Electricity opens a new era of ocean travel

Miraculously quiet and vibrationless, luxurious and swift, the new electrically operated S.S. Californian, largest American-built passenger ship, has opened a new era in ocean travel.

Electricity drives the Californian so efficiently that the fuel bill for the initial coast-to-coast trip was less than the Canal bill. Electricity mans the winches, lifts the head. Water, taken from the river, flows over the carbon, makes the steam, the electricity. In her first, second, and third class cabins and staterooms passengers have views of Southern California and the Pacific Coast through wide, unobstructed windows.

Comfortable accommodations found in the finest hotels. Complete electricity makes the Californian an engineering marvel and a commercial success; it is booked far in advance, a sister ship has just been launched, and another is under construction.

On sea or land, in every walk of life, electricity is in the van of progress. Undreamed of yesterday, the electrical ship is a symbol of the electrical industry's part in modern civilization and a prophecy of even greater accomplishment.
