Some shelters ready in case of fallout

By Marcey Baker

In case of a nuclear attack, residents of many U.S. cities should be able to travel for several days from their homes. University students, faculty and staff, however, could stay right where they are. The university has 32 fallout shelters with the capacity to house up to 60,000 people.

Sydney Duncombe, a political science professor, said that, in the event of a nuclear threat, the UI would become the largest city in Idaho, since Boise would be evacuated.

The largest shelter at the UI is below the Physical Science Building, which could house up to 4,000 people. The smallest, which could house 45 people, is below the Engineering Isotope Lab next to the greenhouse on Sixth Street.

These shelters are no longer self-contained survival units, said Bob MacPherson, UI safety officer. The food that had been put in many years ago has since been thrown out or left to decay. The shelter under the UI Library still contains much of the original food, most of it from 1967. This shelter is supposed to be able to hold 500 people. This seems unlikely because much of the space is now used as storage space for books.

Most of the other shelters, not being used for storage, consist of bare rooms. These shelters are not intended for long-term stay, MacPherson said. People would stay in the shelters for no longer than two weeks, he said. The shelters consist of areas called equipment care facilities, which would be used for mass feedings and medical care facilities.

MacPherson said that although the shelters are not equipped with food or supplies now, in the event of an emergency the shelters would be stocked with water, crackers, candy, medical supplies and radiation detection devices. Latah County has made arrangements to receive food from a Spokane distributor and county officials have also talked to officials in the Latah County Grain Growers Association about possible food stores.

Duncombe said that if nuclear tension becomes high, the food would be ordered from the distributor. The food ordered could be used by the UI Food Service as well.

Ron Ball, Assistant Director of Housing, said that the shelter under the Wallace Complex is directly linked to the food service storage area in that building.

Although it might seem easier to keep food stores in the shelters at all time, MacPherson said that the cost of maintaining food stores and keeping them updated would be too expensive.

He said that the government is responsible for financing these food stores. The university does not have to maintain them.

Until recently, there was a question as to how water would be supplied to these shelters. Since the water is supplied by electrical power there could be a problem if a nuclear attack destroyed power supplies. Duncombe said that three months ago this problem was resolved with a plan to supply water by diesel power.

MacPherson said the Federal Emergency Management Agency requires states to have safe disposal plans in case of a nuclear threat. The states in turn require individual counties and communities to come up with plans of their own.

According to Latah County’s plans, residents of Moscow, a low probability target area, would be instructed to take shelter in existing shelters if an imminent threat of attack existed. On the other hand, residents of Spokane, a high probability target area, would be advised to either relocate north of their city, south to Whitman county or west to Latah County. Therefore Moscow must have the facilities to be able to shelter these incoming people. According to Duncombe, Moscow has the potential to house 5,000 people in underground shelters in addition to the 60 that could be sheltered at the UI.

When asked if he believed these plans were sound, considering today’s technology, Duncombe said, “No, in many of areas of the country it would be in vain, but not in this particular county since we have the facilities to provide shelter. Take for instance Orange County, New York. This tiny community is supposed to be able to house over a million people. They just don’t have the facilities. Someone is going to be in trouble.”

He also said the large public buildings at UI and WSU would provide the surrounding communities with excellent fallout shelters.

“A student from a large city would be better off staying in Moscow rather than trying to travel home in an event of nuclear threat,” he said.

MacPherson said, “Of course these plans are open to criticism, and many defects in the plans occur, but there aren’t many alternatives. This government would only be criticized if it stood back and didn’t take any of these safety measures.”

Roles, times change for sorority housemothers

By Floyd Whitley

Esthering the foyer with her bouquet filled with red and white roses in her hands favorably struggling to place an exercise mat under Martin house mother for UI’s Alpha Chi Omega sorority, received her caller.

Martin, a 1979 UI graduate in secondary education, can be described as busy. She is also energetic, bright, pretty, and cheerful. As well as being the house mother for a sorority, Martin is enrolled again at UI, taking semester hours and working toward her elementary certification.

“I kind of fell into this position,” Martin said. “I know a girl who had been a house mother, and so I applied,” Martin said. “This is really a pretty good way to get through school again. I’m on campus, have room and board, and earn a reasonable salary.”

“Here at Alpha Chi Omega my job is fairly easy because Laurie, our cook, is helpful and very competent,” Martin said. “A house mother has a big job just in planning meals, ordering food, and dealing with delivery people. It’s very detrimental if you don’t have the luxury of a competent cook.”

Nonetheless, things don’t always go smoothly. Once, Laurie was hospitalized, there was going to be a luncheon at 12 for visiting alumnae, the house had to be tidy, and there were the numerous strays questions that had to be answered.

More than anything else, Martin views her job as being the responsible person in charge of the house in case there’s an emergency like a broken ankle or family matters. “I also smooth over spats, and act as a counselor in case any of the girls have a problem they need help with,” Martin said.

In some aspects, Martin views the university system as unchanging. “The styles of clothes have changed, and interests have changed, but the sorority is still a tight-knit group. There is a cohesiveness in a sorority because the girls learn to rely upon each other,” Martin said. “It is a growing experience, in which the girls are learning to become self-governing women, and the sorority’s major purpose is still to help girls become competent adults.”

There are still the philanthropic projects each year, the sisterhood, the lifetime membership, the wake ‘em up at six’em up raids by UI fraternal, the friendly inter-sorority rivalries.

According to Martin, however, there have been some major changes in today’s typical sorority members. ”Even as recently as the mid-seventies, when I was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, the attitude was that women went to college to get married,” Martin said. “Very rarely did you see a woman in engineering, accounting, or computer science. But today, the girls are coming to us for more educated career wise, and they are coming to college to prepare for their own careers.”

And even though there are the traditional key parties, nationalism local the sorority system is trying to move away from alcohol as a centerpiece for social activism, and to have the students explore their alternative lifestyles and avenues for social activities.

“There is a misconception that all of the girls in a sorority are spoiled rich kids,” Martin said. “Really, they’re just average, everyday people. In fact, most of these girls are working part time to help pay their college tuition.”

Utah accord to mirror one between UI and WSU

By Holly Rickett

Idaho and Utah universitites are looking into a tuition reciprocity agreement similar to an agreement between Idaho and Washington schools that began this semester.

