White separatist Butler addresses law school class

By Beaugan Davis

Richard Butler, pastor of the Church of Jesus Christ-Christian of Hayden Lake, claims he is not a white supremacist.

"Let's get the terms straight. I am a white separatist," Butler told a UI constitutional law class Monday.

"The term supremacist presupposes you have to have slaves to tax yourself over," he added.

Butler, responding to the Idaho Tax Commission's recent challenge of the organization's tax-exempt status before about 50 law students, he claims that his church is the victim of discrimination.

The Idaho State Tax Commission ordered Butler's church to file six years worth of back taxes from 1976 to 1981 when it lost its corporate status.

However, Butler said the action has stripped his organization of its freedom-of-religion constitutional rights. The First Amendment of the Constitution not only guarantees freedom from religion, but freedom in religion as well, he said.

"The idea that ours is a government of laws, not men is wrong," Butler explained. The history of the world as the history of governments, he added, The Civil War, World War I, World War II and the Vietnam War are all public policies that were not in the best interest of the public, he said.

A former engineer for Boeing, Butler left his job and migrated to northern Idaho to become the leader of the group which proclaims the supremacy of the white race and condones population segregation.

According to Butler, he moved to North Idaho to get away from the "multi-cultural society of today."

During an appearance at the UI College of Law, Butler said many feel as he does.

"Thousands feel as I do," Butler said. "Why else would 21,872 people from all over the state's law schools currently admit that they would not feel that way?"

No more easy A's: Idaho universities may plan to establish new freshman admission guidelines

By Gary Lundgren

Thousands of Idaho high school students could be bidding "easy" class grades goodbye — at least if they plan to attend one of the state's colleges or universities.

A statewide Committee on Higher Education Admission and Retention recently unveiled a proposal calling for more rigorous admissions guidelines for the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark State College, Boise State University and Idaho State University.

The Board of Education, which received the report at its October meeting in Moscow, is seeking comments from colleges, secondary schools and interested groups.

According to Linda Staley, chairman of the statewide committee, the board has established a Dec. 23 deadline for written reports. On Jan. 17, a public hearing is scheduled and the board is expected to vote on the plan the next day. The January meetings will probably be held in Boise.

If the board approves the new admission standards, the longstanding tradition of open admissions at Idaho's colleges and universities will be broken.

The state's colleges and universities currently admit all graduates from Idaho's accredited high schools regardless of grade point average, class rank or test scores.

Under the statewide committee's recommendations, these casual standards will be tightened significantly.

In 1988, admissions standards would demand eight credits of English, four credits of algebra or geometry and four credits of natural science. A high school credit is awarded for each semester a high school student passes. Therefore, an eight-credit requirement requires four years of study.

The committee's required classes basically match those outlined under the state's new high school graduation requirements. In 1990, the admission standards would exceed the graduation requirements with six credits required in both math and natural science. The graduation standards require four credits of math and science.

The recommendations also strongly suggest a student pursue a foreign language in addition to the four required humanities credits.

Under the recommendations, students would also have to earn a 2.0 high school grade point average; out-of-state applicants would need a 2.5 GPA. Scores from the standardized ACT or SAT tests would also be required.

Public schools top board news

BOISE — Idaho’s public school system will command the attention of State Board of Education members during their monthly meeting Thursday and Friday.

Discussion will center around the “C” average graduation requirement for high school students Thursday afternoon when the board meets in the Capitol High School auditorium, according to Kim Phillips, public information officer.

The requirement, which was adopted by the board two years ago, went into effect this fall. The graduation stipulates high school students must hold a cumulative GPA of “C” in some 15 core classes.

Public school budgets and a career ladder for public school teachers will also be discussed by the board.

The meeting will begin Thursday morning, with board members joined by Idaho Gov. John Evans for a breakfast meeting. Following breakfast, the Personnel/Administrative, the Legislative/Academic Affairs and the Finance subcommittees will meet in the board office through the morning. Lunch will be held for members at the Liberty Elementary School.

A review of the meeting with the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges and a report from the Southwest Task Force on Vocational Education will start Friday’s meeting.

Annual reports will also be presented from the Idaho Educational/Public Broadcasting System and the State School for the Deaf and the Blind. In addition, hearings will be conducted on repealing exceptions to the five-year residency requirement for special or professional programs, and for establishing a part-time student fee at Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School.

Alumni Office selling cards

Christmas cards are available from the UI Alumni Office. A reproduction of an All-Diurn original watercolor showing carriers sitting at the Administration Building entrance is used on the front of the card with a message inside.

The sale of the cards continues a tradition begun 10 years ago when the cards were first printed.

The price is $5.50 per dozen or 50 cents each. Orders can be sent through campus mail or by U.S. mail, as well as being available during regular office hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

If the cards are to be sent through U.S. Mail, there is a $2.50 charge for postage and handling.

Money netted to fight hunger

With money still coming in, the drive for world hunger at the University of Idaho has already topped the $4,600 mark, according to Yvonne Slute, administrative secretary at the Campus Christian Center.

