Students who are looking into moving into the residence halls next semester, may have a shock when writing out the checks for room and board.

According to figures released by the University of Idaho Housing Services, some of the current housing figures may increase up to 13 percent for the next academic year.

Stuart Davis, Assistant Director of Business Operations for Housing, said the fee increase is not finalized and will not be brought before the Board of Regents until a public hearing. "There is a public hearing on the 22nd in the Morrin Room," he said. "We'll finalize rates after the public hearing and they will be presented to the Board. We'll consider the input and try to adjust accordingly."

Davis said the reason for the rate increases is due to improvements in life and fire safety, address deferred maintenance, managing current and future debt requirements, salaries and benefits, enhancing disabled access and covering operating cost increases.

The proposed cost increases are as follows:

- For Plan A, which includes 20 meals a week, double room occupants will pay $3,399, up from $3,090. Single occupants will have a $121 increase up to $3,899.
- Plan B, which includes 14 meals a week, double room occupants fees will increase over 10 percent up to $3,276. Single occupants will have to pay $3,776, up from $3,666.
- Plan C (10 meals a week), double room occupants will pay $3,065, up 10 percent. Single occupants will only have a two percent increase.

PCEI will clean up Paradise Creek

By NATALIE SHAPIRO

The Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute is sponsoring a Paradise Creek Stewardship Clean-Up Day on Saturday April 17.

This event begins the Paradise Creek Adopt-A-Stream Stewardship Trip Program. This program is open to all organizations who want to adopt sections of Paradise Creek as Stream Stewards.

Stream Stewards will get their name or logo on a sign located near the adopted stream segment. Staff will be offering workshops identifying their dedication to improving the water quality of Paradise Creek.

PCEI adopted Paradise Creek in 1991. That year, on Earth Day, 500 volunteers cleaned up six tons of trash and planted 5,000 trees and shrubs. In 1992, 200 volunteers cleaned up two tons of trash and planted 2,000 trees and shrubs.

This year, PCEI initiated the Adopt-A-Stream Stewardship program. Program Coordinator Adam Thornburough said about half of the 21 sections have been adopted so far. He explained that during the creek clean-up, signs will be enacted for Stream Stewards.

The creek clean-up is open to the whole community, not just Stream Stewards. Participants should meet at 9 a.m. at the USU SUB to be assigned a stream segment to clean. At noon there will be a potluck lunch at Messon View Park for all participants.

For more information about the Adopt-A-Stream program, or for the clean-up day, call PCEI at 885-6814.

For students staying in Moscow for the summer, the idea of spending a vacation on the Palouse may seem interesting. However, the University of Idaho summer programs has some classes to be offered that will keep the summer interesting.

Take an in-depth look at two of Idaho’s favorite residents, New Pecker Chief Joseph and mining camp resident Polly Bemis. “Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce War of 1877” class will be July 12 through 17 and the costs will be $819. “Discovering Polly Bemis’ Idaho” for a fee of $212 and the class will be held Aug. 8 through 11.

Graduates honored in competition

By DAVID JACKSON
Staff Writer

The best and brightest of the University of Idaho's graduate students were recognized last Friday at the 2nd Annual Research Competition, held at the SUB.

Over 35 graduate students presented their research at an exhibit from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. last Friday. The event, which was sponsored by the UI Graduate and Professional Student Association, served as a chance for the students to present, and demonstrate their various projects before the awards ceremony took place later that night.

There were four categories in which the graduate students competed: Art and Music, Education, Social Sciences, and Humanities; Engineering and Computer Science; Natural Physical and Agricultural Science I; and Natural Physical and Agricultural Science II. There were at least five participants in each category, and the top three winners in each bracket won cash awards.

"The competition went real well," said GSPA President. "This is only the second year we've done this, and we attracted a lot of attention this time around." In the Art and Music category, Rob McIntyre won first place for his oil painting, "Cloudy Day." Keith Storron took second place with his project entitled, "Fluorescein (FCT) Degradation by Microcosm- mized Petroleum and Their Enchanced Survival for in situ Aquifer Bioremediation," and $500 for his project entitled, "The Music of Idaho City, Idaho City Territory." Stephen Spiegel won second place and $500 for his project, "Deep-Ship Myth Tomb." The third place winner was Elena Wasie, who picked up $100 for her project, "Equine Studies.