The Idaho-Washington open arrangement allows students in Idaho who cannot take certain classes — usually because they are not offered at their home school — to take them in Washington without paying extra tuition. The arrangement works the same way for Washington students.

Not every class is open to this reciprocal trade, but many that are popular are offered to out-of-state students. These reciprocal classes count for credit just as if they were offered at the student’s home institution.

In the case of the UI and WSU, there is a matching class policy. For every class that is offered at the UI there is one offered at WSU. The universities keep an equal number of classes open for the trade.

The agreement between Idaho and Washington has been so successful, school officials are looking into the same type of agreement with Utah.

The agreement would serve Idaho students who live in the southern part of the state and especially those who live in counties next to the Utah border.

Many of the students who would benefit from the agreement belong to families whose members live in Idaho but work and perhaps own property and pay property tax in Utah. Such families would argue that they must pay out-of-state tuition, which is three times higher than the rate for Utah residents.

The proposed agreement is favored by Idaho State University, which is said to be losing many students to Utah schools.

Simpson service tonight at 7

Memorial services for Richard Simpson, a UI sophomore who died Oct. 2, will be held today at 7 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church at 322 E. Third St. The Rev. William Jones will officiate.

A funeral was held at Simpson’s hometown of Seward, Alaska, on Monday. The body was placed at a cemetery in Seward.

Simpson died when his car skidded on an icy road and was hit by a car.

La Cia on TV

La Cia, a program based on last year’s Borah Symposium at the UI, will be broadcast at 10 p.m. Oct. 9 and again at 7 p.m. Oct. 11 on KUID-TV.

The symposium, held last March, focused on the activities of the U.S. — and especially the C.I.A. — in Latin America. Specifically, the focus was on the agency’s activities in Nicaragua and Chile.

Participants in the symposium included William Colby, former director of the C.I.A.; David Atlee Phillips, former head of C.I.A. operations in Latin America.

The Borah Symposium, an annual event at the UI, is funded from a grant in honor of former Sen. William E. Borah. The 1985 symposium will focus on South Africa.

Candidates at UI meeting

Candidates for local and area offices have been invited to speak at the Wednesday meeting of the Idaho Public Employees Association. The 7:30 p.m. meeting will be in the SUB Ballroom. It is open to the public.

Senate to hear reports

The ASUI Senate will either confirm or reject President Tom LeClaire’s appointment of Dean Boston to the open senate seat at the regular senate session Wednesday night.

LeClaire appointed Boston last week for a senate position that opened when Sen. Sally Lanham resigned at the beginning of the semester. Lanham is not attending the UI this semester.

ASUI Vice President John Edwards said that another item on the agenda is a presentation on tutoring services offered to UI students. The presentation will be made by Judy Wallins, Coordinator of Student Development Programs.

Group talks politics

With an election year reaching its climax and many other contemporary sensitive political issues elsewhere in the world, Students for Political Awareness (SPA) is making a stand. Still in its embryonic stages, several members of this political discussion group are starting to organize discussion topics and debates.

"Already we’ve had a meeting on Israel’s foreign policy," said Eric Phillips, president of SPA; "and we hope to attract the highest ranking Soviet official ever to defect from Russia when he comes to speak at Washington State University." Each week the group meets, hears a student’s presentation and then discusses it. SPA urges all to think about getting involved instead of just sitting by.

Edward said the senate will also discuss problems related to the planned Friday confirmation meeting date’s falling on the same day as the Certified Public Accountant exam for accounting majors.

Edward said the senate will probably hold an event marking the date, the vote stating that something must be done about this problem. He said that changing the commencement date was not fair for senior accounting majors, who should be able to participate in commencement day ceremonies.

See, Jane Freund, Chair of the Finance Committee, said that the committee will inform the senate of current fiscal situations of all ASUI departments.

Sets differences with Heliar
Craig speaks on issues, policies, election

By Chan Davis

The views of U.S. Rep. Larry Craig (R-Idaho) are quite different from the views of his opponent, Bill Heliar. Craig and Heliar disagree about wilderness, a balanced budget amendment, the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion.

As far as the wilderness issue is concerned, Craig believes that Idahoans are on his side. Craig supports adding a little more than a half million acres of wilderness and Heliar supports adding about 5.4 million acres.

"I believe that a substantial majority of Idahoans will accept a little more wilderness but not a great deal more," Craig said. He said Idahoans recognize a balance between wilderness and resource management.

The federally-owned lands in Idaho are the source of the state's wealth, Craig said. "Our timber grows on them, our minerals are under them, our fish propagate in the streams, we recreate on them, our cattle graze on them, our sheep graze on them," he said. "All the wealth of Idaho harkens back to these lands."

Craig is a UI graduate and a former ASU president. He earned a bachelor's degree in Political Science and Agricultural Economics in 1969. He was elected to the Idaho State Senate in 1974, representing Washington and Payette counties.

Craig served three terms before being elected as a U.S. representative in 1980. He created Congressional Leaders United for a Balanced Budget, which calls for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget.

Craig said this amendment would be the only way to force Congress to control its spending, just as spending of state legislators is controlled in 44 states, including Idaho.

"The House that I serve is in serious trouble, and in large part, liberal spenders who simply believe that the way you solve problems is through the government and by spending large volumes of money," Craig said.

"That's why we are trying to deal with a 1985 local budget that's nearly $200 billion in deficit."

Craig said the amendment would only balance the budget on an annual basis. "There would still be the large national deficit that has accumulated over the last 25 to 30 years and is some $1.7 trillion in size."

Craig said he believes that if the growth of government spending is held to about 3 percent annually for four or five years, the growth rate in the economy will bring in enough revenue to cause the federal budget to balance on its own.

"I believe that can be accomplished, and I think that the balanced budget amendment sets in place the time frame to accomplish that," Craig said.

There are some who oppose the amendment as my opponent does," Craig said. "They say you simply can't do it that way and you would undermine the power of the Constitution."

Craig said there are already laws on the books requiring the balance, but Congress simply bypasses them.

"The thing they cannot do is bypass the Constitution," he said.