A check from the UI Food Services for $755 has been received for the meals donated by UI students on Nov. 15, the national day of fasting under the slogan, “Fast For A World Harvest.”

Campus and community persons who attended the “Thanksgiving Observance” held at St. Augustine’s Catholic Center placed $1,933 in the collection plates for world hunger. Houses and groups which gave up meals are still bringing in checks. Thus far, Steele House, the latter Days Senior Student Association, Delta Gamma, Pi Kappa Alpha, Alpha Gamma Delta and Delta Chi have sent in the funds they saved by giving up a meal as a living group.

Additional funds have been contributed directly through the UI to OXFAM, the international relief organization through which the three sponsoring religious centers channel the funds.

The fund drive was carried out by the Hunger Action Committee made up of representatives of St. Augustine’s Catholic Center, the LIO Fraternity of Relocation and the Campus Christian Center, as well as persons from the community. Contributions can still be made by directing checks to OXFAM-AMERICA at the Campus Christian Center.

Senate special meeting tonight

By Holly Rickett

The ASUI Senate will hold a special session tonight before inaugurating seven new senators Wednesday, according to ASUI Vice President Boyd Wiley.

“We just need to wrap up some things before the new senate comes in. Most of the last bills have to do with housekeeping issues,” Wiley said.

The meeting will be held in the Chief’s Room in the SUB at 7 p.m.

The inauguration of the newly elected senators will be held on Wednesday night at 7 p.m., also in the Chief’s Room.

Senators who will not be returning next semester will give their last communications at this meeting. Afterwards the seven new senators will be sworn into the positions that they will hold for one year.

Nearly elected ASUI President Iene Freund and Vice President Mike Trail will also take their oaths at Wednesday night’s meeting.

 Afterwards there will be a short session to appoint the senators to the respective committees, boards, colleges and living groups that they will be representing during their term.

Everyone is welcome to attend either of the sessions.

Center plans Xmas program

Separate programs on “holiday blues” and how to organize one’s life are on tap this week at the UI Women’s Center. Both presentations begin at 12:30 p.m.

On Dec. 4, Joan Pulakos will talk about the phenomenon of holiday blues. She will explore why many people are depressed on Thanksgiving, Christmas and the times between.

Pulakos will also examine why rates of suicide and domestic violence inversely rise during those weeks and will take a look at what can be done to combat holiday blues.

Pulakos is a counselor at the UI Student Counseling Center. She earned her bachelor’s degree from the University of New Mexico, and her master’s and doctorate from Washington State University.

On Dec. 5, Glenda Hawley, Moscow counselor and consultant, will discuss “Clustering: A Unique Approach to Organizing Your Life and Ideas.” A stress management program, Hawley will describe “mind mapping,” a method for personal brainstorming and organizing new ideas, which draws on the right side of the brain.

The right side of the brain speaks in symbols, and clustering draws upon such knowledge to help a person understand themselves and their life, said Hawley.

Theopphilus loan fund created

A student loan fund endowment was recently established at the UI from the estate of Donald R. Theophilus, Jr., a former Moscow resident and 1953 UI journalism graduate. Theophilus, who died in Hawaii in August 1983, was the son of former UI President Donald Theophilus.

In his will, Theophilus asked that the sum of $2,000 be given to the university to "establish a student loan fund to be called the Donald R. Theophilus, Jr. Student Loan Fund Endowment." Interest from the fund will be used to provide student loans.

A Moscow High School graduate, Theophilus served with the U.S. Air Force in Japan after completing his bachelor's degree at the UI. He earned his master's degree from Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in 1959.

Theophilus worked for American Airlines in New York City, then went to Harvard as assistant dean of the graduate school of business. He received a doctorate in higher education from the University of Michigan in 1967, and spent two years at the University of Washington, where he was assistant professor of higher education and assistant to the dean of the college of education.

In 1969, he went to the University of Kentucky as vice president of academic and faculty affairs and professor of education. He was on leave from a seminar session and continuing education during that year and retired.

Contributions to the Theophilus fund can be made to the UI Office of Financial Affairs.

UI studying acid rain

Work being done by the UI on the causes of acid rain will be continued for another year because of a $95,000 research grant recently received by the chemistry department.

The project is part of the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Program of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The study has been underway for two years.

Institute to offer peace degree

By Megan Guido

Boyd Martin is dedicated to peace in this world, and he believes the only way it can be achieved is by studying the causes of war.

"I don't think there's any question that the only way we'll achieve peace is through education," he said.

Martin was the Dean of the UI College of Letters and Science from 1955-70 and has taught political science at the UI and Stanford. He is now director of the Boyd and Grace Martin Institute of Human Behavior at the UI.

The institute had humble beginnings. In 1959, on the day Hitler invaded Poland, Martin was sitting in a staff meeting at Stanford. "I was the only one who felt it was the beginning of World War II," he said.

That same day, he talked with his now deceased wife, Grace. "We decided something had to be done about war or else men would cease to exist."