"I focused on the Botte house because I grew up in that area," said McIntyre, who is working for his Masters of Music and Education. "There is a lot of material to be researched and the results are not ready to be looked at. I've been studying for a year, and am by no means done." In the Education/Social Sciences and Humanities category, Sandra Melchtz took first place with her project, "Informati- vated Reference Assess- ement: Application on Infor- mation Science Preparation of Elementary Teachers." The second place award went to Shuzhong Li, whose project was entitled "China, The femer Soviet Union and the World Economic Crisis" in 1929-1933." The third place study was entitled for her study, "Alcohol Use and Abuse in Native American Society." She received $500 for her project. The Physical Science bracket was won by Kelly Hall, who submitted the project, "Improved Methods for Micropore/" Design and Verification with- thion." Third place went to Steven Pinder and his project, "Physical Parameters Affe- maging the Anatomic Degrada- tion. TMT from Mammalian Contaminated Soil." First place in the Natural/ Physical and Agricultural Science I category went to M. Naderti, for the research entitled "Flavine Vicia I Coat Protein Is Targeted to Tobacco Chloroplasts via a Transit Peptide Sequence for Coat Protein Contribution to Symptom Development." Livy Williams III took second place with a project entitled "Response of Phacelia microscopica (Ehlers) D. Scidings to Herbivory by Yoma Insecta (L.)." Third place went to K. E. Ang Yan, who submitted "Study of the Dynamics of Reactions and Vibrational Excited Molecules." in the Natural/Physical and Agricultural Science II category, Zhaoping He took third place with a project, "Gas Induced Folding of Calmodulin- mediated Synthesis. Monoclonal Anti- Bacterial Receptor - Inhib- ited by Melatonin and Tri- bune." The second place went to John Rode and his project "Effects of DNA Topology on Temperatur- ed Gene Expression in Yeast saccharomyces." Next, Darby collected third place with his project entitled "Fecal Bacterial Ratio for Quantifying Water Pollution by the Water Resource Management." Dr. Anne Lichterwalzer, a student in Veterinary Medicine, said this year's ceremony has never seen improvements over the last year. "We had Keith Benson from the University of Washington as a featured speaker and a great turnout from the university as well," she said. "A lot of the judges really enjoyed their time and made this a great presentation."
Book swap to start this semester

By JEFF KAPOSTASY
Staff Writer

As the semester comes to a close, many students will be standing in line to sell books back for a fraction of what they paid. But this time, there will be an alternative. This year will mark the beginning of book swap, an automatic way for students to buy and sell books and come out financially ahead.

Although details of the swap are still being worked out, some basics are set. At the end of the semester, students can take their books to Appa-loosa room of the SUB instead of the bookstore. The asking price will be set by the student selling the book. At the beginning of the fall semester, when the book is sold, the student will be reimbursed.

For instance, if a student brings in a Biology 100 book and wants $30, the swap will mark the price on it, and the book will go on sale at the beginning of the next semester. There will be a small fee for the service, at the most, $1 so the swap can be self-sustaining. That fee will be deducted when the book is sold. Despite that, Wilson said both the buyer and seller should come out with more than going to the bookstore.

This will eliminate the middle-man,” said ASUI Sen. Sean Wilson. “You can buy and sell directly from the person.”

Wilson is unsure how many books will be brought in and how great the selection is, but books for all of the core classes will be provided. In the future, Wilson is hoping the swap will expand to carry more books.

A committee has been set up to deal with that specificity of the swap. The swap may be held with computers and other tricky customers.

Low reimbursement for selling books back to the bookstore coupled with expensive new prices have long been a complaint to college students. Organizers are hoping the swap will offset students a better alternative.

“I thought the system was flawed,” Wilson said, “Setting up the book swap was one of 1 reasons I ran for senate.”

The swap will take place from bookstore books. The bookstore acts only as the middle-man to the giant textbook companies that buy and sell used books and set the prices.

This semester will act as somewhat of a test to run for the swap. Even if this one falls short, Wilson is hoping to try it again the following semester to make sure it gets a fair chance.

Since the swap is a new idea, advertising for the swap has started, and the ASUI Senate has begun bringing the idea to their living groups.

Hey! You have NO excuses

They're like a plague creeping up uninvited & unwanted

The locals are mad. They have every right to be.

They're being invaded. Like a plague it's creeping up uninvited and unwanted.

Tell them to go back. Back to the same old hotness of crime and let us be.

"Damn Californians!"

It is said that during the homestead period, a certain type of person was drawn to the Northwest. Adventurous, yet easy going, fixed in their ways, independent - a rebel if you may. You had to be that to survive.

And so they came to Idaho. Came to get away from the city. Came to start anew in this air and clean water. But now the miserable elements that they left behind are creeping up behind them. It's rich Californians and they're pouncing down on Idaho's backdoors, and acting like the Big Bad Wolf screaming, "Let me in!"

Oh, Idahoans knew it would happen sooner or later, they knew their doors weren't made of steel and that the secret passage they kept secret forever. But most people were hoping the wolf wouldn't come so soon and wouldn't bring so much money and "attitude" with him.

It's this attitude that Idahoans feel threatened by. The attitude that says, "Sure I'll pay you double what your house is worth," and "Yes, you should cater to our rich Californian needs." Why should Idahoans change their patterns to accommodate the California transplants?

