ASUI Attorney General resigns position effective semester's end

By TRACIE BRUNO
Assistant Editor

Despite the allegations to the contrary, ASUI President J. Richard Rock says his decision to resign his position as ASUI General was not influenced by the recent events in Brazil.

"I don't believe that the attorney general's position is a powerful one," Rock said. "I have never held that position nor do I believe that the title of attorney general is a powerful one." Rock said that he has never held the position of attorney general and that the title of attorney general is not powerful.

UI snow removal team tries to catch up

By CHRIS YOUNG
Staff Writer

At last the sun is beginning to clear snow and ice from campus sidewalks—or is it?
Actually, the driving force behind snow removal on campus is not Mother Nature, but the UI facility management team.
Ken White, Deputy Director of Facility Management, has been moving people from any available department to help clear the sidewalks and parking lots of snow. "Right now we're concentrating on ice melting in the parking lots, the handicap spaces in particular," he said.
White explained the reason for the large ice build-up around campus. "The biggest problem we had last week was the weather pattern," White said. "When it snowed, it wasn't deep enough to plow everything, so we concentrated on the sidewalks. We didn't get to the parking lots and roads, so they're in pretty bad shape."
Still, the sidewalks are in almost as dire straights as the parking lots. Hundreds of footprints are frozen into the icy cover that blankets campus sidewalks. "First it snowed, and then we had some rain on top of that, and it hasn't warmed up enough to melt off the ice, so it's a bit inconvenient," White said. "Inconvenient is right, but also potentially dangerous. No one has suffered any permanent damage from the icy sidewalks since Thanksgiving break."
Well, we've had a few calls, but so far we haven't had any injuries," White said. "When we get complaints about problem areas, we just try to get more gravel in those spots."
Students still have a long season ahead of them, though. White and his staff are looking forward to making it as easy as possible. "We're gearing up for the rest of the winter, and I think we're ready," White said.
Library promises less construction, a quiet space to study for finals

By DAVID JACKSON
Staff Writer

Traditionally, students head to the library during dead week in hopes of getting some last minute studying done. However, due to ongoing construction, the library has been sparsely used for the last month.

Despite construction distractions, the library will remain a study haven during these crucial last two weeks. According to Ron Brown, Dean of Library Services, the library will seek to accommodate any student wishing to find a quiet place to prepare for finals.

"There is no major construction scheduled between now and the end of finals week," he said. "There will be some details work, like guys painting, but there won't be any major noise for students to study around.

"If anybody has been in the library lately, they know what kind of shape it's in. With different teams being taken from the old section to the new section every day it is difficult to find anything. However, there is construction everywhere to be a problem for people trying to concentrate on their studies.

"We have the big study area on the third floor of the old section for studying, and we have tables and chairs set up all over the place," he said. "Things are definitely jumbled around, but we have as many study areas as we did before. They are just in different areas and are not as cluttered.

In addition to the study areas in the old part of the library, Force said they were trying to get a student lounge set up in the new section in time for the rush of students.

"The new student lounge will be open 24 hours a day," he said. "Right now we are trying to get furniture in there so the students can access it. We'll see what happens.

Students, who have remained in the library during the construction don't seem worried about studying some distraction work.

"There are more who just need to be done," said student leader Talboy. "They seem more than anything else is a distraction to me.

Talboy commented that Rock's act and his own response reached a personal level.

"I am, however, happy that things have been resolved. I commend Rock for his work over the years as an ASUI senator and I believe he will be as effective an executive," Talboy said.

In Sunday's meeting Rock commended Talboy for actively and energetically addressing, with his various committees, problems which he felt needed further investigation.

"Coming from Hayden Lake, an area with a history of intolerance, I am especially aware of and sensitive about discrimination," Rock said.

Helpful hints for those serious about acing finals

By CHRIS MILLER
Staff Writer

There is hope for students who crashed and burned on last semester’s finals. But they are already behind and need to get their rear-in-gear right now.

"Last week was the time to start preparing for finals," said Judy Wallins, Director of the Tutoring and Academic Assistance Center (TAAC). "The most common mistake is that people try to make up everything on the final... and what they do is end up worse off."

Wallins listed several trouble signs for students and gave some ways to combat those potential problems.

- Boredom, exhaustion, procrastination, negative thinking, and blaming the circumstances for being behind are all signs that should alert students to end-of-semester problems, especially finals, Wallins said.

- To attack the last couple weeks of the semester in a winning way, students should start making lists of what needs to be done and when. "Even if you’re not a list-maker, this is the time to do it," Wallins said. "Making lists and having a strategy, not just muddling through, is very important."

Wallins suggested four "super-duper" study lists:

- Assess progress in each class realistically and determine how much can actually be accomplished. Some finals will not affect a student’s grade much unless it is either a serious "F" or an awesome "A."

Students should concentrate on finals that will have a greater impact on their grade. "If student’s can’t determine (where they stand) by their course grades, then they need to go talk to their teachers or TA," Wallins said.

- Clear-up all outside problems and prioritize tasks needed for final preparation. "Try not to make relationship decisions, or say "Oh no! I don’t have a summer job yet!," Wallins said. "But more of a problem is the day to day habits that we blow time on, like T.V."

- Freshman should also be wary of homesickness that can undermine preparations for finals.

- Energize by getting eight hours of sleep a night on a regular schedule. Students should not change their sleep or diet habits until after finals are over. "If you drink two cups of coffee a day, don’t drink a pot a day during finals week. You’ll be too jumpy to think straight," Wallins said.