So they took the $600 in their bank account and invested it to finance an institute that would study the causes of war and terrorism.

After years of careful investment, the Martin fund has increased to more than $1 million.

In 1979 Martin signed papers with the Idaho Board of Education to establish the institute. He doesn't think most students even know they're on the campus, said Martin. The institute is located in the basement of the Continuing Education Building.

"I think peace is an academic field," he said. Six courses, including The Causes of War, are offered by the institute this year.

But now Martin has a bigger goal. He has devised a master's and doctoral program in peace and is devoting all of his time to seeing that the program is implemented.

"As far as I know," he said, "no other university in the world is prepared to give a Ph.D. in peace."

He is now raising funds for the program and has applied to foundations and corporations for money.

"Everything really depends on our being able to raise money," Martin said. The program will be expensive. He envisions the institute becoming comparable to a college, consisting of 60 graduate students and 15 faculty members. Students and faculty would be recruited on a world-wide basis.

An added expense would be scholarships that would be made available to students.

"We won't spend as much money, though," Martin said. "But the Pentagon will in a second," he said. A donation into the institute is not easy. Students from the United States and foreign countries must have at least a $4,000 average and a background in a variety of courses, including computer science and statistics.

"What we want is an intelligent, mature student," he said.

During their final year, students would be assigned to a "conflict area of the world." This would probably constitute their doctoral thesis, Martin said. Majoring in one of these geographical areas, a student would be required to study the culture, economy, languages, geography, politics, history and religions of the area.

"They have to know those people so well," Martin commented. A lot is expected of the faculty too. He said, "They are expected to monitor certain areas of the world, teach and engage in extensive research.

According to Martin, many students and faculty members have already applied.

"We think our program is absolutely sound."

Right now the program is in front of the UI Graduate Council for study. The only obstacle standing in Martin's way is money.

"We've got to get people to recognize the need of it," said Martin, "and we'll get the money. Americans are very generous."

"This isn't all just pie in the sky," he added. "This is practical."

Talking about football, cars and Jesus Christ

At times I'll be in the mood for good conversation, and will take long walks along the railroad tracks. During these quiet walks I give thanks to God for His patience and the many blessings given to me.

My heart is in prayer for my friends, classmates and professors to know Jesus.

After my prayer walk, sometimes I'll make a visit to the dormitories and talk with friends and strangers, "Are you a Christian?" Some people like to talk about cars or football, but I like to talk about Jesus.

The replies usually fall into the following categories, which are examples of actual answers I have heard.

1. "Well, I'm a Catholic!" (Baptist, Methodist or other.)
2. "My mom goes to church all the time."
3. "Uh, I guess so."
4. "I dunno."
5. "Yes, but I keep to myself about it."
6. "No!"
7. "You bet Jesus is my Lord!"

My two favorite answers are 6 and 7. I like number 7 because the person who knows Jesus, talks about Jesus. No conversation is sweeter than that of two Christians, sharing how their lives were changed and are changing still.

I love number 6 because they are quick to the point. They know where they stand spiritually, on a toboggan slide to Hell. Sinner are honest about their past, unlike many of today's "social" Christians. The "No" people always have the best stories and arguments and are fun to listen to. One of those "No" people from last year is now a good Christian friend.

Answers 1 and 2 are ugly. They are gambling eternal life on their church association or, even worse, their mother's church association. Imagine those folks standing outside the poorly gatet of Heaven saying, "Hey Lord, let me in. My mom went to church all the time. I put money in a Salvation Army pot every Christmas. Doesn't that make me a Christian?"

Responses 3, 4, and 5 are usually short visits. They often slammer and look down at the floor when they reply, while hiding dirty magazines and beer bottles. They avoid talking about God and tell me they were baptized 15 years ago. Seems the unsure person considers religion like taking a "get out of Hell free card" that can be presented to God on Judgement Day. When they pull the card out of their pocket, they will find the small print reads, "must renew daily."

A good pastor once said, "If Christ is anything, it is everything." Are you a Christian? Be honest now. What is the single most important thing in your life today? If it isn't Jesus, know the consequences. Not believing in God will not take away His love or His judgment. If you are a Christian and something is distracting you from growing closer to Christ, drop it like a hot potato and get your life in order.

Pick up a Bible and see what it has to say. It's not that complicated, and living for eternity sure beats living for retirement.

What will you say if God asks, "Why should I let you into Heaven?"

Forgive and tolerate, please

Editor:
An open letter to Dan Nordquist.
I am writing this letter in defense of Anne Allen, not just because she is a personal friend of mine, but also because I agree with her views about Bruce Skaug's columns. Mr. Skaug, however, is not my topic. Forgiveness and tolerance in Mr. Nordquist, you asked Ms. Allen if she has ever read the Bible. Now, I ask you the same question. Have you ever read it? And not just the parts that fit your lifestyle. If you have, you should remember the passage that reads: "Judge not that you be not judged" (Matthew 7:1).

