GRID TEAMS WILL PUT AWAY TOGS ON THANKSGIVING DAY
Conference Race Ends With U. S. C. Are California Unbeaten

WASHINGTON MEETS W. S. C. While Oregon Fices U. C. L. A. On Coast

Concerned Students End Three Day Football Frenzy in the West

MOSQUY—Three football teams from the Pacific coast have ended their schedules for the season and will give no more games in 1934.

U. S. C. beat California Saturday, 10 to 0, before 16,000 fans in Los Angeles. This win enabled the Trojans to beat Cal, end their schedule, and clinch their unbeaten record. It was the first time in 12 years that U. S. C. has blanked Cal in Los Angeles. Oregon, who was to meet UCLA next week, and Washington met in Seattle.

Washington puts a sharp end to its season with a 27 to 0 upset over Oregon, and the game was moved to Seattle from Lawrence Field because of rain on the coast.

The weather on the coast was much improved from the week before, and the fans turned out in fairly large numbers to cheer on their teams. The dust storms which have been plaguing the state for several weeks were not in evidence at the football game.

Washington beat Oregon, 27 to 0, receiving its second consecutive win in as many games. The last time that the U of W. has won two straight games was in 1910. Oregon, which is a school of the rapidly improving order, played well and fought unmercifully.

JASON'S JOTTINGS

If you have been on the campus, a big sign to this effect has been placed before the entrance of the main hall of the university. It is to be seen all over the campus, and it is visible to all who pass through the main gates. This sign reads: "Enter at your own risk."

The sign was put up by the authorities as a measure of precaution, but its effectiveness is questionable. The students are not very happy about it, and many of them feel that it is an unnecessary interference with their freedom of movement.

On the other hand, some students feel that the sign is necessary, as it has helped to prevent accidents in recent weeks. A number of students have been injured while trying to pass through the main gates, and the sign has been credited with helping to reduce the number of accidents.

The authorities are likely to continue to enforce the sign, as it has been effective in preventing accidents. However, some students feel that it is an unnecessary interference with their freedom of movement, and they are likely to continue to try to pass through the main gates despite the sign.

Despite the controversy, the sign has been effective in preventing accidents, and it is likely to be kept in place for the foreseeable future.