- Manage time better by completing an end-of-semester calendar. Know and keep deadlines for all assignments and reading, and hold daily scheduled reviews for classes that have comprehensive finals. Wallins stressed that lists are extremely important and help when things get rough.

Loping toward that big dreamland after graduation

Time flies when you’re having fun. It goes by pretty quick when you aren’t.

My main opinion for the Argonaut, so I’m breaking all of the rules.

I’m writing in first person and I’m going to get pretty personal, too.

This semester has been a true educational experience for me. I’ve learned a lot about human nature and the real world, even though I have been under the protective wing of academia.

But I’ve learned a lot as editor of this paper. Some lessons I could have done without. Some I wouldn’t trade for all of the degrees in higher education.

In January, Pete Corden, our current associate editor, will take over as editor-in-chief of the Argonaut. I wish Pete a lot of luck.

He will need it.

Pete has a lot of the necessary qualities that it takes to be a good editor. Pete is a good listener, he is level-headed and he is aggressively unoppable.

Pete will need those skills when he is receiving irate phone calls, nasty letters and cutting remarks. He will need to draw on his inner reserve when the administration disapproves of the staff. He is unmotivated or when students are on a bash the editor kick.

Pete is inheriting a dedicated and hard-working staff. Amy Granger, Shari Iretorn, Tracie Bruno, Loren Roberts, Doug Taylor and all of the staff writers have shown extraordinary commitment to this publication. All have put in exhaustive hours, as well as their hearts, minds, souls and sometimes even their blood.

The people returning next semester are, of course, strong-willed, caring and underappreciated. Pete will have the responsibility of channeling their energies and leading by example.

It is a responsibility he is well-equipped to handle.

To my critics and fans alike, I wish to say thank you. Thank you for challenging me. Thank you for supporting me. Thank you for making this semester one that I will never forget.

I have done my best to make the Argonaut an interesting, readable and informative newspaper. If I have succeeded, I share the credit with the staff. If I have failed, I gladly take the blame.

There are a few people who deserve individual recognition for their support. Some have simply offered a kind word. Others have given me a shoulder to cry on. To the following, I offer my undying gratitude:

I love and thank: Mom and Dad; Gram and Pop-pop; Carol Ann Sheaffer, Alice Winkler, the entire Madison and Singleton families, Jill Rossman, Sandra Haarsager, Roy Arwood, the folks at the Daily News, Fred Jensen, Richard Rock, Amy Anderson, Samantha “Kazee” Groom, Peter Hartiman, Chris Miller and finally J.P. Destinoph, the most recent addition to my fan club.

I wish the best of luck to Pete and the rest of the Argonaut crew. But I know they won’t need it. They have each other.

Justice can leave scars

Judge Wagner was wrong. I don’t usually watch “The People’s Court.” I’m too busy slapping my knees in the afternoon. I changed my mind as I flipped through my mysterious blonde female companion’s television schedule. Her description was the battle of the sexes. Neither side looked good.

I had learned a pretty boy, but that was before someone gave him a finger-length scar on his cheek. The scar is a scratch on the surface, but surface were all he had. It was hilarious watching them say four syllable words he probably only read in a book. He tried to make himself seem like a victim, but it was both stupid and mean. It didn’t help that the defendant was a woman.

While the plaintiff was trying to hide the fact he was anxious and stupid, the defendant was too stupid to know that she shouldn’t have continued.

Here’s what happened. He claimed he approached the defendant and two of her friends at a bar. He set down his beer and stretched out a conversation. One defense witness was from Venezuela. The plaintiff apparently regarded her as a pass at her. She asked if he knew where Venezuela is.

Be careful when labeling enemies

Humans have a curious fixation with naming things.

Look at a map of Latino County, or the state of Idaho, or the entire Pacific Northwest, and hundreds of names will leap out at you like flies off a hot skillet.

Towns, mountains, and streams have been named. Streets, parks and softball fields have been named. We have even given names to dirt roads that dead end out past the middle of nowhere.

“Paradise Creek” or what is left of it — Rivers through Moscow. That big lump of rock and pines that lies southeast of town is called “Tupper Butts.”

Potlatch, Pullman, the Rocky Mountains, Hells Canyon, the Palouse River, Reel, Cow Town, the Sawtooths, Bullalo, Second Glass. The whoms who name us are the objects that meet the eye. Even the names that burns millions of miles away are not immune to our urge.

There is nothing wrong with our infatuation with labeling.

At times it seems that someone who is a doctor is automatically assumed to be a white doctor. If a person is, say, Chinese and a doctor, the two words are joined together to clear things up.

And where is the consistency in ethnic labeling? The promoters of political correctness tell us it is no longer proper to refer to persons of sub-Saharan African descent as “black.”

In fact, some of the more politically correct members of society think it is a sin to use the word “black” anymore, since “African-American” is the officially approved label of choice. Which brings up an interesting problem. If using the word “black” is a sin now, was it also a no-no five years ago? And is it so, from whom do we seek forgiveness?

Racial and ethnic labels have a lot of company. Drop into casual conversation the fact that the business executive you have been asked to lunch with is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and you get a blank stare. But if you name the same person as an anti-war越战老兵, you are considered so charmingly radical that you become the去年的 must-have. Since we no longer have the option of being an “African-American,” what should we call ourselves?

JUDGE Item 5

It was. It was a bone of contention as to just how she said it, but both sides agreed that his response was something along the lines of: "Who cares? As long as you can find your way back. And if you can, why not do it right now?"

The defendant says during the course of making a pass at her friend, the plaintiff grabbed her friend's butt twice. Wagner asked the Venezia defense witnesses if that was true.

"What?" she asked.

"Did he make inappropriate and unwanted physical advances toward you?"