In Coeur d'Alene the price of a basic "affordable" home has risen about $10,000 since last summer. Post Falls, located next to Coeur d'Alene, receives about 50 new residents each month from California and Coeur d'Alene receives about $100,000. The impact it has had on the area is undeniable, affordable housing is obsolete. The average home in Coeur d'Alene is $90,000. The locals can no longer afford it. However, rich Californians can.

It's this fact that has made Idahoans so justifiably mad. Mad that the surge in population has caused not only an increase in housing costs but also an overload in Idaho's local systems, highways and schools. Idahoans aren't prepared to handle this type of growth.

In addition, Idahoans aren't used to sharing their valued land. Many people have invaded the Gem State by trampling through the forests, lakes and meadows. They are destroying the natural beauty - the habitat that brought them to Idaho in the first place.

Some Californians actually believe they are tricking the locals. They've rushed to the motor vehicles license office to change their license plates.

This won't help. The locals know. They see the moving trucks coming in. They see the jumps in housing prices, the high crime and the increased traffic. They know who to blame.

Californians take heed. If you're going to move to Idaho do so with grace. Don't drive 60 mph in a 55 mph zone, don't complain about the roads. Respect the locals. And for God's sake stop at stop sign! And the advice for Idahoans? It's simple. One bumper sticker gives this advice, "I Don't Brake for California Plates."

This is Idaho. No halfassed solutions will work here. Idahoans alone have the right to make Idaho Idaho. If you want to live here, you must respect us as a people. It's our land and we will not be taken over by Californians. We hope they move back to the Bay Area where they belong.

Comparing the horse tracks to politics

Come back, Bob Karew! I never would have predicted it, but it's five months after the election and Dan Quayle is being watched in November's political horse race, just ended up being the long hot gaiting horse that made real one dusty, dry-mouthed column. It's just that we all died it as the time.

With beating Al Gore Quayle dished heavily into his Monter-nous pills and predicted that if he's elected, everyone who made a fool of him would be saddled at a tax increase. He ended up being boffed by only 5,000 votes, but Clinton was so easily dangled all through the

Commentary primaries showed up again last Wednesday, once again looking like the love child of Phil Donahue and William Shatner singing like the Little Engine-That-Could—Have

't Got the Blues.

Anyway, this professional perspective discusses the shadowy beast we know as "multiculturalism."

The author talks about recent minority issues (i.e., anyone who is a non-white male) hiring procedures.

"What we were doing," says he, "was going the easy route and recruiting mostly White (sic) women. We have nothing against White (sic) women — they are as integral a part of diversity. But we need balance and equality for all. So, too, have nothing against white women.

Don’t accuse all for one man’s doing

Editor:
This letter is referring to a lead story in Tuesday, April with the headline reading “Student accuses fraternal member of rape.” This is a terrible incident, and should never have happened. The specific incident is not the focus of this letter, although the headline is another attempt by the media to grab all fraternity members together as rapists. The line itself is made specifically to claim that the suspect was a member of a fraternity. If the suspect had been a Wallace resident or an campus student wear it of read, “Student accuses campus student of rape” doesn’t think so. What is the subject would of been that would you of put “Student accuses Black man of rape,” I would hope not. Do it matter when we say it. What you look liked? OR, do it matter to report the thing that actually happened in the case.

This nation was acting as an individual, as soon as a person from a fraternity does something bad he is essential removing himself from a media fire. When he would have his headline signifying he is member of is these specific men, or even other it usually does not give us beneficial view of the group. I don’t know how it will be, I just hope we will understand that a majority of rapes are not committed by fraternity members but as long as headlines such as these are specifically pointed fraternities as the main offenders, it will not be a lucky

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Limbaugh’s show is beneficial & insightful"

Editor:
Instead of being an insightful critical analysis of the Rush Limbaugh Show, the “Opinion” article, “Let’s not be too much of a Rush to praise Limbaugh,” by Jeff Kropasty (The Argonaut March 30) is merely an overwhelming trade of childish insults that aren’t even particularly funny. The article provides no real examples to support its thesis, which proves that the author probably hasn’t even exposed himself to what he is evaluating. The first paragraph claims that Limbaugh’s show is more nauseating than Star Trek (what an in-depth analysis) and is a measure of sheer stupidity. Then it continues its rash of baseless, overblown, and ill-informed, insults claiming that the show is equivalent to a repot from the MTV Late Night Comedy Hour and has the same intellectual and political insight as the “Fractured Fairytales” segment of the Rocky and Bullwinkle Show. Which is just fine, the author is entitled to his opinion, but I’m not going to pay his opinion any respect if there is no substantial criteria or evidence provided to back these allegations up. All this author did is provide emotional outbursts of petty insults directed not only at Limbaugh but also at Star Trek and the Vanguard. What is ironic, and hypocritical, about this article is that is that outbursts as these were his most formidable criticisms of Limbaugh.