God tells us that none of us has a right to judge others for their beliefs or lifestyles. Even if they don't agree with our own. Jesus once saved a woman from being stoned to death by saying to her attackers, "Let he who is without sin among you be the first to throw a stone at her." None of them could. Romans 2:23 tells us that ... all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God. Human beings are not perfect, and do make mistakes. God is the only one who can rightfully judge us. Either you, I, or Mr. Skaug has a right to persecute others for their beliefs or the way they live. You have a right to observe and state your views, as do I. None of us has the right to put others down because their views differ from our own.

Blue Key Honorary apologizes for any inconvenience caused by the late arrival of this year’s Blue Key Phone Directories. The delay was due to technical difficulties beyond our control. The books can now be picked up at the SUB Information desk. Your student ID number is needed to claim your book if you ordered one at registration. If you didn’t place an order but would like a book, one can be purchased for $2.

For the past few years, Blue Key has provided the directory for the UI. Profits from the book sales are used to support scholarships, the Blue Key Talent Show held during Parents’ Weekend and several other community and campus projects. Again, we apologize for the delay.

Baier vs. Skaug: a study in extremes

Editor:
What a contrast between your conservative and liberal columnists. Bruce Baier and Paul Baier have definitely opposite ends of the spectrum. I think these two are examples of what we are seeing today in our society—a polarization of viewpoints.

It is becoming harder to straddle the fence, the lines of gray are turning into either white or black. Most people don’t make their stand by deduction, but rather by convenience. They allow peer pressure and the constant barrage of consumerism to slip them into the camp of least resistance. This lifestyle may begin easily but it progressively becomes more difficult. The alternative is a life which many start out difficult but progressively becomes easier, as God’s discipline and order work their effect.

Whose column do you favor? Look at the end of that lifestyle and make your decision. Consider God’s viewpoint.

“See, I have set before you this day Life and Death, blessing and cursing, therefore choose Life.” (Deuteronomy 30:19)

Skaug: A disservice to all Christians

Editor: I used to enjoy Bruce Skaug’s column for what they were: entertaining opinion. But when Nordquist’s defense of Skaug, however, something must be said. A great disservice has been done to all Christians.

When Skaug says the Democratic Party is home to all bleeding heart, wimpy, homosexual, welfare-claiming communists, I laugh (mostly at, not with, him). But when Nordquist suggests that Skaug has been doing this all in God’s name and to stand up for righteousness, it honestly becomes too much.

Preaching obedience to God’s commandments is one thing, boys, but to imply that when Bruce Skaug “says all college girls want to get married,” or “Democrats are communists,” he is doing an under the influence of God’s spirit, then it must be viewed with indignation. How dare you pollute God’s name that way? Since when should ill-conditioned intolerance be mistaken for being blessed with God’s spirit?

I am a firm believer in the Christian teachings of my church. I don’t mean to shoot you two, but many conservative Christians disagree with your intolerance and un-Christian like manner, especially when it’s supposedly done “in the name of God.” The God I know doesn’t care about political affiliation. He is against oppositional intolerance. He is against sin because it leads to unhappiness, and he wants all to be happy. Perhaps someday you’ll get to know him. Until then, here’s a sarcastic “thank-you” for portraying Christians as intolerant, smug and narrow-minded.

President Freund, thanks her friends

Editor: Now that the dust has settled on the campaign trail, I would like to thank the people who helped me during the campaign. Simply, I could not have done it without the following people: Linda Reinhberger, Dean Barton, Dee Broekings, Michelle Brown, Catherine Burt, Teri Campbell, Chris Chambers, Bob Collard, Kelly K. Cooper, Debbie DiCordio, Kelli Dopmter, Kim Emers, Marti Elka, Easly Englebry, Barb Foster, Tom Freund, Russell Goodstein, Suzanne Gove, Jim Hansen, Steve Hansen, Kim Hartman, Lori Heen, John Hecht, Mike Helm, Marlo Hidaka, Joel Horton, Teres Howerton, Emma Karrel, Tammy Knap, Mark Lene, Jennifer Leveneger, Brenda Mallet, Lori Mann, Teresea Martini, Doug McMurra, Brian More, Carolyn Minder, Teres Morgan, Tracy Morgan, Kara Olsen, Jim Pierce, Holly Bickett, Mike Rodrigue, Jeff Sakot, Joe Shetton, Drew Spaulding, Michelle Specner, Kim Swen- ren, Richard Thomas, Mike Trail, John Vanderpool, Boyd Wiley and Joe Wright.

A special thanks to all of those people who took the time to vote in the ASUI election. Regardless of whom they voted for, they exercised a very important right. Whether it is an idea or a complaint, I have to know about it to act on it. So don’t be shy, it’s going to be a great year! Thanks again!