No response.

"Did he grab your behind?"

She was dazed for a moment, but she confused with the defendant and then proudly answered, "Twice times."

Excellent. I love the fact that a witness can speak in court, without an interpreter, against an American citizen, and not have a good enough grasp of the English language to be sure whether she is accusing someone of a crime, or having a hemorrhoid prescription filled.

The defendant said when she told the plaintiff to cut it out, he shouted at her. She claims they traded insults until he threw a beer bottle on the table and left.

They both agreed she picked up the beer and threw it at him. Then she picked up another (twice times) bottle and threw it at him. This time, she hit him with a war and some medical bills he didn't want to pay.

Wagner asked the defendant if she'd been drunk. She looked baffled. She thought it was perfectly normal to throw not just one, but two bottles at someone who is bothering her in a bar, and that it was especially appropriate when that person is already leaving.

She claimed that while she and her two friends had been there for a couple hours and had ordered some pitchers, she had only drank one beer. Right.

The decision seemed obvious in this sort of a situation. There were two conflicting stories and not much proof. He had a scar. But the defendant had admitted giving to him. He should at least entitled to reimbursement for her doctor's bills.

Wagner decided that since the defendant was a jerk, and since he told the woman to go back to her own country, then the defendant was one out of luck motherfucker.

I'm not defending his actions, but did he deserve a scar for it? And I don't think he deserved an unfair legal decision just so Wagner could jump on the latest politically correct bandwagon.

As usual, Doug Lowery ambushed the plaintiff. But this time, instead of sounding like just an idiot savant and stated his case better than I ever could.

"What if it had been a man who had thrown two bottles at a woman, for any reason, and scared her for life?" he asked.

"It's something to think about, isn't it?"

ENEMY Item 5

Talking about the last 10 minutes is a woman and the listener's attitude will change.

Words such as "bitchy" and "manipulative" may come to mind, whereas if the subject of the conversation was a male the listeners would think things like "hard-driving" or "ambitious." From where does this knock for labeling, and mislabeling, derive? Maybe it is a symptom of our need for enemies. Just as surely as we breathe, we need someone with whom we can compete.

Republicans need Democrats to blame for America's moral stagnation just as Democrats need Republicans to blame for the alliging economy. Catholics need Protestants, who need Moslems, who need Jews who need Catholics. We are going to heaven; they are going to hell. "Us" needs "Them."

Enemies are convenient excuses for us to fall back on when our lives don't go exactly as planned.

Late for work? Blame the idiot in the green Toyota who drove 15 miles below the speed limit but accelerated when you tried to pass. He'd be a good enemy.

Didn't get the job you applied for? If the person who got the job is black, or Indian, or a woman, or a Jew, or a cognation of the above, blame the person's skin color, sex or sexual preference.

Everyone has enemies. Talk about our New World Order is little more than a sweet attempt to ignore reality by refusing to accept the fact there are enemies everywhere.

Though the Soviet Union has been dismantled, we are far from living in a time of peace. The breakdown of the Shah has released ethnic aniomasities that had laid dormant for years. Armenians need Azerbaijanis, Serbians need Bosnians, Turks need Kurds.

And Vandals need Bromos. Pick your enemies wisely. It may be some time before the human race realizes we need each other for something besides convenient scapegoats.
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Zinser says campus recycling program is successful

Editor:
To the members of the University of Idaho community, I would like to say: "Thanks to you, it's working!" The UI Recycling Program is making a big dent in the solid waste which the university sends to the Latah County landfill. In Sep. 1990, the first year of our program, UI recycled 5,895 tons of paper, newspaper and cardboard. In Sep. 1991, our volume had increased to 21,872 tons! The goal of UI's "Five Rs" program is to reduce by 75 percent the amount of solid waste going to the landfill. To reach our goal, we must:

- Reduce the amount of garbage we create.
- Recycle everything possible.
- Remove hazardous and non-recyclable materials from our environment through careful use and disposal.
- Reduce wastes into new materials.
- Recover energy from what ever is left.

One of the strengths of UI's program is our ability to use our own refuse as fuel to heat campus buildings. Mixed paper waste includes non-recyclable products such as single-wall cardboard and glossy magazines. This low-grade waste is shredded, mixed with wood chips and burned in our wood-fired steam boiler. Though the program is still being tested, Facilities Management has purchased a paper shredder which tears the waste into small pieces and blows it into the wood chip silo to burn in the boiler. The primary reason our program is successful is your individual participation! Recycling containers for all materials are strategically placed around campus — in dormitories and cafeterias, near offices, in copy rooms, alongside computer stations and in many hallways. By using these containers for your paper and double-walled cardboard, glass, plastic and tin, you help keep our surface environment aesthetically clean and pleasing while at the same time preventing our landfills from overflowing and our ground water and air from becoming contaminated.

In addition to paper and aluminum cans, UI's recycling program needs your help in recycling books, office supplies, furniture, toner cartridges, video tapes and surplus building materials. If you must dispose of these materials, please call UI's recycling office at 885-6222 and have them picked up! That service is offered free of charge by our Department of Facilities Management.

All of us working together have made the Recycling Program a success. By continuing to be aware of the importance of our efforts, we can make an even greater impact. Keep up the good work!

Brink Hall by any other name is still Sweet

Editor;

Your Dec. 3 issue carried an interesting article concerning the names of campus buildings. We do not question the appropriateness of Brink Hall as a name for a distinctive campus building.

For the record, however, it should be noted that was not the original name of that imposing building. It was opened in 1936 as a state-of-the-art men’s dormitory housing some 200 students with an apartment on the second floor for the residing proctor and his wife. It was christened Willis Sweet Hall.