This program is primarily a radio talk show intended as entertainment, basically a conservative variation of Larry King Live or even the Phil Donahue Show. Citing the entertainment format, Limbaugh does utilize sarcasm, satire, and bold exaggerations to drive home points in a humorous manner and this type of approach is not just for everyone, but as per the benefit of free market, you can always opt to tune the dial.

I have been listening to Limbaugh for just over a year now, and though I originally did have second thoughts about the program, I have since found that it not necessarily conservative with actually hundreds of voices of all political backgrounds, if you take the callers into account has been beneficial as well as insightful. For instance, in listening to the Limbaugh program, I have learned an environmental holocaust is not necessarily inevitable and that such issues like global warming and upper atmosphere ozone depletion are contrived, theoretical notions, not proven facts. After hearing Limbaugh’s monologue about “guillotine before a reasonable doubt” as it pertains to Rodney King issue, I could see why the acquittal verdict of the four Los Angeles police officers was understandable, given that specific charges were pressed and the circumstances under which the guilty shooting occurred. And, with the many immigrant callers on the show, I have gained a perspective of how Russians and East Europeans feel about communism after experiencing it first hand.

The Limbaugh program does not fail, in fact, when George Bush and Rush Dukakis were battling it out for the presidency. Since then, then Limbaugh program has grown to more than 500 stations and is often tuned in to by the great share of AM and FM radio listeners between the hours of noon and 3 p.m. EST throughout North America. Also, Limbaugh has published a selling book and piloted a successful television program. Since all of this occurred, ‘Rush Limbaugh’ has claimed that the Clinton Administration and the Democratic Congress will be a “mess ticket” for Limbaugh is just a vaporous, and irrelevant as the rest of Kropasty’s article.

Nielsen needs to get informed

Editor:

In response to Ralph Nielsen’s latest letter to the Argonaut, March 30, I must say that I was deeply impressed. Impressed enough, in fact, that I know it would take something beyond human power to convert him. I certainly wouldn’t try. However, I will make the point that there are no other fossils. So, for the sake of your own mental health Ralph, I suggest you stay out of fossils.

Speaking of mental health, Nielsen made a rather sweeping assertion that fundamentalism is the most widespread form of mental illness among us today. How does he know that? Can he cite any study which has linked fundamentalism and mental illness? Is there any difference in mental illness statistics between fundamentalist Christians and the population as a whole? Does he know what mental illness is?

In his letter, Nielsen claimed that fundamentalists resort to name calling when they are unable to deny his facts or refute his logic. I’m sorry, yet he doesn’t hesitate to label an entire group of people “mentally ill” because they believe differently than he does. Sounds like some calls to me. If he feels that consistency is a virtue, he should give it a try.

This idea that fundamentalists are not “all there” is nothing new. While imprisoned in Jerusalem, and after giving an account of his conversion to King Agrippa and the Roman Governor Felix, the apostle Paul had this following exchange: “And he spake for himself, Felix said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.”

But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness” (Acts 26:24-25).

It is one thing to disagree over religious doctrine. It is quite another to start speculating about which group is mentally ill just because we do not agree with their beliefs. That is real dangerous stuff. I suggest we get more informed and start practicing some empathy of days.

It is unfortunate that your front page article on Tuesday April 6 used the term “fraternity member” to describe the man accused of rape by a female University of Idaho student. This reason why it is so unfortunate is because his membership in a fraternity has absolutely nothing to do with his alleged actions.

Why wasn’t Ralph Nielsen’s title “Student accues a rapist major of date rape” or “Student accuses Blue Key member of date rape”? I wasn’t misled this way because these affiliations have nothing to do with his actions. This man’s fraternity is not responsible for his behavior at all.

He is the only person responsible for what may have occurred that night.

Instead of using his membership in a fraternity to describe this man, you should have just left it as “Student accuses a University of Idaho man of date rape.” Adding “fraternity member” to the title of the article only puts down the Greek system which doesn’t deserve this kind of negative attention for one person’s alleged actions. Next time please only state the relative facts and nothing unrelated, such as membership in a fraternity or any other group.

It is unfortunate that your front page article on Tuesday April 6 used the term “fraternity member” to describe the man accused of rape by a female University of Idaho student. This reason why it is so unfortunate is because his membership in a fraternity has absolutely nothing to do with his alleged actions.

Why wasn’t Ralph Nielsen’s title “Student accues a rapist major of date rape” or “Student accuses Blue Key member of date rape”? I wasn’t misled this way because these affiliations have nothing to do with his actions. This man’s fraternity is not responsible for his behavior at all.

He is the only person responsible for what may have occurred that night.