Regarding equal rights for women, Craig does not believe that a constitutional amendment is necessary. "I think the laws are adequate on the books today to serve the needs of the citizens of this country," Craig said.

Craig said and he has supported the equal rights amendment but has been an active force for the rights of women. He supported and voted for the comparable worth bill that just passed in the House of Representatives.

"What I do not believe is necessary is the designation of specific groups for specific purposes," Craig said. "There are current laws adequate on the books today that when someone finds themselves being discriminated against for whatever reason, they have recourse to solve that problem of discrimination."

One of the toughest issues Craig has had to deal with is abortion. He said that from the standpoint of a public citizen, he has to make decisions in areas where he wishes he didn't have to. "I gauge my position in that clarity," Craig said. "I am opposed to the taking of life, to the arbitrary decision to take life, and therefore could only ever would would condone abortion in the case of the life of the mother."

In response to Heliar's comments on Craig's ratings with the National Federation of Independent Businessmen, Craig has high ratings with the National Taxpayers Union, he said.

According to Heliar, Craig had a 100 percent approval rating by the John Birch Society and a 0 percent rating by the NRA. Craig said the NRA is very pro-gun control, pro-gay rights and pro-unilateral nuclear freeze.
The tube can serve

Shame on you if you missed Sunday's debate between President Reagan and his challenger, former Vice-President Mondale. The debate, although such in name only, was one of but two occasions the voting public will have to see the candidates in a face-to-face encounter.

The debates, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, are an important part of the political process. They allow the electorate the opportunity to examine the presidential candidates without excessively overt politization. The American voter is all too often isolated from the political process by the sophistication of daily life; candidates no longer make "whistle-stop" tours, people don't find the time to follow the process as they should, the designation of the electoral process has made it difficult for a depersonalized and fragmented society to sensibly choose leaders.

Television is an effective tool for politicians: it gives them optimum coverage at a minimum effort and investment. The candidate who runs for office without really giving a damn about the public can use the tube as a convenient screen from the public who seeks to "serve" and can hide behind the anonymity the airwaves provide. Nor does the queuesy political need to worry about having to kiss dirty babies. Television, too, is ideal for the public in its allowance of individualism and isolation. It is where the majority of the population receives its political indoctrination and serves well the politician who wants to "reach" the public without actually getting to know the electorate: the medium fits the message.

American voters are indeed ill-served by television as a political tool. Television must redeem itself before the electorate. In the case of the debates which the league has chosen to sponsor, television is indeed its own redeemed, and that of the nation's American political process. Now wisdom and the future of the system demands that the public watch the debates and vote.

The tiny screen can serve well in these debates, and must do if the public is to have any kind of idea of what the substantive issues of this most important political season are all about.

Homecoming thoughts

Homecoming looms on the horizon on the UI. The traditional view of homecoming has always been that it is a time when alums return to campus, put on lambadges and raccoon coats and run around with "hubba hubba" on their lips and a pint of Smirnoff (or, Baccardi) in their bellies.

The traditional approach has much to recommend it. After all, returning to the scene of youthful limbo could be enjoyable. And who really cares if an insurance salesman from Revelstoke makes off with an arm of himself for a short weekend; who cares if sorority sisters from disparate places such as Bonner's Ferry and Paris stay up all night reminiscing? Homecoming is, has been and should be a good time — there's no disputing that.

There should be more, however. The university has scheduled a series of events over the upcoming weekend which will serve to show alums, parents and other visitors just what is going on at the university. The colleges are hosting functions, various departments are opening up for visitors, and, in general, the university is putting its collective best face on for our visitors. That's great, as it should be. But more is needed.

The financial busting suffered by the university during the last few legislative sessions must be made evident to our visitors. They should know, Life Science addition notwithstanding, that all is not rosy and cheerful in Vandalland. Our visitors, many of whom are in positions of power and influence in Idaho, should be apprised of what is going on at the old alma mater.

The returning alumni and visitors should be told what they can do to make things better. They have affections for the UI — we should let them show it. If for no other reason than to insure that there will be a place for homecoming celebrations in years to come.

Opinion

Now, N.O.W. girls...

"Revolution is not always bloodless. Women are willing to get equal rights over our dead bodies."

"By the year 2000 we will, I hope, raise our children to believe in human potential, not God..."

"Promises of immortal salvation or fear of eternal damnation are both illusory and harmful."

"Therefore it is important for us to encourage women to leave their husbands and not to live in individually with men... We must work to destroy it (marriage)."

"It's a dilemma. In order to raise children with equality, we must take them away from families and communally raise them."

What kind of twisted minds could spew out such sick ideology?

Answer: Sonia Johnson, Gloria Steinham, Betty Friedan and Mary Jo Bane of N.O.W. No, N.O.W. doesn't stand for National Organization for the World. It stands for the National Organization for Women, and the people named above are among the leaders of this feminist group.

Webster's Dictionary defines feminism as "the theory, cult, or practice of those who advocate such legal and social changes as will establish political, economic and social equality of the sexes." The "cult" which best represents the feminist view is N.O.W.

N.O.W. claims membership of 250,000 and purports to represent American women. The goal of the group, according to N.O.W. President Judy Goldsmith, is to "transform women's population majority into a feminist coalition that can dominate American politics."

Letters Policy

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on days prior to publication. Letters must be typed (double-spaced), signed in ink and must include the name, address, phone number and student id# number or driver's license number of the author. Letters will be edited for clarity and spelling. Letters should be limited to 200 words. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse letters that are libelous or in bad taste.
Letters

Truth: Only one way?

Editor: I read John Hecht's letter of Tuesday, September 28th and would like to comment on his view of truth.

From statements in Mr. Hecht's letter it is apparent that he sees truth as something relative: what is true for one is not necessarily true for another. Well, it would be nice if we could all run our own little show, but we happen to have other people to deal with. There is not much we can do that will not have some effect on someone else. It is necessary for orderly society that we live by some set of rules to insure that we get along. If we have no rules, or make up our own, chaos will reign. A situation somewhat like that of the United States today.

I don't think there is anyone who doesn't want to live in a bet- ter world. Mr. Hecht put it well when he wrote "...we are imper-fect humans..." By applying toward justice for end understand- ing others. We work together to become better people in a better society." But how do we decide when we have arrived at this state and how do we determine to better society? That standard should be based on morality.