Missing Skaug pleases ‘Arg’ reader

Editor: I have often been tempted to respond to Bruce Skaug’s weekly column in the Argonaut, but have repeatedly resisted because I had no good thing to say. Letters Policy

The Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on days prior to publication. They must be typed, double spaced, signed in ink and must include the name, address, phone number and student ID of the author. Letters will be edited for clarity and spelling. Letters should be limited to 200 words. The Argonaut reserves the right to refuse letters that are libelous or in bad taste.
Admissions

ACT test only for data purposes. Although most students take the test prior to admission, test scores aren't required for acceptance.

Reaction to Boise State University's admission recommendations is generally favorable, although concerns have been raised over specific segments.

Marc Tell, UI admissions director, said there is no way of knowing what impact any of the admission standards could have on college enrollment.

Tell said he was impressed with the process the committee has made to this point and stress the amount of discussion and compromise that went into the report.

"At first there was a natural tendency for the committee members to protect the interests of their institutions, and it took a while to realize it is a state university," he said.

Tell said he could not support and was opposed to implementing admission standards.

The state ought to get the message out to the students and allow them to think of a chance of attending college - the student can't take the easy road out of the school.

On the other hand, Tell said he was "very pleased" that the system is declining college enrollments and changing open-door admission policies to make admission standards desirable.

Guy Hunt, dean of admissions at BYU, thinks the report needs action to non-degree-seeking students, of which Boise State uses the process has a very high percentage number.

Tom Tell, a senior and director of his student at Lewis Clark, shared Hunt's concerns.

"I don't think the state will be hurting the adult students," Fellows said.

He also pointed out high school records are not as reliable for older students. High school administrators contacted support the proposal and standards, saying the recommendations don't deviate significantly from the graduation standards.

In addition to addressing admission standards, the committee looked into the retention policy.

The committee proposes discontinuing students for one semester if their grades drop below an established level. Those students would be required to file for re-admission. A third dismissal would be final.

Currently, all state schools have similar academic retention standards. However, the minimum cumulative grade point average varies slightly on some campuses. If students fail to meet a required cumulative GPA, they are placed on academic probation.

If during the next semester their grades are still unsatisfactory, they will be asked to leave school. Students can petition for reinstatement after one semester away from school. After reinstatement, a 2.0 GPA must be maintained each semester.

Tell likes the long layout time required in the new proposal and said returning to school as soon as possible after an academic dismissal is often a mistake for the student.

The committee proposal is, if approved, will serve as the minimum statewide requirements. However, admissions director is given the authority to approve higher standards for their institutions.

"Since funding is enrollment, schools are reluctant to draft higher standards if it will shift the enrollment," said BSU's Hunt.

The UI on the other hand, approved its own enrollment standards and presented the proposal to the board for information purposes before the statewide standards was under way. Administrators won't take the UI policy to the board until after the statewide standards are approved or rejected. Depending on the standards finally approved, the UI plan may be unnecessary.

The UI proposal resembles the statewide report in many segments, although the statewide committee started from scratch without referring to the UI proposal.

The UI requested six high school credits of English for the 1889-89 entrant. The statewide committee is recommending four credits in 1989 and six in 1990.

The UI wants high school graduates to complete two humanities credits, while the statewide committee calls for four credits.

The UI proposal also says graduates should rank in the upper three-quarters of their graduating class. Utah requires a ACT composite standard score of at least 16 or an SAT combined verbal and math standard score of 830.

Thomas Bell, UI acting academic vice president, and the statewide committee report will be circulated on campus. Bell is specifically seeking the input from the Deans Council, the Faculty Council and the ASUI Senate before UI President Richard Gibb prepares the institution's formal reply for the board.

Bell was generally enthusiastic with the recommendations.

"I think the statewide committee did a very thorough job preparing such a specific report," Bell concluded.

Sex education talks begin in the home

The most important thing parents can do about their children's sex education is to establish lines of communication early — and keep them wide open.

That was the message presented recently at the UI Women's Center, by Beth Seales, school psychologist for the Moscow School District for nearly 20 years.

Seales outlined the sex education programs in Moscow elementary schools and showed a film, "A Family Talks About Sex."

She stressed that she had experienced little, if any, parental protest to sex education in the Moscow schools, but added she felt the home should be first and foremost in the task.

Seales recalled that not only ten years ago sex education in Moscow elementary schools (and in others around the country as well) was usually a function of the school nurse. Even then, the school principal really decided how much sex education, i.e. straight biology, the nurse could impart.

But things began to change when women won positions on the Moscow School Board and an insisted that sex education not only be taught but taught proactively.

Over the years, the program has evolved to the point where Moscow parents meet from time to time with parents of other children to lend support.

Seales told the audience how sex education should be a "one-shot" thing but an ongoing program from kindergarten through high school.

"By the fourth grade, students are learning about the body and its various systems. We give them the right language, the right words; and we find this is where the family can help us by using the correct anatomical words at home," she said.

Aryan

California and Idaho sell themselves.

"We don't have to do anything to grow the economy," said Seales. "It is what brought them up there."

"I'm proud of my race and I am proud to serve them and work with them," said Bell. "I am not ashamed of my ancestry, where I was born, I fight for what I believe, and make no apology for it."