Instead of using his membership in a fraternity to describe this man, you should have just left it as “Student accuses a University of Idaho man of date rape.” Adding “fraternity member” to the title of the article only puts down the Greek system which doesn’t deserve this kind of negative attention for one person’s alleged actions. Next time please only state the relative facts and nothing unrelated, such as membership in a fraternity or any other group.

We'll miss you!
and had won its last three. Besides it was running in a slightly lower class of field this time out. His was the sale bet.
I, on the other hand, just couldn't shake the feeling that the three horse was going to do something worthwhile. The hard part was selling P.A.W. on the idea. It was hard because the morning line on this grade race was 15-1 and as the windows opened for actual betting, the odds against number three became astronomical. I paired the number one horse with the rest of the field in my mind, but no combination looked quite right.

F...in' A and I decided that our system had been working so far and if we doubled it now, it would never work again. So we laid down our bets and waited it out. After all it was only one race.

The idea was to run through all the outside horses - about the same. F...in' A turned the program upside down on his right knee and tapped his left one with a pencil. I put on my sunglasses and kissed my St. Jude medal three times. The important thing was not to talk about the race at all until the horses were put in their gates. We didn't.

The first turn proved the oddsmakers right. The number one horse shot out to a three length lead. And my dream mug was battering for last.

But she gained steadily as the one horse increased its lead. My horse followed the rail and kept past the final group of three that stood between her and the leader. As they came into the final corner, the one horse had a two to three length lead. The three horse had no chance of winning but, she didn't have to.

The pack was a length behind her and I scanned the board. Both horses were in the clear, so there was no room for faulting and disqualification. Even if the one horse took the lead in the final stretch, they still finished first and second and we won.

I scanned the board. The odds on my horse closed at 13-1.
The payout on our quinella was going to be more than two hundred bucks. Then the impossible happened.
The jockey on the three horse stood up between his horse, the entire field passed the three horse and nobody cared. Nobody had been lucky enough to bet those odds on a garbage horse. The horse loped back to the stables, un injured.

I almost went and asked why the jockey had stood up, but I realized something.

At the track, in politics, it doesn't matter who you bet on if the race is crooked to begin with.

Materials and finishing community discourages minorities from moving there in the first place.
Indeed, there is no reason for a person of any race who might enjoy the social amenities or opportunities of a larger town to move there. In other words, there isn't a lighthouse to do in one's spare time that is not a value judgment. If a simple statement of facts.

But some people in the agency

don't seem to understand.

Because they happen to like the freeway rural communities have to offer, they think everyone would love to live there, if only given the chance.

An attempt to get the multicultural ball rolling, the agency is a black woman and her children to move town three months ago.

"Hooray," people must have been thinking. "We are finally breaking down the barriers of race and resentment that have separatd us for so long!"

After a year or so, however, the woman decided enough was enough. She left.

The biggest reason for leaving had nothing to do with the fact she was a black single mother in a very traditional white town. She had come from an urban environment and didn't have a hankering to rural life. It wasn't as inspiring for her as it was for the people who had hired her there.

Which brings me back to the lack of balance and equality for everyone.

Instead of spending so much recruiting minorities straight from urban environments, the government should soften up a bit and let people seek out their own opportunities.

If a minority takes a job in an urban setting, it should be because she wants to, not because whites have selected her as a means to achieve multicultularity.

If the environment wants real cultural balance, it should take its thumb off the scale.

Experience shows in first scrimmage

By LORIEN ROBERTS

SPORTS

The University of Idaho football team completed its first scrimmage of 1993 and the veterans were again in the spotlight.

Senior quarterback Doug Nusmeister and junior running back Sherridene May paved the way for the offense in the first game of the season this past Saturday in the Kiddie Dome.

May, who rushed for 3,111 yards and 21 touchdowns last year, led the rushing attack with 30 yards on 17 carries. His run was highlighted by a 40-yard touchdown reception from Nusmeister. His backup, sophomore Laveid Edd, followed May with 57 yards of his own on 18 rushes for the opposition.

"The first half of the scrimmage went real well offensively," said head coach John F. Everson. "The quarterbacks and the running backs played real well and moved the ball well."

Nusmeister, who threw for 3,308 yards last year along with 22 touchdowns, was sound as he passed for 183 yards on seven completions and found the end zone twice. The TD was good for 56-yard bomb over wide receiver Alan Allen.

"Doug played just about as well as he would have liked to," Smith said of the Walter Payton Award candidate. "Backup quarterback Eric Iwawa played well also. It was very rare to see him just to get more snaps."

The biggest surprise for Smith was the play of recently acquired free safety Wind Henderson. Henderson, who had 106 yards and five touchdowns last year, has been moved to the secondary and Smith believes both Nusmeister and the team.

"Last year I said 'I want to just run back,' " Smith said. "But after sitting out a lot last year (playing behind May) he came up in spring and said I want to play. 'He's going to be a big factor back there (in the secondary). He didn't make a tackle and some people (skeptically)."