Many, including Mr. Hecht, express the feeling of being "too close" and of "making up their own rules" when they ap- ply it to our national moral- ity. But the wrong side is being judged.

Morality comes from a higher source than any man. God should decide how we work it out. The people that believe in a "relativist truth" are the ones who attempt to be well-righteous and who make up their own rules. That kind of attitude will not work. Take a historical look at the task that used the "relativist truth" method and compare it with the reign of Solomon, when the people lived by God's laws and prospered for it.

One final comment on Mr. Hecht's letter: A society based on biblical principles is not a form of "moral totalitarianism" which is often a threat of "privacy and personal rights." And it is anything but "un-Christian." It is simply men living by the way men were meant to live.

Greg C. Dickson

There are absolutes:

Editor: Many adamant and Jesus creative people declare that there is no true morality which is not rational and absolute. They foster their deception by continuously rejecting the love of God for all men. The principle 1:18-33 explains that such rejection brings about a debased mind in the unbeliever. Then anything from homosexuality to abortion to psychiatric wards that leads to foolishness will result.

Tea Mondale and Ferraro sup- port the debased minds of America. It is ignorance which is not judicial and legislative. Mondale would have the public moral standards lowered by his veto powers against conservative legislation, power to appoint liberal Supreme Court justices and to ignore other presidential powers. Because of his stand, he will not find it easy running against Reagan but against the ab- solutes of the universe and their Creator (Reagan must face the same God).

It's let back to the true issue. It is an erroneous belief, with its holders full of apathy, that there exist black and white, no ash and white, especially when con- sidering one's legitimacy in Christian Jesus doesn't even toy around with the idea concerning anybody's position in relation- ship to Him. He says, "He who is not with me is against me. He who does not gather with Me scatters abroad." Now here the Lord is not declaring war with the Rebel except by excluding anybody from becoming one of the people. He doesn't care at all the certainty of anybody's present position towards Him. The Lord Jesus Christ gives only two choices: you may be radically committed to Him, you may choose to do anything else.

There exist many absolutes and here are a few. You cannot separate God from morals and you cannot separate the Lord from government. He is involved (actually in complete control) and that is why the liberal debased mind of the world can do to eliminate Him. My advice to America and its politicians is not to wait for Revelations 21:18 to be fulfilled in their life, but to re- peat and seek the loving com- passionate God while He may be found.

Volleyball salute

Editor: This weekend the UI Women's Volleyball team increased their MWAC standing to an undefeated 6-0. Shoup Hall would like to thank of the other residence halls for their appear- ance and support. We would also like to congratulate the Van- der Stool Boys on their successful season.

Michael Couch, president
Shoup Hall

First you register...

Editor: All U.S. students who have moved to Idaho for 30 days prior to Nov. 6, the day of election, are eligi- ble to register and vote in Latah County. If a person has moved from one precinct to another within the county, he or she must change the registration by writing to the County Clerk, Latah County Courthouse, Moscow, by October 26. Moving from one residence to another within the precinct does not af- fect one's permission to vote.

You can register until October 19. If you have a question Registrar, Russ Gree, 312. You can also stop by the Registrar's office (Wallace Complex), or until 26 at the Latah County Court- house. One way to help keep our democracy operating and free is by voting.

There has been some confu- sion concerning the races for Latah County Commissioner. There are two contests but all county voters vote in both con- tests. Though Moscow's popula- tion comprises over one-half the population of Latah County, and two-thirds of the registered voters of the county, there is no Moscow resident on the Board of County Commissioners. The Moscow precincts have been divided so that they are now split with rural populations — and this tends to handicap Moscow's representation.

There are many issues that af- fect students, faculty and staff in- volving the airport, water, sanitation, county parks, dog pounds, taxes, and possible city-county cooperation. If elected, I would be the only Moscow resi- dent, and also a U of 1 slum. Your vote will be appreciated.

Sharyn Caldwell
Candidate for Latah County Commissioner

Unfair to poor Frank

Editor: A thing happened last Tuesday, I picked up an issue of the Argonaut to discover that an old friend of mine was living in a bun-hung, drawn and quartered for alleged payroll improprieties committed last spring at the Argonaut. I thought it curious that Frank Hill had suddenly turned to a life of crime to sup- port his baseball card collection habit and decided to put him on the spot to tell me why it was his love life was treating him well. Yet, it seems that Frank was a bit lied. Just the act of suspicion, courtesy Michelle Brown's Communications Board, got out of Frank wondering how he was ever going to build a baseball card collection that would be soon offering him hun- dreds of jobs in the near future. My+ for such a wonderful bitchy floating around on his resume. I also learned that there nanes were never so fast and false rules set down by the Communications Board on methods of handing out the payroll checks at the Arg - that was all erased by the editor. Well, that just made me more curious. "What did you do it in order to get almost all of your editorial staff to deserve the media's version of the death penalty?" I asked, with some concern, for perhaps I was facing a new day Charles M. Wills. Frank couldn't quite pin it down and suggested that I work with our i- diosyncratic Attorney General turn- ed Prosecutor, Mr. Frank Fa- biano, where you can be when and where you want.

Well, not only did he not know, he most certainly didn't want to discuss it with a lowly student constituent — perhaps he felt too much under the convoluted politics of hate going on at the Great White ASUI Building. However, I believe I have a good idea what happened. It seems that Frank, in work- ing 12-14 hours a day down at the Argonaut had not informed the other members of his Student government that he was going to change some of the antique and radical policy, and got some of them rather miffed. So miffed, in fact that they decided to work on him and his entire editorial staff's, profes- sional standing by suspending him. Not a very wise move. But, I am not the kind of govern- ment you don't mess with. When I went to vote, I neither expected, nor wanted, my student government to decide who's in or out, and for anyone. Further, Frank Hill and his editorial staff faced with working for 16 hours to improve the operation of the Argonaut and treating them as criminals is a blatant lack of respect for their efforts and is not natural of the ASUI Senate nor the Com- munications Board. The Com- munications Board has observed due process under the laws we Americans live under, or displayed even a vestige of humanity in this case.