Students claimed their religion was merely a cover for an Aryan hate-league, Butler replied his group is a legitimate religious organization.

The Aryan Nations Church, Butler said, is off-shoot of the Methodist Church. Wesley Swift, a major organizer of the Aryan Church, was named after John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist Church.

The idea of "territorial imperialist" or the "birds-of-a-feather flock together" theory, was stressed by Butler.

"In Genesis 11:1-2 it talks about the life of Noah's family and God set bounds of inhabitation. It is self-evident that every people needs that. The family does have freedom of association."

Citing an example of racial segregation, Butler specified a reference to the Mexicans and Vietnamese in Eastern Washington. "There are such large numbers in Garden Grove the city is known as Little Saigon."

They are in such large numbers in Garden Grove the city is known as Little Saigon. This mixing of cultures cannot work, Butler argued. He said some great conflicts are likely to occur in the future and each culture will cling to its own kind.

The current tendency to "whites" to leave the city of Chicago for the suburbs for just one of the early indications of the "genetic code" becoming more prevalent.

Butler's visit to campus came less than one week after poor weather kept him from attending a UI symposium on whiten supremacy in Idaho sponsored by the sociology department.

Vandal women blow past Titans and Cougs to win Dial Classic

By Mike Long

Riding on the crest of a 5-0 record, the women’s Vandal basketball team will compete against Whitworth College of Spokane, Wash., this evening at 5:15 in the ASU-Kibble Dome.

“We had trouble with them last year,” Head Coach Pat Dobratz said, recalling the confrontation with Whitworth where the Vandals were defeated by 81, 57-49.

“Whitworth didn’t want to die, and we weren’t playing that well,” said forward Kris Edwards. The Vandals were also not playing their best this weekend, according to Dobratz, but were able to pull out just one win, but two and another tournament.

The crown they added was that of Washington State University’s Dial Classic as the Vandals defeated Cal-State Fullerton, 75-72, in overtime Friday and then conquered Washington State University, 73-51. They defeated the Cougars for the second time this season.

Idaho’s center Mary Rouse was named the Most Valuable Player of the tournament, while Kris Edwards and Paula Getty were named to the tournament team.

“Excited,” Dobratz said, “in only two tournaments this season.”

The Vandals shared some of that excitement with the audience that night as the lead seesawed back and forth between the two teams during the CSF game.

At halftime, the Titans lead the Vandals 34-30 and then, with 12 minutes left, found themselves down by 10.

“We chipped away at it and wore them out with two and three seconds left,” Dobratz said.

The Titans scored another basket with a shot that “bounced and rolled around the rim and finally fell in with three seconds still on the clock,” said Dobratz.

“During the overtime, there was some real physical play and the refs let this go,” she said.

Vandals came up with 11 points while the Titans only made four more.

Going into the matchup, the Vandals knew they would be facing not only a good team, but the biggest and best team yet. The Vandals were in the thick of their conference, which has the University of Southern California and San Diego in it, Dobratz said.

“They were close to getting a NCAA bid, and this year’s goal is to get one,” she said. “I knew it would be tough.”

She described the team as the largest and most physical that the Vandals have faced yet, and she called the overtime episode a good experience, since she saw her team in many more tight games this season.

Dobratz and her team had a chance to view WSU as it defeated Texas Christian University in an even closer game, 79-73. She thought that Warzou had improved since their last confrontation.

That improvement, if any, could only be summed up by the extra point the Cougars gained in the point spread between the two teams as the Vandals defeated them for a second time by 22 points.

At the bottom of the tournament was TCU, who, according to Dobratz, was favored by many to win the tournament. It received its final humiliation of the conference at the hands of the Vandals, 66-51.

Trumbo's team looking to rebound following Air Force turkey shoot

By Jeff Corey

The "Palouse rivalry" returns to the UI "maple court" tonight as the Vandals take on the Washington State University Cougars at 7:30 p.m. in the ASU-Eakles Dome.

The Cougars are 1-1 on the year with a 66-51 win over St. Martin's and a 61-59 loss to the University of Wisconsin. The Vandals are 1-3 coming off a loss Saturday at the Air Force Academy 76-67.

WSU Head Coach Len Stevens enters his second year at the Cougars helm. Stevens led the WSU team to a 10-18 record and a 4-14 Pac-12 Athletic Conference finish last year.

The WSU team returns three top players from last season's squad: senior guard Chris Winkler, junior guard Keith Morrison and junior forward Otis Jennings. Winkler averaged 9.8 points for the Cougars last season and is expected to run the offense.

Idaho, which has been out-rebounded by smaller teams this season, could have similar trouble with rebounding against a taller WSU club.

WSU sports a pair of 7-foot centers: sophomores Ken Mathis and Todd Andrus. These two have shared court time for the Cougars this season and could hinder Idaho's tallest player, Steve Ledesma, who stands at 6'-10".

In their most recent contest, the Vandals lost to the Falcons of the Air Force Academy. Air Force used timely outside shooting and Vandal turnovers to pull out the 11-point victory.