Willis Sweet came to Moscow from Vermont. He founded a newspaper in Moscow, was admitted to the bar in 1880 and subsequently appointed U.S. Attorney for the Territory of Idaho.

It was Willis Sweet who helped draft the act creating the University of Idaho. It was signed Jan. 30, 1889 after Sweet steered it through the last session of Idaho’s Territorial Legislature in 1888. It was Sweet who led the movement to create Idaho’s first university.

Another residence hall honors the name of Willis Sweet now, but he was first remembered with the honor in 1936. I know because I lived in the dorm!

Students recall happy holidays

By TANYA MADISON
Editor-in-Chief

Maltese family holidays are usually memorable if nothing else. One Christmas season my parents and I were stopped by police in Philadelphia because we looked like a family suspected of shooting a police officer.

For more family holidays however, the holidays are traditionally a time to reflect on the happy memories of the past. Here is what various students had to say about their happiest holiday memories.

Derrick Brown, ASUI vice president: "All of my Christmases have been really, really great. I guess the best one was the year I came home after my first year at college. I had been at the University of Nebraska and I didn't know anyone. All of my friends and family were there, it was like a reunion. I really appreciated my friends and family because I hadn't seen them for a semester."

Lori Congratelli, senior, spanish major: "One memory I have is of my grandfathers. We would always ask him what he wanted for Christmas and all he would say was that he wanted his two front teeth, because he wore dentures. We would always try to guess and see what he would like. It was a big game for us trying to guess what would be good."

That, and my husband Brandy, asked me to marry him the week before Christmas."

Brandon Brunis, Delta Chi: "My best Christmas was when me and my family traveled to Boulder, Colorado, to stay with cousins when I was about seven. I got in trouble cause I bent up my cousins. It was either on Christmas Eve or two days before Christmas. I stomped on his bare feet with my cowboy boots."

"I got into a lot of trouble and they told me that I wasn't going to get presents. I was crying and cried the whole time because I thought I wasn't going to get anything. They even took my presents out from under the tree and the whole nine yards. My folks locked me in the basement until 11 on Christmas Day and you know how little kids want to get up early on Christmas. They finally let me come up and said I could get something to eat."

"When I went into the living room, there was this huge deluxe race track. I tripped my pants. I was the happiest kid in the whole world cause I thought I wasn't going to get anything and then I got the best present ever."

Wee Neal, Kappa Sigma: "I'd have to say being home with my friends, partying and drinking beer."

Robin Kelley, Pi Beta Phi: "About four years ago we took a sleigh ride in Sun Valley complete with Clydesdales, a driver, wine, a good dinner, family and friends."

Wind Henderson, Vandal running back: "My best holidays were the ones I spent with my Grandmas in Philadelphia, Penn. I went every year and I miss that."

Suzanne Evans, junior, accounting major: "I was the first grandkid on my mom's side of the family. For my first Christmas, my grandparents put together a toy tree made of stuffed animals including a pink elephant and a reindeer on a surfboard."

"When I was 16, my grandma pulled out the toy tree and told me to pull out the ones I wanted. I got this huge bow full that I pull out every Christmas."

Rick Beck, ASUI President: "I remember one time we were staying at my grandparent's house. It was my mom, dad, sister and me. My sister woke me up at 3 a.m. and told me that Santa had come and that it was time to start opening packages."

"So we went downstairs and divvied up the presents. Angie went to go wake up mom and dad, but there was no way they were getting up. So we had to wait for them to wake up. But by the time they got up, we had fallen asleep by the tree."

Ryan Paton, yearbook editor: "I don't have a favorite Christmas memory. I hate Christmas."

Kelly Calp, senior, advertising major: "What I always remember is coming down the stairs in my pajamas, all excited to open my presents."
How to avoid having a Charlie Brown Christmas tree

By CHRIS MILLER
Staff Writer

It's the one time of the year that people bring a monstrously woody-stemmed plant into their homes and spend hours rearranging their furniture and decorating it with cute tinsel and strings of flashing lights. And consequently, people are willing to spend money and time finding the perfect Christmas tree.

"Each customer needs a different size and shape of tree," said Dave Hash, owner of Hash Tree Company. "If they have heavy ornaments they'll want a sturdy branched tree like the Noble Fir. If their tree will have garlands and bows they'll want a more symmetrical tree."

However, the two most important aspects of a perfect Christmas tree are freshness and fragrance said Karen French, owner of French Trees.

French said tree-hunters should be careful to buy fresh trees and stressed that customers should not buy trees right after Thanksgiving. The trees will lose their needles before Christmas and the customer will end up buying another tree.

"The early trees all come from the coast and aren't used to Idaho's climate. They'll lose their needles and the customer will end up right here to get another tree," French said. "The customer is just flat getting screwed."

Hash said tree-hunters should look for needles that are pliable and when squeezed give out their aroma and some moisture. Once the tree is selected, the base of the tree should be trimmed about one-half inch to let it soak up water better. A tree standing that holds water helps keep the tree fresh until Christmas.

French said she has a "special remedy that's strictly for my customers" that will prolong the life of a Christmas Tree. However, she said some stores sell tree preservatives that work almost as well.

Price is paramount for many tree-hunters and Hash said his goal is to "have a price range that fits everyone's budget and need." Hash trees range from $6.00 to $48.00 with an average of about $18.00.

There are several places in Moscow where Christmas celebrants can get their trees.

French Trees is located on Rosauer's parking lot and has a price range from $7.00 to $48.00. French Trees offers a wide selection of species, shape and size including "lots of apartment-sized trees."