Steve Shiver Norman Young
A former UI student has chosen to be the new director of the university's Idaho Water Resources Research Institute.

George Bloomburg, who originally came to the UI in 1948 to study agricultural engineering, has replaced John Buch in the part-time position, but will continue to teach and do research in the Department of Agricultural Engineering on a half-time basis.

"We really decided to support the services of hiring an individual of Dr. Bloomburg's talent and experience to lead the Institute into a future where water research, technological applications and professional training in water-related areas are vital to our state," said A.R. Gillins, director of the Office of University Research.

"SPA templated and learned from its constitution, which was derived last year with special help from Lisa Vergo. SPA arch-chancellor, there are five major objectives for this political discussion group. The first is to conduct well-informed discussions on local, national and international issues. The second is to organize debates between the representatives of opposing viewpoints. The third and fourth are to request the presence of notable people to offer their expertise for the benefit of political awareness and to establish a working relationship with the faculty of the political science department at the UI, and to have a representative from SPA on their faculty council. The final objective is to explore the job opportunities in the field of political science.

"We're still petitioning for funds from the ASUI Activities Committee," said Renee Grimmelt, SPA secretary. "This is the first time we've ever really pushed membership drive.

"SPA does not want to be considered entirely a political science club. It wants to appear more eclectic. The name Students for Political Action scares people off," said Thiel. "They think it sounds like some terrorist organization. Last year several engineering students were actively involved. This year," said Thiel, "you get a more balanced approach to discussions."

"Just from my involvement thus far," claimed Grimmelt, "SPA has helped me look at issues from different political aspects than I normally would have. For more information on SPA contact Grimmelt, Thiel or Phillips."

"I remember my first house mother from when I was an undergraduate here," said Martin. "She was from the old school, very society, who felt that it was more important to learn the social graces, which more or less means to be a support group for your husband's career," Martin said. "She was a dear, and we all loved her, but she was basically inaccessible. We wouldn't ever think about going to her with, say, boyfriend problems." "Williams, because of my age. I'm more of a sister or a friend in my role as house mother," Martin said. "And believe me, with such a diversified group, this job is a good lesson in working with people."

From somewhere down the hall in the kitchen, a girl yelled, "I'm starved!" The natives were getting restless. Martin smiled, an exemplar of boundless energy and social grace. It was time to go back to work; the interview was over.

Spikers unstoppable

By Linda Winheim

The Idaho Spikers continued their reign of terror last weekend first on Weber State College on Friday and then Idaho State University on Saturday, both victories coming in three straight games.

The evening started slow for the Vandals, who were played out by numerous out-of-bounds plays and trailed 4-0. However, senior server Julie Holtsinger quickly brought the score up to 4-4 with four unanswered points. The UI outers trailed again until they reached an 8-8 tie.

They began to trail again until they pulled ahead for good at 13-12. There were three more exchanges, but the UI team came out on top with a score of 15-12.

Game two was uneventful as the Vandals showed their strength and took the game 15-3.

Game three turned out to be a test of strength, quickness, and determination. The Vandals wanted the game more. In the opening minutes of the game, Jenny Frazier started the momentum when she served an ace down the middle of the court.

Weber then made two crucial mistakes when they failed to make two return due to each member not knowing who was going to take the ball. The score was then brought up to 6-2 in favor of UI.

Weber rallied back and tied the game at 10-10. The lead continued to change hands until it rested at 17-10, favor of Weber State.

Frazier began the serving and the UI Vandals took the lead and scoured three unanswered points, ending the game and the match at 19-17. Vandals Coach Pam Bradetich said the Vandals made up their minds to win. She said the women expect to win at home. She did praise Kelley Nelly as the best server though. Bradetich also commended Kelley Gibbons. Bradetich said that when Gibbons wanted a kill she went and got it.

Bradetich said the Vandals worked hard together as a team, and they continued to be successful in their drive for victory when they met Idaho State the next night.

However, it took four games this time before the women again tasted sweet victory. The UI took the first game at 15-9. In game two, the Vandals fell victim to the hounding of ISU, and Idaho was defeated 13-15.

But the Vandals women came back and took the next two sets 15-4 and 15-4.

Although ISU is a young team, made up primarily of freshmen and sophomores, the Bengals challenged the Vandals, and Bradetich had nothing but praise for ISU. She said, "They're going to be good in the next coming years." She said that they are a better all-around team than the Vandals.

Comparing them, Bradetich believed ISU played "better at times than Weber State." Although UI performance was down from that of the night before, Bradetich said the Vandals hustled in many instances. She also cited the team as being "all contributors." As for her substitute players, Bradetich said, "I feel I can put anybody in."

The Vandal conference record now holds at 4-0. ISU has fallen to 1-3 in conference and Weber now stands at 0-3.

Vandals seek continued victory

By Linda Winheim

The UI women's volleyball team hopes to continue its success at home and on the road as they return to the road this Thursday to face conference rival Boise State University. Along with the UI and Portland State, Boise State is considered one of the top three teams in the Mountain West Athletic Conference. But the Vandals have beaten Boise twice this season, in non-conference action on the road.

In Boise's advantage is that the game will be played on their home turf. UI will face "very basic and a very consistent" play by Boise, Coach Pam Bradetich said.

In their past four conference matches, the Vandals have been victorious. They took home a pair of wins from Montana State and the University of Montana, a feat that had never before been accomplished by any UI volleyball team.

The Vandals returned home to the court with a 1-3 conference record, and are looking to continue winning with victories over Weber State College and Idaho State University.

The match up with the Broncos, the Vandals will get one day to rest off and then off for more conference competition with Portland State University on Saturday.

UI will be on Portland's home turf, and they are the only conference team UI hasn't faced yet this season.

Bradetich said she wants to "challenge PSU because they really haven't been challenged yet this year." She added that the PSU team is ranked second in the nation for a Division 2 team.

The Vandals almost stole a game back Saturday afternoon, only to fall 23-17 to Nevada-Reno after all but giving the Wolfpack the ball in the first half. In fact, the contest came down to the last play, as sophomore quarterback Scott Linehan threw a long 40-yard "Hail Mary" pass that was knocked away. Vandals receivers Kevin Juma and Brent Benjen at the last moment.