Along with the play of quarterbacks and running backs, Smith was pleased with the play of the defense after the break.

"After the intermission the defense really got after it, " Smith said. "I think our front line and linebackers really played well."

Junior linebacker Duke Gar- rett, who posted a team-high 72 tackles last season but failed to fall down an interception and the strong returning veteran linebacking crew by picking off a Nusmeister pass.

Two main concerns for Smith will be the play of the offensive line and wide receivers. The line has been depleted with the loss of starters Chris Schoeder and David Speelman but still possess the leadership of weak tackles Jody Smug and center Matt Croomhow.

"They (the line) were a little inconsistent but it's just a matter of snaps for them to mold," Smith said. "Mat and Jody are definitely the leaders but we have to get those other three guys playing together with them."

The wide-outs will be led by Allen due to the departure of senior Yo Murphy. Allen is the only senior listed on the depth chart as the Vandals have four juniors, one sophomore and two freshmen available to play.

"We were a little disappointed in them due to their lack of consistency they showed at times," Smith said. "They'll get better with time and it's something we have to concentrate on working on."

Overall Smith was pleased with the work-out.

"What sticks in your mind is what things looked a year ago," Smith said. "Whatever can be used from then you really have to go back as a coach and start over."

Iowa's new hoop general to recruit locally

By LORIEN ROBERTS

Joe Cravens, a former assistant at the University of Iowa, was named as Idaho's 26th basketball coach at a hastily called press conference last Thursday night.

In spite of circulating talk that the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, was interested in hiring Cravens as head coach, the former Iowa head coach Steve Auerst had already been named as the school's next head coach.

Cravens was introduced as head coach shortly after 9:00 p.m. at the University Inn. Cravens said that the search was made much easier when it was known that the Utes finished 17-14, 15-12 under Cravens.

"I'm a small town person and this is the type of community I'd like to raise my family in," Cravens said, "I've had two young daughters and Moscow is the type of town I'd like to have them grow up in."

The hiring of Cravens ends a controversial search which lasted the better part of four weeks. When it was announced last month that Idaho assistant Hugh Watson was to contend for the position many boosters began terminating their contributions to the UI athletic department. As several local boosters protested the selection process Thursday afternoon, in Friendship Square the committee of athletic director Pete Lake, Vice President of Student Affairs Hal Godlewski and Academic Provost Tom Bell named Cravens as quickly as possible to avoid more criticism concerning the length of the process.

"I'm glad to get over with this decision with the way it's been taken from my body or my teeth checked because it has been an intensive search," Cravens said. "It's been a whirlwind day (Thursday) and I'm very excited about how it came out."

Since the selection took so long Cravens is out on the recruiting trail trying to make up for lost time. Idaho desperately needs guards as seniors Marvin Ricks, Ricky Wilson and Andre Whitney are no longer eligible. Cravens said his emphasis will be on recruiting high school players as well as focusing attention on players throughout the Northwest.

"There's a lot of work to do if recruiting but I think we'll be o.k.," Cravens said of Idaho's recruiting situation as far as starting late. "It's getting late, it's getting late but I think we can do it. We've been involved with college basketball for 17 years and with four years at the University of Washington and four at the University of Utah I'm probably one of the best at recruiting in the Northwest."

The verdict is still out on whether or not juniors Frank Waters, Doss Watson or Orlando Lightfoot will be returning next season. The Daily Norse reported Saturday morning that Watson was in fact transferring and had plans to either attend Tennessee Tech, Mississippi or look into heading to Idaho State to play for former head coach Larry Eustachy. However an article published in a local paper has it that Watson may be returning for his senior year.

Please see CRAVENS page 10-
Idaho freshman of Talaya's told me that they didn't go to the big dance (the NCAA Tournament) and that would save a bitter taste in my mouth (if they didn't try to make it next year), I told them that should be their goal.

Cranens noted that he'd like to play an uptempo style of ball and will push his team as far as they can manage with the two stars that are on the roster. He also noted that the games are a lot more exciting to watch than they were last year.

The Vandals have lost three of their first four games and have a tough face coming up in the next few weeks.

Track athletes qualify in Boise

By MBBT Wilson

Vandals' Tanya Tener and Robyn Slate dominated their events last weekend, both capturing top spots at the Bob Chat Invitational in Boise. Tener, the Idaho heptathlon record holder, finished first in the triple jump, with a jump of 40.31 meters and seventh in the long jump, going 16.7. Despite her first place finish Tener was dissatisfied with her jumps, according to head coach Scott Lorr.

"It wasn't one of Tanya's best jumping weekends," Lorr said. "She is having some approach problems and is trying to deal with a heel injury. She was a little distance away in the weekend, even through she got fifth in the triple jump."