Hash Tree Company has three places to find trees—a stand-in on the Palouse Empire Mall and Moscow Mall parking lots. The more adventurous tree-hunters can drive to Hash's Pinelton plantation where hunters can find and cut their own tree, ensuring freshness.

"St. Mary's Annual Christmas Tree, located on the Jeff's Food's parking lot offers the least expensive tree starting at $5.00. All the money made from sales goes to benefit St. Mary's school," said holiday shopper Leslie Carter.

Mom's own recipes for yummy holiday goodies

By TRACIE BRANO
Lifestyles Editor

With the holiday season fast approaching many of us are struggling through exams and have had little time to think about buying gifts and entertaining friends.

I called my mom, who is a fabulous cook, and asked her if she could help me out with the entertaining part. She agreed and sent me some of her favorite holiday recipes to help me make it through the season. And I must admit, I have personally tested all of these recipes and know for a fact they are tasty.

* Holiday Turtles: Grease cookie sheet and lay three pecans onto the sheet. Put one Kraft caramel candy on top of the pecans. Put caramel and pecans into the oven on low heat (about 225 degrees) until the caramel softens. It usually takes about 10 to 12 minutes. When the caramel becomes soft take out of the oven and press into pecans. Let cool. In a double boiler, melt 1 large chocolate bar at a half bar of Paraffin wax. Dip the caramel and pecans into the chocolate mixture.

* Apfeltoe: Soak two envelopes of Knox gelatin into a 1/2 cup of unsweetened cold apple sauce. Separately mix two cups sugar with 3 1/4 cup of unsweetened applebriss. Bring to a boil. Add soaked gelatin, stirring until completely dissolved. Boil 15 minutes stirring frequently. Add enough chopped nuts, and one teaspoon of vanilla. Put mixture into buttered pan and let stand in cool place over night. Cut into squares and roll into powdered sugar.

* Festive Fudge: Mix into a heavy two quart saucepan two cups of sugar, 2/3 cup evaporated milk, 11/2 regular marshmallows, 1/2 cup butter or margarine and a dash of salt. Cook, stirring constantly over medium heat to a boil. Boil mixture for five minutes and then take off heat. Stir in until completely melted a six ounce package (1/2 cup) of semi-sweet chocolate pieces. Stir in one cup of nuts and one teaspoon of vanilla. Spread into a buttered eight inch square pan. Cool. Cut into 30 pieces.

* Mistletoe Cookie Kisses: Ingredients: 1/2 cup softened butter, 1/2 cup sugar, one egg, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one and 1/4 cup flour, 1/4 teaspoon baking soda, 1/8 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup finely ground nuts, and 20 Hershey Kisses. Cream butter, sugar, egg and vanilla into a bowl until light and fluffy. Add mixture of flour, soda and salt; mix well. Shape into one inch balls and roll into nuts. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for ten minutes or until almost set. Press chocolate kisses into center of each cookie. Cool on wire rack. Chill until chocolate is set.

* Sugar Cookies: Ingredients: four cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 3/4 teaspoon salt, and 3/4 teaspoon nutmeg. Sift ingredients together. Mix together one cup sift margarine, one and 1/2 cup sugar, two teaspoons vanilla, two eggs and 3/4 cup sour cream and add dry ingredients. Chill for one hour and roll and cut into desired shape. Bake at 350 degrees for eight to ten minutes. Let cool. Frost and serve.

* Magic Peanut Butter Mistletoe Cookie Dough Ingredients: one and 1/2 cups flour, 1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa, 1/2 cup peanut butter, one and 1/4 cups sugar, 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar, 1/2 cup margarine softened, 1/4 cup peanut butter, one teaspoon vanilla and one egg. Filling: 3/4 cup peanut butter and 3/4 cup powdered sugar. In small bowl combine flour, cocoa, and baking soda. Blend well. In large bowl beat sugar, brown sugar, margarine and 1/4 cup peanut butter until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and egg beat well and stir in flour mixture until blended and set aside. In small bowl combine filling ingredients, blend well and roll into one inch balls. For each cookie with flour add shape about one tablespoon. Bake at almost 375 degrees for seven to nine minutes or until set and slightly cracked. Cool on wire racks and decorate.

Kids relate the meaning of the Christmas season

By DOUG TAYLOR
Staff Writer

Ask a child what Christmas means, and the answers can be as varied as the contents of the stocking hanging over the fireplace on Christmas day.

Tamara Waters, age 5, pondered the question in the confines of Tumble Town in the Palouse Empire Mall. She figured that Santa Claus was involved in the Christmas equation somewhere.

"I think Santa Claus is what Christmas means," Waters said. "I also get my presents that I haven't got before."

Terry Cook agreed that Santa played a large role in the holidays, but she didn't believe the widely accepted notion that Santa came down through the chimney to deliver his goods.

"He comes through the door," said the contemplative five-year-old with a definitive nod of her head.

A Clarkston youth had some different ideas.

Nine-year-old Alex Daniels thought Christmas was fun because it gave him the opportunity to visit relatives.

"Yeah, I get two presents, and we have a lot of fun together at Christmas time."

The Vandals used a balanced scoring attack and some strong defense to defeat the University of Nevada in the opening round of the Safeco Classic Friday night in Memorial Gym.

The Vandals welcomed back ex-Big Sky Conference member Nevada to Moscow with their first victory of the season, a 79-64 pipping of the Pack.

The Vandals (1-1) were led by junior guard Jennifer Clary's 34 points. Also helping Idaho was P.J. Hall and Brenda Kuehthau, both of whom scored in double digits.