"We just needed three or four more minutes, and you better believe this one would have been ours," Linehan said. "I didn't play well early when we were beating ourselves, but physically I had no problems all day." He was referring to the shoulder injury that has kept him out of action the past three weeks.

Linehan made his first start since Fullerton State, couldn't shake the cobwebs in the first half as he threw for three interceptions, two of which led to Wolfpack scores. A Vandal fumble also led to UNR score in the first quarter.

After opening with a 48-yard drive, the Wolfpack had a 21-10 lead at the half. Linehan said he was in control of an interception, a fumble, one more interception and a missed field goal from 46 yards to end the nightmare first half.

The Wolfpack's Eric Beavers and Johnny Gooden found pay dirt in the first half along with Myndy Zendejas, whose two field goals gave the back-to-back champions 20-3 going into the lockerroom.

Except for Zendejas' NCAA Division II record 123 straight field goal, the third quarter was a penalty denting between Vandal Darin Magnupson and Reno's Dave Dales and the Vandals found themselves 20 points down going into the fourth quarter. The Vandals got their aerial act together in the fourth quarter as Linehan led the Vandals on an impressive 86-yard drive, capping it off with a littleazzle.

Linehan pitched to Marlon Barlow, who headed for the right side, then pitched back to Juma, who raked around a pack of confused wolves and scored from 12 out.

After McMonigle hit his 100th straight PAT, the Vandals had closed the game to 23-10 with the momentum definitely with them. At the end of the game Linehan would later say the welfare of the ballgame was at hand.

With the ball at their own 37, Linehan hit McKee for 25 to the 10. Linehan wanted running back Hertz to "brush it out on the field to differ with the referees, who..."

The Vandals rebounced back from the "homer" call as the defense once again shut down the Wolfpack and the Vandals started their last touchdown drive. Two fourth and long successes enabled the Vandals to drive deep into Wolfpack territory.

With second and four from the four, Linehan pitched to Bowser, who shotputted the ball to a wide open Bengen for the final score and thus setting up the Vandals last ditch effort.

"We had 42 seconds down the stretch," Erickson said. "I knew we'd have to score to win. It was going to be a good shot at making the playoffs," Erickson said.

The Vandal coaching staff for the rest of the year...
Harriers slip at Whidby
By Mike Long

The loss by the UI men's cross country team at the Fort Casey Invitational last Saturday was described as terrible and a disaster by head Coach Scott Koeck.

The team didn't place in the top seven among the 12 or 13 teams that were represented at the meet and the many individuals who competed on their own.

"As I said before, we had a couple of questions that turned into real problems," Loren said. Those two questions were, "whether or not Chris Schulte and James Ten ment would be able to perform due to knee problems."

They were not able and according to Loren, Tennent will be okay, but Schulte will probably be out for a little while and this will hurt the team. "We're not like a football team where we can replace them."

WHEN SOMEONE GETS HURT IT LEAVES A BIG HOLE IN THE TEAM," Loren said. "It's not just our team. All cross country teams are like this."

Though the picture was not entirely bleak for the UI harriers, "Tom Bohannon ran a super race and placed ninth," Loren said. "He ran probably the best race of his college career on Saturday."

"He really carried the flag for us. Chris Williams also really came around for us. However, he was our second man when he should have been our fifth or sixth," he said.

"Jim McKeen, Kirk Messer-Smith and Michael Con treras had bad days and we made a really bad showing for the first big one of the season. The University of Montana took first and made a really good showing," Loren added.

"They will probably give the University of Nevada Reno a run for the conference title this year."

He went on to say that it "was not like a lost cause" and though it was a bad showing, the season wasn't over yet by any means.

Loren hopes to have the team pulled together by the two weeks they have inbetween this last meet and the next one that Loren feels is important at the University of Washington Invitational.

The training for the UI team has been going really well according to Loren and the reason the team didn't perform well was because the team "was flat."

"We're starting to race more often -- the team will be at Eastern Washington University [next weekend] and this will test the team," Loren said. "But it's not the final grade. We do have some time [before Seattle] and hopefully we can turn it around.

"We're still optimistic about the rest of the season."

Blue Mountain successful

The UI Blue Mountain Rugby team grabbed its first victories of the season this weekend when it defeated Gonzaga University 22-0 in a full game and then 4-0 in a short game.

The win follows on the heels of defeat by Washington State University which was a practice game, but also the UI team's first game.

"Blue Mountain played better than in the past game," said Lance Levy, a member of the team. Levy contributed two tries, and four points a piece, to the team score.

He followed them with two successful conversions for another four points. His teammate, Edward Peterson and Shawn Lally each contributed one try apiece and Peterson made his conversion.

This weekend, the team travels to Seattle with WSU, Eastern Washington University and Gonzaga to the University of Washington for a round-robin competition which will also include Western Washington University and St. Martin's College. This will be the UI's first league play of the season in the Pacific Northwest Rugby Football Union College Division.

Then, on Sunday, the UI team members will have a chance to try out for the Washington College Representative Side, which is made up of players under 24 from the colleges competing in Seattle, and which faces a match later this fall against the Oregon College Rep Side.

PSU also possesses two All-American Division II setters, Linda Johnson and Theresa Hutchings.

Bredtch said that for her team to be ready for the upcoming weekend they must play a little more consistently and intensely.

Nettens win at WSU

By Mike Long

The UI men's and women's tennis teams played their usual fall matches with Washington State University last Saturday and broke even with one team winning and one losing. The Vandals women swamped the Cougars 9-0 while the men were felled by WSU 5-4. "This was our first and only match of the fall and we usually wait until we get a weekend of nice weather and then we plan it on short notice," Head Coach Jim Sellerv said.

Pulling in the wins for the women during the singles games were freshman Anna Delacreve who defeated Kelley Radcliff 6-3, 6-4. Holly Renova defeated Stacey DeMar 6-2, 6-0; Trish Smith defeated Whitney Wright 6-2, 6-1; Jane Strommen defeated Liz Helt 6-3, 6-4. Karen Wagner defeated Jille Mitchell 6-4, 6-4; Pam Waller defeated Kristi Blackfield 6-1, 6-3; Sheila Moore and John Baccs defeated Ken Parsley and Collette Rutherford 7-5, 6-2 and 6-4, 6-7, 6-4 in a tiebreaker.