Tener may not have compeled as well as she would have liked in the jumping events, but she did post a personal best in the 40-meter hurdles with a time of 5.03. Since not only dominated the 300-meter hurdles last week, but she won the 100-meter dash in the meet he'll be moved into the 100-meter hurdles.

Acoustic duo prefers playing for brains

By HALO DOWITW Staff Writer

ASUI Productions Coffeehouse presents yet another spectacular performance. Surprise, surprise!

On April 16, The Evaes will perform in the Student Union Building Vandals Cafe at 8 p.m. Carol Barbee and Eileen Dorn, from Los Angeles, have been singing together for two years. However, they met long before that when Dorn's husband was working on a play that Carol was performing in. After discovering the wonderful harmonies they had together, they put up the singing duo for several years to accommodate a family for Dorn and fame for Barbee.

When they actually started to perform together they discovered they had been singing along.

Their vocal harmonies have been described as a unique blend of Tracy Chapman, Simon & Garfunkel and CCR. This year they were featured at the West Coast Women's Music Festival.

Their own songs are filled with depth, humor and sensitivity, and are what they perform most while on stage. The low covers they sing are ones that "we wish we had written but some one else got to first," Dorn said.

While they play mostly in Los Angeles area night clubs, they have most recently started playing at colleges in the west. They are really excited about singing in Moscow, Idaho, since they have rarely been in the state. According to Dorn, they feel it is a "great year for acoustic music in Moscow."

"We like playing to people with a brain in their head. We get a great but totally different reception at colleges," - Eileen Dorn. "Vendors of the Eves"

The ticket for GreenStock is $11 until April 18, when the tickets will increase to $15. Pursley said that in years past they have lost money but this year they might have enough money after expenses to "actually" pay each of the bands.

The tickets may seem expensive for the three days, but Pursley said "Where else can you go to see bands for less than fifty cents each."

The promoters want people to be prepared for all weather saying, GreenStock will happen rain or shine. They stress being respectful to area residents and want everyone to pack in and pack out everything.

The gates will be opened on April 23, with the first band playing at 2:45 p.m. Black Star

Implanted capsules provide five years of birth control

By SHAR BRETEN News Editor

Women, imagine a contraceptive that would last up to five years and wouldn't require 10 pill every day.

Well, thanks to modern science, there is and it is here on campus.

It's called Norplant and it consists of six, one-inch long flexible capsules that are inserted under the skin of a woman's upper arm. The capsules are made of a plastic, called Stastic, and filled with a hormone.

Norplant has been available in the United States for at least the last two years and can be purchased even at the University of Idaho Student Health Center.

Norplant prevents ovulation by causing the cervical mucous to thicken, making it difficult for the sperm to penetrate.

Cathy Hanson, a nurse practitioner at the center, has done five or six implant procedures already. "The idea is becoming very popular here," said Hanson.

"The procedure is painless and takes less than five minutes," Hanson said.

The reason for increased popularity is there are daily doses to remember or pre-intercourse preparations. "Basically, you don't have to remember to do anything," said Dr. Susan Gellferly, a UI physician.

Another advantage of Norplant is it's efficiency. "The Norplant system has a failure rate of 0.2 percent," said Hanson, second best to male or female sterilization.

After implantation, the Norplant becomes effective within 24 hours and can be removed anytime, making it an easy form of reversible birth control.

Gellferly pointed out, however, that there are many side effects. "With Norplant, women count on being satisfied with it and sometimes they are not," she said. Hanson said women have problems "incidents of irregular menstrual bleeding and a change in monthly patterns."

"It's unpredictable...that's what bothers women the most.

Another drawback is the cost. The Norplant capsules cost $125 and the insertion procedure is $520.

One woman who has had the implant procedure (who wishes to remain anonymous) had only one setback, with her Norplants. "With the implant, I just recently started having period every other week. The nurse called the company and they told me to take Advil and that took care of that," she said.

The woman said Norplant is an advantage for her "I think it's ideal for women in college to have it. It's convenient and it's very fool-proof," she said. "It's ideal for women who have problems with the pill. Birth control pills caused me a lot of stress, you always have to worry. Norplant is more convenient."

"For a woman who didn't have a steady partner, it would be more practical, but I think it makes any woman's lifestyle easier. I've heard they are thinking of using it for women on welfare. I think that's a wonderful idea," she said.

Editor's note: This is the first of a three-part series dealing with birth control methods.

Women created everything from the bra to the bomb

ASU Productions Lecture Series brings a multimedia presentation, "Mothers of Invention: From the Bra to the Bomb" at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Building Borahe Theatre April 15.

Entertainment journalist, Ethel Ann Vare, is currently the Hollywood correspondent for glossy magazines in Europe and Australia. She contributes to such diverse publications as The Hollywood Reporter and the Wall Street Journal and is a frequent guest on television and radio talk shows.