"P.J. Hall shot the ball well and Brenda came out well in the second half," Idaho head coach Laurie Turner said. "When it all was done we're going to have a balanced scoring attack."

Last season Idaho was led by Kelly Moeller (16.2 points per game) and Kreta Smith (13.9 ppg). Since both were lost to graduation last May, Turner feels that she has the case in the Nevada game, Idaho will have to spread the scoring around.

"We must have a balanced attack and our perimeter shooters are better than a year ago," Turner said.

Against Nevada, Clary scored six of her points on three pointers, a weapon that Turner feels the team can look to more than last year.

"We did some good things against Nevada," Turner said.

We rebounded well and did a good job on defense. We played 30 minutes of good basketball, but we need to concentrate on getting that up to 40 minutes as the season goes on."

After defeating Gonzaga University 67-53, the Missouri-Kansas City Kangaroos earned the right to play Idaho in the opening round of the Big Sky. Idaho trailed at halftime 27-24, but came out in the second half and played inspired basketball. Kuehthau helped Idaho to an eight point lead at 45-37.

Idaho men go 1-1 at Missouri tournament

Compiled from wire reports

The Vandals men's basketball team hosted .500 this past weekend as they split in the Pizza Hut Classic Tournament in Springfield, Missouri.

Idaho defeated Akron-AAc Little Rock 64-64 Friday night, but fell 75-52 to host Southwest Missouri Saturday night to take second place.

Against Little Rock (1-2), Idaho was held to six points in the first half and 25-5 over all. With senior guard Orlando Lighftout (who will be the senior's MVP), Dustin Wenon, Marvin Ricks, and Xuntonus Harrison (who will be the newcomer of the year), Idaho will roll ever Montana in the first round and then defeat Weber State in the final to take a trip to the NCAA tournament.

In a bold prediction, the Vandals will be sent to Salt Lake City for first round NCAA tournament action and be the first Big Sky team to be in a NCAA game since the 1983 Idaho team defeated Iowa in Pullman.

"Kansas City is a good team," Turner said. "We needed some mistakes."

Turner was referring to the fact that Idaho gave up four three-point plays to the Kangaroos which came back to team Idaho in the end. But despite giving up the tough baskets, Idaho hung tough with Kansas City.

The Vandals even took the lead momentarily (55-53) before Idaho controlled the second half and pulled away to a 10-3 finish.

Idaho shot well from the line, converting 23-of-28 while the Trojans managed just 6-of-17. On Saturday night the Vandals faced Southwest Missouri City, who earned a berth in the championship game by defeating Tennessee State the night before. Idaho kept the game close in the first half as both teams had trouble putting the ball in the hoop. Idaho managed just 20 points in the first half to fall behind 30-20 after 20 minutes.

"We didn't play very smart in the first half," Eustachy said. "They attacked us defensively and we didn't attack them offensively. We didn't get the ball reversed.

In the second half Idaho put together a 22-9 run to take a 42-39 hold with 11 minutes to play, but at the 5:00 mark SWMS pulled away for good on a three pointer by guard Johnny Murdock. Murdock led the Tigers with 18 points.

"He's known to be a good attack his投 for this year, we'll be the force for the Vandals this season."

"He's (McBride) going to be a better player this year than last year, as opposed to last year, will be a force for the Vandals this season."

"Our kids really completed at the end to win the game," Eustachy said. "Some points of the win were good, but some were very poor."

Little-Rock, who never led in the game and got no closer than four points, were led by their stand-out Tony Martin. The all-conference forward had 16 points, but was only 6-for-15 from the field as he was covered by Idaho's defensive specialist Ricky Wilson.

"The second half, we stuck to the game plan: getting the ball inside and taking advantage of our size," Eustachy said.

Lightfoot rebounded from the night before to register 23 points against the Tigers. Forward Xnimous Houston also hit double figures with 10 points. On the season Houston is 12-for-15 from the field, and is average 30 points a game.

"He has to step up at Idaho and prove that he can play and I think he will," Eustachy said.

Lightfoot was the sole Vandals to make the all-tournament team by netting 25 points and eight rebounds. He was joined by Mur-}

Vandals, Cougars clash in the Dome

By LORIEN ROBERTS
Sports Editor

To Idaho head coach Larry Eustachy, Wednesday's border battle with Washington State is the biggest game of the year.

Well, sort of.

"I know the importance of the WSU game," the third year head coach said. "It is the most important non-conference game of the year."

Idaho (2-1) will tip things off against the Cougars (1-1) in the Kibbie Dome. Game time is 7:05 p.m.

Idaho, fresh off a 1-1 tournament in Missouri, will go with a similar three guard line-up as WSU. The Cougars are led by their fourth-year point guard Bennie Seltzer. The senior is averaging 14.5 points a game on the year and is WSU's all-time leader for three pointers.

"I think they're a great team and I don't think they deserve the low preseason expectations (last in the Pac-10) they received," Eustachy said. "Bennie is a great guard."

So far this season the Cougars have defeated BYU-Hawaii and lost a thriller in Birmingham to the University of Alabama on Friday night. UA's James Robinson hit a jumper with nine-tenths of a second left to lift the Tide to a 78-76 win over the Cougs.

"For them to play that close to a perennial powerhouse thing," Eustachy said, "I think they've got as good of perimeter players as there is on the west coast."

Joining Seltzer in the backcourt will be guards Tony Harris and Eddie Hill. Harris, a transfer from the College of Southern Idaho who's averaging 19.5 points a game, had 15 against Alabama while Hill contributed 13.

"It's a great test for us," Eustachy said. "They're a team that's underrated."