In the doubles, the match-up of Smith and Wagner defeated Radcliff and Mitchell 6-4, 6-7; Delacreve and Baccs defeated Blackfield 6-0, 6-2; Strommen and Weller defeated DeMar and Jill Walter 6-1, 6-2. "Everyone on the women's team played pretty well and we should be major contenders in the Mountain West Athletic Conference," Sellerv said. "It was good beating WSU after losing close matches to them over the years."

However, he was disappointed with the results of the men's team. The men came up with only two of the six singles matches and only two of the three doubles matches. UI winners in the singles matches were junior college transfer Guillermo Alvarez who defeated Bill Stevens 7-6, 6-4 and Skosh Berwald who defeated Mike Lim 6-4, 4-3, 6-3.

Losers on the UI side were Bob Hlavacsko who was defeated by Ed Granger 6-3, 2-6, 6-4; Ephraim DalleGagon was defeated by Burke Melville 5-7, 6-4, 7-5; Nate Jones was defeated John Anderson 7-5, 6-4 and Pat Brown was defeated by Davey Philbrick 4-6, 7-5, 6-1.

The winning doubles pairs were Hlavacsko and DalleGagon who defeated Stevens and Granger 8-6, 6-4, 7-6 and Alvarez and Berwald who defeated Philbrick and Melville 6-1, 6-5 in a tiebreaker.

Highway Force had one of the harder weeks of the season. Nate Onsager defeated Mike Wagner 4-6, 6-2, 6-1; Mike Wagner defeated Nate Onsager 6-3, 6-0.

Women cast featured in Canadian Play

By Carolyn Beanley

The troubles of five women in wartime Canada are explored in an all-Canadian, all-female cast in "Waiting for the Parade" at the Queen's Theatre. Each woman gets a chance to prove her talents to the audience by having her story told a little at a time.

"Waiting for the Parade" is based on real-life events of women who served in the military in World War II. The play explores the challenges and triumphs of these women as they fight for their country during a time of great change and uncertainty.

The cast includes: Barbara Reiner, Janet Thompson, Catherine Martin, Janie невозможное, and Sue Thompson. Each character represents a different type of woman and their stories add up to a powerful and moving portrayal of the war and its impact.

The play highlights the importance of women's roles in the war effort and the sacrifices they made. It is a story of love, loss, and courage that will resonate with audiences today.

"Waiting for the Parade" is a must-see for anyone interested in history, women's rights, or the power of storytelling.
Air Supply performs at WSU in Coliseum

By Gayle Mansfield

They were here. The love-song group of the '80s, that mellow group from Australia — Air Supply — was on the Palouse.

But mellow? By no means. Air Supply can rock "n' roll just as well as the next guy. But their rock music has a theme: love.

And the love the group expressed was returned by the Washington/Idaho audience Saturday night. WSU's Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum may not have been full, but Air Supply had enthusiastic, fanatic, electrified fans.

The concert was electrifying in many more ways than one. The light display, shown continuously during the concert, was thrilling. Red, green, blue and purple lights highlighted the stage, setting the tone for serious love ballads or for rocking pains of the heart.

Optical illusions kept the audience spellbound and screaming in delight.

Known for their romantic love songs, Air Supply electrifies a serious theme into a hand-clapping, foot-stomping adventure. Songs like "Lost in Love" turned into rockers like "Black and Blue," a new song, probably from their next album, which should be released in January.

If the album is anything like the concert, we'll hear a new side to Air Supply. Although ballads such as "Here I Am," All Out of Love and "Sweet Dreams" have put Air Supply at the top of the charts, in last year's hit, "Making Love Out of Nothing at All," we got a glimpse of the group's other side — still singing love songs, but with a rocking, heavy beat.

The group's two vocalists, Russell Hitchcock and Graham Russell, were energetic and vigorous Saturday night. Hitchcock's tenor and strong, full voice oriented the audience. The quality of his voice shifted at just the right moments, changing from tender and quiet to alive and full.

Russell, on the other hand, was hard to understand at times. He is a great guitarist, but his soft voice was too soft. He sang some lovely, romantic ballads, but the words were drowned out by the band's music. Audience members could probably make out the words of the old, familiar songs, but on the new songs it was virtually impossible to tell what he was saying. Air Supply fans will love to buy the album to find out what he missed.

Oh, well, Air Supply was at the Coliseum. They not only gave a concert, they gave enthusiastic entertainment. If you didn't go to the concert, be sure to someday attend an Air Supply concert. Sure they sang about love all the time — finding, enjoying it, losing it. But their songs have meaning for everyone. People who are in love fall in love again; people who aren't are inspired with hope that one day they, too, will know love.

Female Rhythm and Blues singers perform at UI this weekend.

Teresa Trull and Barbara Higbie perform in the SUB Ballroom Oct. 12 at 9 p.m.

The concert featuring the two musicians is co-sponsored by More Music for Moscow and the women's centers of UI and Washington State University.

The duo has been called a "mashing pair." Trull's vocals are reminiscent of Carole King, Joni Mitchell and Rickie Lee Jones. Higbie, "a multi-instrumental white," brings piano, violin and vocals to this Homecoming weekend concert.

The pair recently recorded and co-produced Unexpected, on the Second Wave label, a subsidiary of the Oakland based Clivia Records. Trull has recorded two other albums under the Clivia label: The Ways a Woman Can Be and Let it Be Known. She has performed and recorded with Joan Beten and Meg Christian.

Higbie has studied at the Sorbonne in Paris. She compiled most of the material on the duo album she recorded with Darol Anger in 1982.

Tickets to Trull and Higbie's concert are $7 in advance and $8 at the door. They are available at Bookpeople and Guitar's Friend in Moscow, The Old Mole and The Combination Store in Pullman and at the women's centers at UI and WSU.

All the Way Home Shares new language

By Paul Allcoe

The National Theater of the Deaf presents All the Way Home, a Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway play, in the WSU Coliseum Oct. 11 at 8 p.m. The production, which combines the talents of ten deaf and three hearing actors, is a unique blend of sign language and spoken words.