Vare, along with a colleague, wrote Mothers of Invention: From The Bra to the Bomb, Forgotten Women and Their Unforgettable Ideas. Aside from the bra and the bomb, inventions by women include everything from the drip coffee to the cotton gin. Women created the chocolate chip cookie and the water storage dam, the Barbie Doll, and smallpox inoculation.

Vare's discussion of these fascinating females is as vibrant and upbeat as the women themselves. Her talks are informative and entertaining, funny and inspiring.

Vare is a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara and currently resides in Beverly Hills, California. She has begun a series of children's books about remarkable women and is working on a screenplay about the world of rock-and-roll.

All Campus Events Week Carnival brings sumo wrestling, velcro, Orbitron and human bowling

LANAE EMPIRE & SHAVE IRTON
Staf Writer & News Editor

Hands Across Campus, continuing through Saturday, will change students into human flies, sumo wrestlers and human gyroscopes.

The All Campus Events Week Carnival is bringing "LaV A. Homo Promotions" including the Flytrap, Orbitron (Human Gyroscope), Suneo Suit Wrestling and Human Bowling to Moscow to finish a week of intellectual, physical and crazy activities.

You have a Greek Week and CIDI Week, but we're all "vandals" said ASUI Senator Amtul Sheikh, "so we decided to have an All Campus Week." She said the idea came out of student leadership retreats, which are held yearly for University of Idaho student leaders.

Tonight, the Student Affiliate of the American Chemical Society will have an Interactive Lab/Lecture at 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in Rembrandt 112. Directly after in the SUB Ballroom, Carter Hall will sponsor Salsa, a Latin music lesson from 6:30 to 8 p.m. At the same time, Sigma Tau Delta is sponsoring a creative writing reading in the SUB EE-DA HO room from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Tuesday, a multi-award winning film exploring the reality of life in Lhasa, will be shown at 8 p.m. in the SUB Borah Theatre. Sponsored by Students in Support of Central America, it tells the story of a grassroots theatre company led by Jesuit priests that travels Honduran backroads to bring message of social justice to people who have never seen a play.

Wednesday, April 14, the Woman's Center is sponsoring a Student Speak Out in the SUB Silver Galena room from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. Also, ASUI Productions will show "Utsusemi" in the Borah Theatre at 7 p.m.

The Soccer Club will host a soccer scrimmage on the Guy Wicks Field from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Thursday. In the SUB Gold and Silver Galena rooms, the Student Alumni Relations Board will host a New Traditions Night from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The Western Rockers will teach the country swing in the Multi-Purpose Area/Memorial Gym Thursday at 7 p.m. An ASUI Productions speaker, Ehab Al Ann, Vare, the "Mother of Innovation" will speak in the Borah Theatre at 7:00 p.m.

Friday, the Sociology Club will sponsor a panel discussion on sexual assault in the Gold and Silver Galena rooms from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. The panel will include university students, doctors and professors.

The film in the Borah Theatre will be "MAYOFF at 7 p.m. "The Events" a musical group will perform in the Vandal Cafe at 8 p.m.

Saturday, the Student International Association will host an Ice Cream/Raffle/Softball Social on the Guy Wicks Field from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. The association is hoping the softball game will be an opportunity for U.S. and foreign students to interact in a fun way.

The committee for the All Campus Events week will host the carnival on the Guy Wicks Field from 1 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. The Flytrap or velcro jumping, popularized by David Letterman, will be available. Jumpers wear a suit of velcro and leap onto a fully inflatable velcro wall. In the Orange, students experience NASA-like space, spinning in every direction without getting dizzy.

Men and women of any size can become huge sumo wrestlers through the magic of the sumo body suit. The wrestler wears a padded suit and is instructed in the sumo art of psyching the opponent out, which may include stamping and salt throwing.

Also on the field and in the handball court, the Residence Hall Association will sponsor a picnic and Moscow's own Abies of Jellis.

Cement in the park will be turned into beautiful works of art as sidewalk artists do their stuff and a dunking booth will be there to take donations for the Habitat for Humanity, said Sheikh.

That night, Black Happy and Magick Circle will perform in the SUB Ballroom at 9 p.m. "MAYOFF will again be shown at 7 p.m. in the Borah Theatre.

"We really hope we can get the program to grow," said Sheikh.

Author to read at LCSC

Short story writer David Long will be the presentation of his work April 14 in Meriwether Lewis Hall at Lewis Clark State College.

Long is an accomplished author who has been compared to renowned author William Faulkner. Most of his settings take place in Montana, and his short stories often refer back to one another.

"The New York times says his stories are "profoundly lyrical, exhilarating, inspired.""

The reading is part of the LCSC Visiting Writers Series, which is sponsored by the Division of Literature and Languages and by the LCSC Institutional Development Fund.

The reading will start at 7:30 p.m. and is free and open to the public.
