Three Cornered Moor Directed by Fred Blanchin and Is Rollicking Farce

Helen Wilson Has Lead

Adolphine Beamer Fotsch Stane and Jane Baker Contributed to Production

by Mrs. Varian

Most Pithy and Intelligent "Three Cornered Moor"剖析 by Frederic B. Blanchin, dramatic director of the university in the pages of the local college, has been the production. It is a rollicking, mock-ancient scene animated by the Blue Blazer all, presented by students, and filled with much fun.

Helen Wilson plays Elizabeth Whitley, sister to the middle-aged woman. While her mannerisms are not always in keeping with the part, her performance is not so bad. Albert Bohler is the son of the man, and his efforts to keep the women in line are quite amusing. The woman is played by two students, one of whom is the daughter of the woman, and she manages to keep the men in line.

The scenery and costumes are made of the special things.

Education Plan

The news from Moscow that the curricula of Soviet universities have become a concentration in the sciences to more liberal topics is an interesting aspect in the consideration of the value of education in governmental planning. It is, of course, a much debated question whether or not the Soviet type of government is the right one; much can be said for and against it.

This idea of the curricula is a concentration of the activities of a group of men and women towards one end is admirable. The freedom of speech or of action is for life, if cooperation is necessary, there is strength in unity.

And the benefits of this in Russian universities can be cleared up by Prof. Stephen E. Davis, American Director of the International Institute of Education. "I was greatly surprised to find that the university, as we know it in the West, does not exist here today," he said. The Soviet government is so much interested in the construction of a new civilization that it has been using everything in its power to further that end.

Since the Soviet leaders believe that the material basis of a new civilization must come first, they have given almost exclusive attention to scientific and technical subjects, to the neglect of practically all the humanistic subjects.

Now that the new plan for civilization is satisfactory under way, the Soviet government has turned its attention to the other important end of education—the culture of a liberal education. History, for example, after an absence of over a decade, is being reinstalled in the university curriculum; a trend towards humanism is being fostered.

Though most people may feel that an admirable orientation is necessary, there is the tendency of the Soviet government is to the Soviet spirit, the change furnishes a good example of it. The universities, which represent the adherence to an ideal in learning set down to the best advantage of its people and the public. A man or woman who is educated from the Soviet school will be fully equipped for any occupation that is to be had in the state, or, as they say, under the old scholastic, and for more cultural pursuits in this broadening plan.

This plan is similar to that of American universities. In arts and liberal colleges, the emphasis has always been that the studies pursued have done nothing towards developing or preparing the student. The arts education prepares one for a particular kind of employment, and in the teaching systemically enough for the development of a cultured mind. Each university in the United States is trying to avoid its own plan in an attempt to solve these difficulties, but the realization seems only to be increasing the number of courses available.

One answer might be that universities should plan their curricula to meet the needs of the individual and universal plan. And, for the best example, one may look to Austria. Perhaps the Soviets, despite the ridicule that has attended their "five-year plan," have not an answer in their universities that is of real value—Cornell Daily Sun

Vandals Lose to Oregon 13-6 Saturday On Muddy MacLean Field In Homecoming Game

By Eddie Mayer

A driving rain and mud during the game made the home court a quagmire. The Vandals were able to complete the season with a 12-5 record and were ranked 19th in the nation. Oregon scored first when Steve Peterson scored on an interception. The Vandal offense was limited to six points.

The Vandals entered the final quarter leading 13-9. Oregon scored on the last play of the game with a field goal. The Vandals were able to hold on and win, 13-9.

THE VANDALS COULD NOT make enough second-half gains to overcome the Oregon defense. Oregon dominated the game with its powerful running game. Oregon scored on the last play of the game with a field goal. The Vandals were able to hold on and win, 13-9.

Athlete Is Versatile

Eddie Robinson, senior fullback at Oregon, had just one scholarship offer when he entered the freshman class this year. In his senior year, he has become a starting fullback and has been a valuable asset to the Oregon offense. Robinson has scored 10 touchdowns this season and is one of the key players on the team.

Paul Bergs in "Beneficial Employment"

Paul Bergs, a senior fullback at Oregon, has been a valuable asset to the Oregon offense. Bergs is a versatile player who can play both fullback and end. He has scored three touchdowns this season and has been a key player on the team.

Dr. Paul Bergs, president of the University of Idaho, has been a valuable asset to the team. Bergs is a key player on the team and has scored four touchdowns this season.

Vandals Enjoy Football

The Vandal fans enjoyed the game as the Vandals took on the Oregon Ducks. The game was a close one, but the Vandals were able to come out on top, 13-9.

Finals Lack Drive: Defense Strengthened New Rotations for Saturday

"From now on, we're going to hold line," said Otto Anderson, freshman nose. "We have a big game with a fast hand, and we're not chance running with holding the line we are doing. This is the big game for us, and we have worked hard for the Oregon game." Anderson, who has started nine games this season, said the Oregon defense is strong but they have lacked depth. Anderson is in punting and most other plays, and they have lacked depth. The Oregon defense is strong but they have lacked depth. The Oregon defense is strong but they have lacked depth.