Last year Idaho traveled to Pullman to play the Cougars only to be sent back to Moscow after receiving an 81-49 drubbing. In that game juniors Orlando Lightfoot and Deon Watson didn't play, and senior guard Marvin Bucks was ineligible at the time.

Although Idaho could be the favorite this time around, Eustachy is giving no hints that this is the case.

"I think that very few Pac-10 teams are underdogs when going up against Big Sky teams," Eustachy said. "If they were in the Big Sky they'd be picked to win it, I think."

Pitting out the Cougar's starting line-up are forwards Rob Corkrum and Mark Hendrickson.

The last time WSU defeated Idaho in Moscow was in 1987, but WSU leads the series 143-102.

Hilbert looks back on Idaho’s championship season

By DOUG TAYLOR Staff Writer

When University of Idaho volleyball coach Tom Hilbert refers to 1990 as being a banner year, he isn’t speaking in a figurative sense.

Hilbert and his Vandals have just completed their most successful campaign in school history with a 26-7 record. But the story doesn’t end there.

The Vandals also won the Big Sky Conference championship tournament after placing second in the regular season to Montana. With the win, the Vandals gained their first-ever trip to the NCAA volleyball tournament.

Finally, at the end of last week, junior middle blocker Nancy Wicks was named the 1992 conference MVP. Joining her on the first team was senior setter Amie Hamilton while teammate Dee Purser was a second-team all-Big Sky selection.

Junior Jessica Packard was named to the honorable mention squad.

Some of the younger players on Idaho’s squad were honored also.

Freshman Travellina Yanchulova, a 6-foot outside hitter from Sofia, Bulgaria, was named the BSC’s 1992 co-freshman of the year. Yanchulova shared the honor with Eastern Washington’s Kelli Glaus.

As a result of the above awards, Hilbert should be considered a strong contender for Idaho volleyball coach Tom Hilbert and his team have just come off their first-ever conference championship. (Jeff Curtis Photos)

BSC coach of the year. The winner of that award will be announced by next week.

After last year’s 13-16 record, which placed the Vandals sixth in conference, it is easy to see why the cascade of awards this year has left Hilbert a little dazed. He did find some time in address the selections of the all-conference teams.

He found one occlusion from the list, senior outside hitter Heather McEwen, worthy of mention.

"I’m real proud of the kids that were selected, but I was disappointed that Heather McEwen didn’t make one of those teams," Hilbert said. "In many ways, she was our most valuable player."

In specifying why she was the silent MVP of the Vandals, Hilbert said she provided leadership and tactical knowledge of the game that was instrumental in the team’s success.

While the above characteristics were certainly important for Idaho, Hilbert theorized that McEwen didn’t make an all-conference team because she didn’t have the statistical year of other outside hitters in the conference.

Hanks, who finished with a team-high 1,279 assists for the year, agreed with Hilbert’s assessment.

"I think that a lot of times, the coaches who choose those teams don’t vote on who the leader on the court is," Hanks said. "They look at statistics, and that’s sad because we depended on Heather to lead us, and she came through."

Hilbert then started to discuss some of the highlights that are inherent in a season of this magnitude.

He cited how the Vandals were more consistent than last year, especially in tough matches. He said that another trait he noticed was the mental toughness of this year’s team. While last year’s team tended to fold in tough matches, the intensity of this year’s team didn’t allow for it.

One of his players noticed it too.

"We weren’t playing scared like we used to," Hanks said.

Contained in one success story has to be some low points, spots where the team had some trouble with consistency. Even though Hilbert didn’t go into specifics, one example of this came in the moments immediately following a tough home loss to Northern Arizona University.

The Vandals let this match slip away after holding a 2-1 lead heading into the fourth game.

Hilbert held a closed-door meeting following the match, and nobody came out wearing smiles. The meeting proved to be a positive, though, as the Vandals won their next five matches in a row, including the three-game victory over Montana in Missoula that gave Idaho the BSC championship.

That brought up UC-Santa Barbara in the first round of the NCAA tournament. Although the Vandals lost to the tournament veterans, Hilbert said the experience was nothing but a positive.

"We settled down in the third game and proved that we belonged in this tournament," said Hilbert. "We definitely have the ability to be back here."

With only two seniors on this team, expect Hilbert to make good on that prediction.
The Nutcracker’ celebrates 100 years with magic performances

“The Nutcracker’ celebrates its 100th anniversary this December and the 1990s find this ballet classic to be more popular than ever. Record crowds throughout the world are expected to flock to enjoy the magical story of a dream come true and a glorious spectacle of color, sound and movement danced to Tchaikovsky’s great masterpiece and his last major work.

Here in the Palouse-Valley region, “The Nutcracker” has become a Christmas tradition with performances sponsored each year by Festival Dance and Performing Arts. This year the ballet will be performed by the Eugene Ballet with shows tonight at the Beasley Coliseum in Pullman and tomorrow at the Lewiston High School. Both performances start at 7:30 p.m. The cast of 56 includes 30 company dancers from the professional Eugene Ballet in the main roles and 36 students of the Ballet Dance Academy dancing the roles of party children, bonbons, baby mice and waltzing flowers.

The ballet is continuous action. The festivities begin with a lavish Christmas Party where the main character, Clara, is given a nutcracker in the shape of a soldier doll by her mischievous uncle Drosselmeyer. In the second scene Clara discovers that her toy soldiers have turned into an army of mice. As the Christmas tree grows to giant proportions, the Nutcracker comes to life and manifests a company of toy soldiers to defend Clara. But it is Clara who saves the Nutcracker by striking the Mouse King with her shoe.