"The most disappointing thing is that we could have won," Trumbo said after the loss. "We hate to let those get past you."

"I'm not taking anything away from them," Trumbo said of the Falcon team. "They are a very smart, tough team and take advantage of mistakes and make you pay for them.

"Air Force capitalized on many UI mistakes and took an eight-point Idaho lead and turned it into a 40-37 Falcon lead at halftime."

"We did get off to a good start," Trumbo said. "I think that was important for us, but we just have to rebound a game, and we are not good enough to throw the ball away that often."

Idaho was led in scoring by forward Uli Spears. Spears' 17 points for the Vandals were marred by four turnovers. Other Vandals in double figures were point guard Teddy Noel and center Steve Ledesma. Noel hit six out of seven attempts for 13 points, but his performance was marred by five turnovers. Ledesma had 11 points and led in rebounding with eight boards.

"I am getting tired of making excuses because this guy is young or this guy is inexperienced. We're experienced enough and mature enough, we're tough enough, we're good enough. We just need to do it."

Bill Trumbo

"We're going to play this game knowing that this guy is young or this guy is inexperienced. We're going to play this game knowing that this guy is young or this guy is inexperienced."
Swimmers
By Tom Liberman
The UI women's swim team defeated Central Washington University in a dual meet Friday. This was the second time in 24 years that the UW has accomplished that. The victory marked the third time this season the Vandals men and women swimmers have defeated the Wildcats in meets.

The Vandals gained these victories with only two seniors swimmers, Jack Keene and Jennifer Norton.

Keene made his home meet something to remember as he garnered three victories in the 100-yard individual medley and the 200-yard butterfly. His time in the IM was a new school record for that event.

The meet started off slowly for the men as they finished in second and third place in the 100-yard medley relay. But things picked up from there as the men won six events in a row. The Vandals outlasted the Wildcats in the long distance swims sweeping first and second in the 1500 and 1000-yard freestyle. The 500 was also won by UI captain Chris Wehrli.

The women's Vandal team was led by freshman Jennifer Hinkle, who set a new school record in the 1-meter diving competition. Burlieon said the Vandals women outlasted the CWU women and so he placed many of the UI swimmers in events that were not their specialties.

Burlieon said it was a big victory for the UI to beat an established power like CWU. The team was more than a little excited with their accomplishment, he said.

The next meet for the Vandals is scheduled Dec. 7-9, when the Vandals travel to the Pacific Lutheran Invitational in Tacoma, Wash., and the Husky Invitational in Seattle, Wash. The Vandals will split their teams into two parts to take part in these simultaneous events.

Fairchild in opener
The UI junior varsity basketball team pulled out a last second victory over Fairchild Air Force Base 77-76 in Friday's preliminary game. Keo Meyers hit a 10-foot jumper in the final second to secure the UI victory.

Meyers finished the game with 16 points but followed Moscow grid. Freshman Hodge who poured in 30 points. Hodge also pulled down 13 rebounds in the game.

Other UI scorers included Rance Pugmire with 16 points and Larry Luton with 14 points.

Mickey Allen led the Fairchild squad with 20 points, followed by Rickey Davis with 19 points.

The JV squad now has a 1-0 record on the season. On Dec. 7 the JV's meet the College of Idaho in the ASUI-Kibbie Dome.

Staff music recital plagued by mishap

By Paul Allam
Intermissions by late arrivals, pre-set school bells and hasty stage changes did not mar the melodie flute music of Angelita Floyd at Sunday evening's UI Faculty Recital.

The recital, which was held at 4 p.m. in the UI School of Music's Recital Hall, presented the combined talents of four UI faculty members and one non-faculty performer.

The performers were Sandra Hahn, UI piano instructor, harpsichordist; Elizabeth Meier, UI cello instructor; James Reed, UI music instructor, guitarist; Christian Johansen, pianist; and Angelita Floyd, UI flute instructor.

At the concert, selections from Bach, Giuliani and others were played. Floyd played in every number, and her ability to harmonize with her accompanist was impressive. The low range of the guitar, piano, cello and harpsichord helped to contrast the beautiful high notes she played.

This is not to say the performance was without problem. During one selection, Floyd had trouble keeping her music on her music stand.

The stand, which was only a few feet wide, was too narrow to hold one of her four-page sheets of music.

“There are always some problems in live performances. In logistics of playing is sometimes more hassle than getting through the notes out,” Floyd said in an interview after the 95-minute performance.

Floyd said she was pleased with the entire performance however. “If you think you really have to do for the overall effect of a perfor- mance, and overall everyone did well,” she said.

Although this is Floyd's only year at the UI, she hopes to hold another faculty recital and the time next semester. Florida State University music graduate, Floyd plans to complete work towards her doctorate there this summer.

Christmas season brings 'The Nutcracker'

Since it was presented for the first time 100 years ago, "The Nutcracker" ballet has become a traditional Christmas offering of many companies. On Dec. 11 Idaho's American Festival Ballet presents the holiday classic.

