Here's The Reason

For many years every Argonaut editor has relentlessly attempted to increase the number of publications day-to-day. The turn has been unsuccessful. Former editors have tried to persuade the graduate manager to come to the proposed change. Some have even pleaded with the executive board, trying to prove the necessity of having three papers a week. The faculty and the Idaho is the only Pacific Coast school producing only two issues a week, and by attempting to show where the advertising would go. The additional issue.

It is true that every Pacific Coast school has Idaho and Washington State has dailies. The latter school supports the tri-weekly—what a school of the magnitude should do. We have come to our Tuesday and Friday issues struggling (sometimes in vain) to keep the news from being concealed by propaganda medium. A bulletin board for future events, and a chronicle of dead letters. The schools, particularly the University of Oregon, can support a going daily newspaper. The students there, this year this is practically the same as occurs in number. Eugene is larger than Moscow. But the total advertising for five issues in the Emerald will hardly exceed the total in the Argonaut's two issues.

One big reason the Argonaut has never increased its publication dates is the fact that Moscow, a town of less than 1,000 inhabitants, is overrun with publications—city, university, and high school. Though we might support the idea, two issues a week the idea involved should be too great to attempt a change. Right now there are at least 10 university publications depending on a large amount of local merchants to "see them through." The Idaho Miner was added the list by汾 competing in the different departments in the university have their own papers or magazines.

We are not for the fact that the students do an immeasurably large volume of business with the Moscow merchants, and these newspaper houses would have the right to cut down their advertising. Someday, if the situation becomes worse, probably will be the result.

But the situation as it stands, is reason enough for our coming to a two-week publication, and thus the humiliation of university students and staff members. We are not asking that any of these publications cease existence and leave rooms for another issue of the Argonaut, we are asking the students to cut down their semi-weekly publication. We did not think a semi-weekly, but we cannot help recognizing the intolerable situation existing now. Perhaps someday under a new plan for financing the Argonaut, the wish will come true and we will have in the "baylor" newspaper of the conference.

No Loose Ends

The tobacco does not spoil out

Every Lucky Strike is made from the finest tobacco and only the best leaves. Not the top leaves—because they are under-developed—not the bottom leaves—because they are under-developed. These leaves are not used for Lucky Strike because they are inferior in quality. They grow close to the ground, and are tough, coarse, and almost woody. The center leaves are the mildest leaves, for which farmers are paid higher prices. Only these leaves are used in making Lucky Strikes. The full-packed cigarette—so round, so firm—from loose ends. That’s why Lucky Strikes draw easily, burn evenly. And you get more enjoyment for your money with Lucky Strikes. For more enjoyment, size, and economy, ask for Lucky Strikes—only 10 cents for 12.
