The Idaho team's only misfortune was the fact that the Idaho players never proved too much for the Bears. In the first half, Idaho built up a 1-0 lead, but was unable to score in the second half.

Impromptu Dance Given
By Houses Armistice Day

The holiday spirit invaded the campus over Armistice Day, and those students who did not go home, were entertained by the various social groups of the university, with homey dances and informal parties everywhere.

No dances were scheduled for this week, but, late last night, the calendar was at last released to the student body, and the notices were distributed to the fraternity houses and the dormitories, at once.

All arrangements were made for the evening. As usual, the activities were planned by the social secretaries of each of the fraternities and the sororities, under the guidance of Mr. W. R. Whitney, the director of the social life of the university.

The festivities were observed with dancing, and the students were free to go where they chose, and join in the fun wherever they found the social groups.