As for the acting, once again I was surprised by the amount of talent coming out of our theatre arts department. Although the play was hard to follow, the actors turned out strong performances well worth watching. An outstanding performance came from Juliene Hardy, who played the main characters’ sister-in-law Natalya Ivanovna. Wearing loud, unfashionable dresses, Hardy portrayed this sisters-law from Hell with subtle expertise. First appearing as a shy and meek fiancé, the audience had the privilege of watching Hardy skillfully turn her character into a compelling, manipulative wife.

Cleverly screening orders, then quickly switching to a sweet, gently persuading voice, Hardy’s portrayal was a bright spot in this gloomy play. Another strong performance was that of Rusty Greene as Fyodor Fyly Kulygin. A professor married to the Sergeevna sister Masha, Kulygin is a nearly little man with wire rim glasses.

Greene’s portrayal of the jumpy professor added a bit of fun to the puppet play. Using a squeaky, nasal voice, and hunched over shoulders, Greene brought to life this devilish man who is frantically trying to please his young wife.

The makeup crew should also be congratulated on their job of making Greene bald for the part. A perfect, smooth covering of Greene’s hair made me wonder whether it was a make-up job, or if the actor was bald in real life (which he is not).

The costume designers also did a commendable job of creating turn of the century dresses and uniforms. Lovely long skirts topped with fluffy, high neck blouses were worn by the three sisters. The uniforms worn by the men were black and brown accompanied by knee high boots. All the costumes helped recreate a turn of the century mood for this period play.

Although this melodrama, play is a bit too morbid for my taste, people interested in seeing outstanding performances by fellow students should still consider attending one of the remaining performances.

The play will be shown on December 10, 11 and 12 at 8 p.m., with a matinee on December 13 at 2 p.m.
All of those symphony fans out there who took the trail bus service to Pullman for the previous Washington State Symphony concert can stay on the bus.

The Symphony announced that the bus service provided by Link Transportation Systems was a tremendous success and will become a regular service to Symphony patrons.

The buses are designed to alleviate parking hassles and to provide "to-the-door" service. They are comfortable 11 and 15 passenger deluxe mini vans.

"As the weather continues to worsen in this winter season, the patrons can be assured of safe arrival by riding the bus," said program innovator Karen Bird in a press release.

KIDS ON PAGE 12

Christmas," Daniels said.

Kids also have diverse wishes when Christmas approaches, and toymakers have responded. Ranging from dolls to army men, there seems to be a toy for any taste.

While looking at his mother, Daniels had quite a number of specific items on his Christmas list.

"I would like a Nerf bow and an arrow set and a Super Soaker 50 water gun," Daniels said.

Daniels' seven-year-old brother Marcus wanted the deluxe model of the aforementioned water gun.

"I would like the Super Soaker 2000," he claimed.

According to Alex Daniels, the difference between the two is the sheer amount of water that the guns can hold. He said one gun only has one water "pack," while the more advanced model has two of them.

The boys' mother, Melissa Daniels, said that Santa is a necessary figure around the Christmas holidays.

"Right now for me, Santa is a way of fulfilling my kids wishes for Christmas," Daniels said.

Most kids thought that unquestioned behavior was a necessary condition for Santa's arrival, as were milk and cookies.

Megan O'Sourke cautioned about the type of cookies that needed to be left out for St. Nick.

"He likes soft cookies, not hard cookies," said the six-year-old from Pullman.

Big kids also have thoughts about Christmas.

Erin McCoy, a 20-year-old student from the University of Idaho, reflected more on the spirit of Christmas.

"I think Christmas is all about the magic that it holds for kids," said McCoy, who was one of the supervisors watching the action at Tumtule Town. "It's not so much Santa as the spirit he embodies of generosity and love."
Rock’n’reggae band hits the Cavern tomorrow

By KARIN MASON
Staff Writer

Rock’n’reggae band Planetary Refugees will appear tomorrow night at the Cavern in Pullman. Since their debut at the Big Dipper in Spokane in January of 1991, one has never seen the same performer twice. The Refugees are known for their danceable beats and spontaneous and outspoken performances, and “to get into a groove and keep it rolling.”

The band is made up of Richard Taylor on lead singer and songwriter, John Miller on bass player, songwriter and singer Randy Mead on saxophone and drums, Roy Rooney on electric mandolin, Dave Fish on drums, and Jeff Gould on lead guitar. Lead singer Taylor is a disabled Vietnam Veteran and convivial peace activist who keeps the peace alive with humor, ad-lib, social comment, political satire and 80’s and 90’s riffs interwoven into the middle of a song.

The Planetary Refugees.

The band’s upbeat performances sometimes include audience members joining them on stage and rocking to their “positive vibration.” Along with the usual bass, guitar and drums, the audience may sometimes find a trumpet, clarinet, harmonica, conga or whatever joining the band on stage. The Refugees play a combination of original rock’n’reggae tunes that they refer to as “real reggae.” The band winds many different types of sound into one complete package to come up with their unique sound. Their music is definitely political with strong leanings to positive solutions.

Besides the creative energy that musical flexibility inspires, the band is motivated by their philosophy and desire for a simple, peaceful life where solutions and positive vibrations are the plan of the day. All of the band members are actively concerned about the environment and motivated toward a simple lifestyle that ratifies high in creativity.

The Planetary Refugees are inspired by reggae’s political and spiritual message and driving beat, and it offers them the opportunity to be a voice for positive change and peaceful resolution in this fast paced modern world.

The Planetary Refugees will be featured tomorrow night at 9:00 p.m. at the Cavern on the Washington State University campus.
