He twice served as panel chairman.

"Keeping up-to-date" was a theme of Hall's teaching career. Not only did he strive to keep his course materials current, he also was very active in giving short courses for professionals around Idaho which aimed to keep them up-to-date, he said. Letters received by the engineering college described the continuing education courses as "thorough," "logical" and "of great benefit."

While studying for his bachelor of science degree at what is now Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Hall was best known as a musician. While a sophomore he was chosen as trombone soloist for the Intercollegiate Band which drew members from five major colleges.

Hall served the Idaho chapter of Phi Kappa Phi as secretary for three years and also was vice president, president and a board member. On the board of directors of the Moscow Junior Rodeo Association for many years he also was advisor for the U of I Rodeo Team.

He and his wife Rosalyn have been active as dancers and officers in the 249er Elks' Dance Club. They plan to relax and enjoy their ranch home which "Frosty" designed and built 12 miles north of Moscow.

Aliens must report addresses

All aliens in the United States, except a few diplomats and accredited members of certain international organizations must report their addresses to the government each January.

The card for this purpose is available at any post office or office of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service. After filling it out, place a postage stamp on the reverse of this card and drop the card in any mailbox. Parents or guardians are required to submit reports for alien children under 14 years of age.
Gymnasts split meet

In their season opener, Idaho women gymnasts defeated Seattle University but fell to Spokane Community College Saturday afternoon in a triangular meet at Moscow.

"I feel this meet was very important for our women," coach Sheri Steffen said. "They now have their taste of competition and I feel they have developed a confidence in their ability."

The Idaho women scored 95.95 team points to Seattle University's 90.0 and SCCC's 106.75. Sue Williams, a sophomore from Boise took fourth place in all-around competition, while Cindy Bidart, a Winnemucca sophomore, took fifth. Sixth went to Lois Parks, a sophomore from Moscow.

Williams took fourth on the vault with 7.1. Parks took second on the bars with 5.45 and Bidart was second in floor exercise with 7.45. The women also took team honors in floor exercise with 28.6 points.

Idaho will not see competition again until Jan. 13 when the team enters the Portland State Invitational.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

WSU next foe for Idaho cagers

Vandal women experienced both spectrums of basketball just as they defeated Pacific Lutheran University with ease, 55-42, but the University of Washington blew out the Vandal women 88-49 as Idaho took to the road last weekend.

Mary Heath scored 20 points and secured 12 rebounds to lead the Vandals over PLU. Karin Sobotta and Connie Otman scored 10 points each to help Heath in scoring. Sobotta, besides averaging 9.7 points a game, is leading the team in assists with 16. Heath is averaging 16 points a game to take top honors there.

Coach Tara VanDerveer was pleased with her team's effort against Pacific Lutheran. "We played a good defensive game," she said. "Our post people improved and played a good inside game."

Heath, again led the Vandals in scoring with 12 against Washington, but it wasn't enough to make a difference towards the outcome of the game. Washington pulled away early and won easily.

The next game for the Vandal women is Wednesday. They put their 2-1 record on the line against Washington State at 5:15 p.m.
Professional photos on show

A collection of photographs by professional photographers are on exhibit at the U of I in three locations now through Friday, Dec. 22.

From the travelling exhibit of the Professional Photographers of America, the pictures represent the best work submitted by members of the organization at its annual meeting this year. The work submitted is considered for point awards which count toward certification as a master photographer, an industry designation.

Members of the organization are either active studio owners or full-time photographic employees.

Ray Wilson, supervisor of the U of I Photo Center, who arranged for the display, said the effort is receiving financial assistance from the U of I School of Communications and the Associated Students of Idaho University Photography Bureau.

Wilson said the collection of 16-by-20 inch prints is largely in color and about 120 prints will be shown. “We are editing the collection, which is too large for our display space, to work which will show best in the light conditions in the display areas.” The photos are displayed in the Student Union Building, the School of Communication Building and in the basement of Art and Architecture South. They may be seen at any time during normal building hours.

Local literary magazine now available

Snapdragon, a literary magazine published with financial assistance from the University of Idaho library, English department, and School of Communications will have its third run starting this Friday. The magazine will be available for $1 at local bookstores.

This issue features poems by Karen Swenson and Olga Broumas, both of whom have recently read from their work on campus. The photo sections feature work by local resident Mary Banks and by Pullman photographer Belinda Starkie.

Snapdragon usually comments about half its space to the work of local residents, including students, teachers and staff at the university. The remainder of the issue is devoted to the best of the material submitted from writers or artists outside the area.

Submissions for the spring issue should be sent to Ron McFarland, c/o English Department, U of I, Moscow, Idaho 83843, beginning March 10. Deadline for submission will be April 10. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes should accompany all work. Poets should limit their contributions to five poems.

Deposit, termination rules change for Idaho utilities

Revised rules governing deposit and termination procedures of Idaho utilities became effective Dec. 1, according to information from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Significant points of the new rules for residential customers include:

- Deposits cannot be required based on a potential customer's location, income level, employment tenure, nature of occupation, commercial credit records, race, creed, sex, age, national origin, marital status or number of dependents;
- Deposits, when required, shall not exceed one-sixth of a reasonable estimate for one year's billing;
- 15 days must be allowed for payment of a bill except for proven hardships, when 30 days must be allowed;
- A termination notice must be mailed to the customer seven calendar days before the termination date;
- Termination cannot take place if the bill is less than $25 or two months' charges for service, whichever is less;
- Utilities cannot terminate service after noon Friday or any day before a legal state holiday;
- Utilities cannot terminate service Saturday, Sunday and legal state holidays.

The rules apply to all utilities, except for telephone companies, and their residential, non-residential, industrial, large commercial and irrigation customers.

RAPE
Before they lay down to sleep, the men of Sodom, both young and old, surrounded the house of Lot and asked him to come out. They ordered their men to bring Lot into his house that night. 'Bring them out,' they shouted, 'so that we have intercourse with them.'

Lot went out into the doorway to them, closed the door behind him and said, 'No, my friends, do not be so wicked. Look, I have two daughters, both virgins; let me bring them out to you, and you can do what you like with them.'