"About half of the words are spoken, and the other half of them are conveyed through expressive sign language that almost anyone can understand," said Laine Dyer, director of publicity for the national theater. But the theater of the deaf isn't just for those who can't hear. According to Dyer, about 65 percent of their average audience can hear.

"The theater should appeal to anyone with human interests," she said.

As part of the Palouse Performance Series, the producers promise to make their audience laugh and cry, all the way home. This fall's production, All The Way Home, by Ted Moel, is based upon the complexities of love and loss in war.

As presented from a child's view, the play follows the plight of a Kentucky family which is jolted by the sudden death of one of its members. This production is especially significant for Colleen Dewhurst, the producer, and David Hays, the artistic director, because they both worked on the original version, when it played on Broadway in the early '60s," Dyer said.

Hays was the set designer and Dewhurst was an actress in the first version, which helped Dewhurst to win her first Tony Award in 1961, Dyer said.

Founded in 1967, the theater now operates out of its center in Chester, Conn., from which the theater produces 40 plays a season, throughout the United States and abroad.

"Every two years we return to a different section of the country for either the spring or fall performances. This fall we are touring the West from Sept. 28 to Nov. 24," Dyer said.

In the past, the theater has performed in the Orient. Last year they had several productions in Europe.

Dyer said this year the company is hoping to go to China. "Not only do we perform in these foreign countries. We have helped set up theaters of the deaf abroad, in both Japan and Iran," she said.

The National Theater of the Deaf also gives nearly 100 performances for children, called the Theater for Deaf Children.

"We've played all sorts of stories for children, who are some of our most receptive audiences. One favorite is A Christmas Carol" Dyer said.

The theater which is funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Department, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Connecticut Commission for the Arts and private donations - pays its actors for its performances.

Tickets for Saturday's performance are on sale at the SUB In Desk and range in price from $5 to $10.

students are sneaking off from high school to enlist.

Next is Marta, played by Cheryl Drobish. She is the daughter of a wealthy German. Although she is suspected of being a German sympathizer, Marta must survive accounting difficulties and remarks.

"I have to play this first time a Canaan drama has been performed at UI," said Canadian Director Randy Ritt. Another unusual aspect of the play is that all the women are on stage most of the time, and each woman has designated a speech.

Marta, played by Chris Drobish, and Catherine, performed by Laura Thompson, do their own lines in Waiting for the Parade. The characters develop.

This type of illusion is accomplished by using lights. When a particular area is emphasized, it is illuminated.

Because of music interludes for changing scenes and solid props that relate to each character, the play is easy to follow and leaves the audience members with the feeling that they have a part in making each

Are you ready?
New Artist, dancers work with American Festival Ballet Co.

The ballet is back in town. The American Festival Ballet performs a mini-season of five short ballets Oct. 13 at 8 p.m. in Bryan Hall at Washington State University.

The program includes Irish Air, a light and soft opening piece; the classic Sleeping Beauty Pas de Deux, a humorous intruder, The Girl with the Flaxen Hair, and two major works, Affair of Concor, and Symphony C by Bizet.

Performing the Sleeping Beauty Pas de Deux, and the lead roles in Affair of Concor, will be Duncan Vere Schute and Monica Mudgatt. They are a husband and wife team who have been principal dancers and guest artists with the New Orleans Ballet, the San Diego Ballet, the Cincinnati Ballet and the Arizona Ballet.

Duncan was trained in Europe by Rudolf Nureyev, one of the world's leading male dancers, for a role in Swan Lake.

The new artistic director is Marius Izra. He has directed four European ballet companies, choreographed more than 20 ballets and operas and toured as performer and director to France, China, Russia, Italy, Spain, Greece, Germany and Austria.

Since immigrating to the United States in 1976, Izra has choreographed, directed and taught for the California Ballet, the San Diego Ballet and the College-San Diego Theatre.

"I wish to leave everyone in the theatre changed by our performances," Izra said. "Ballet must have beauty, but also much impact — something for the audience to remember and talk about."

For the performance, the American Festival Ballet's new, cutting-edge facility at 820-5208, is ready to present its first major work. The company's first full-length program will be presented Oct. 13 in Bryan Hall at WSU.

EARN OVER $1,000 A MONTH AND OPEN THE DOOR TO A TOP ENGINEERING FUTURE

How many corporations would be willing to pay you over $1,000 a month during your junior and senior years just so you'd join the company after graduation? Under a special Navy program we're doing just that. It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-College Program. And under it, you'll not only get great pay during your junior and senior years, but after graduation you'll receive a year of valuable graduate-level training that is not available from any other employer.

If you are a junior or senior majoring in math, engineering or physical sciences, find out more today. And let your career pay off while you still in college.

We want you to start at the top. Then work your way up.

You can be part of the greatest alliance in American business history — Electronic Data Systems and General Motors. This alliance combines the information processing strengths of EDS with the resources of the largest company in the nation. And with it comes vast opportunities for you — the kind that business professionals can spend their entire careers seeking.

You're already starting at the top with our outstanding resources for growth and success. And the only way to go is up.

We're looking for self-starters — people with the confidence to set high goals and the determination to reach them. We want to put you at the core of EDS' operations as a Systems Engineer. EDS Systems Engineers use both business and technical skills to solve complex problems for our clients. And every EDS Systems Engineer has graduated from our nationally-recognized Systems Engineering Development (SED) Program.

The SED Program will prepare you for the leadership responsibilities you will have in the EDS-GM alliance. It lasts approximately 18 months and will undoubtedly be one of the most rigorous and rewarding business experiences of your life. You'll receive intensive classroom training, and you'll also have the chance to deal directly with our customers. You'll gain knowledge that will place you far ahead of your peers. And when you graduate, you'll have an exciting position with unlimited growth potential.

To qualify for the SED Program, you must be a college graduate with a technical aptitude and an outstanding record of achievement. You should have a major in Management Information Systems, Computer Information Systems, Computer Science, or Engineering. We will also consider candidates with any academic major and a strong interest in business and information processing. In addition, you must be flexible to relocate and travel. Finally, you must be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident. If you are a successful candidate, EDS will reward you with a competitive compensation package. And you're sure to thrive in our corporate environment where rewards are based on achievement — not seniority.

Take the first step toward joining the greatest alliance in American business history.