The company performs at 7:30 p.m. in the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum. Three artists are featured. They are Jeanette Allyn, Marius Zerra and Theordor Collman. Allyn, a teacher at Corinna Institute, was the founding director of the American Festival Ballet. In 1976 she won the Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts.

Zerra is artistic director of the company, and Collman, a faculty member of the American Festival Ballet Center in Boise, has taught ballet and jazz in Las Vegas and Boston. He recently returned from a year of teaching dance in Kyoto and Osaka, Japan.

In its WSU performance, the company will present entirely new choreography with new sets and new costumes for Act I, according to Joani Muneta, executive director.

Zerra will dance the role of Drassemeyer, the gypsy dollmaker whose magic spell brings to life dancing snowflakes, waltzing flowers and dancers from Russia, Spain, Arabis and China.

In the ballet, a young girl, Clara, is transformed into the Sugarplum Fairy, and her nutcracker doll becomes her handsome prince, Monica Mudgett, who has danced with the Californians, New Orleans, Arizona and San Diego ballets, will dance the dual roles of Clara and the Sugarplum Fairy. The nutcracker prince will be portrayed by Mudgett's real-life husband, Duncan Vere Schute.

Schute, who has performed principal roles in several European and American ballet companies, began his training in Rome, Italy and studied with Rudolf Nureyev.

In addition to the members of the American Festival Ballet professional company, local dancers from Moscow and Pullman will perform as candy canes, bonbons, Chinese dancers and lambs. This brings the number of dancers in the cast to 60.

Other local dancers in the production are Gayle Davidson and Gretchen Vetter, both of Moscow, who will be in the Spanish Variation. Maria Quenol of Pullman and Gretchen Vetter of Moscow will be Russian Dancers.

Tickets are priced at $6-$10 for adults; $5-$8 for students; and $3-$6 for children. They are available at the WSU Coliseum and Pullman and at the University Pharmacy and the SUB Information Desk in Moscow.

It's magic

Monica Mudgett of the American Festival Ballet will dance the role of the Sugarplum Fairy in "The Nutcracker."

A tough act to follow.
Ensemble, symphony to unite

The work of two UI composers will be included in the program for a joint concert by the UI Wind Ensemble and the UI Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m. Thursday. The Wind Ensemble will perform "Voodoo" by Daniel Bukovich, assistant professor of music, and the orchestra will play two selections from "Oregon Coastal sketches" for Violoncello and Chamber Orchestra by Greg Steckie, head of the School of Music. Bukovich's composition was written on a commission from the Idaho Music Educators Association and received its premiere performance by the Idaho All-State High School Band in March. Other works on the Wind Ensemble program are "Dyptich" by Gunther Schuller, conductor of the Spokane Symphony. The piece features the Idaho Brass Quintet. The wind ensemble will also play "Lincolnshire Poyn" by Percy Grainger. Members of the Idaho Brass Quintet are Robert McCurdy and Robert Birdwell, trumpets; Robert Becklow, trombone; Robert Spevacek, tuba; and Christopher White, horn.

Elisabeth Mohr will be a violin soloist for the Steckie composition. Steckie is guest conductor of the symphony.

The concert will be in the Administration Building Auditorium. It is free and open to the public.

Ballet company to dance at WSU

With a repertoire ranging from classical ballet to jazz, the Keith Martin Ballet Company will perform Dec. 6 at the WSU Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum.

The company will perform Grand Pas De Deux from Don Quixote, Nutcracker and Swan Lake. The dancers will also perform a number of contemporary and jazz numbers.

Quintet are Robert McCurdy and Robert Birdwell, trumpets; Robert Becklow, trombone; Robert Spevacek, tuba; and Christopher White, horn.

Elisabeth Mohr will be a violin soloist for the Steckie composition. Steckie is guest conductor of the symphony.

The concert will be in the Administration Building Auditorium. It is free and open to the public.

Based in Portland, the group is part of the Pacific Performances series sponsored by the WSU Coliseum and the Associated Students of the University of Idaho programs.

Dreaming

a three-dimensional look," explained Langley. "The side is lit with yellow and oranges while the cool side is lit with blues and greens. "You have to be careful with greens," Langley said. "They tend to make a human look dead."

The actual lighting instruments above the audience on what is called a cat walk. The lights may be physically moved to wherever they can best light a particular area on the stage, so long as the cord reaches the circuit plug-in. Then the circuits are assigned or patched into specific dimmers. A maximum of three circuits may be patched into one dimmer. The light operator can then control three different lights with one dimmer switch on the lighting board. A sophomore in theatre arts, Curtis said there were two sides to the lighting board: the memory side and the manual side.

"The memory side really comes in handy sometimes, especially in the fairy scenes where the lighting pattern will change very frequently," Curtis said.

"The lights change, or drift, in and out, and vary in their intensity while the fairies are on stage," Curtis explained. "The change is slight and adds a mood of fantasy."
