Senate passes $700,000 budget

By Laurel Darrow
Staff Writer

After about 10 hours of debate on Wednesday night, the ASUI Senate passed the FY 1986 budget proposal, for $700,000. Sen. Janet Friend vetted it Thursday morning.

The problem, Friend said, is the Argonaut portion of the budget. "The only problem I have left with that budget is the Argonaut — and it's a severe problem."

Salaries, especially the salary for the advertising manager, were debated for more than an hour at Wednesday's meeting.

Friend wants the staff members of the Argonaut to be paid as much as they are getting now, under the rebudgeting approved by the senate this semester. On Wednesday the senate voted 6-4 in favor of a budget, removing the reporters, editors and advertising personnel from the budget.

Fried's proposal would pay the editor $250, the writers $30 and the advertising manager $350, which would give the ad manager a total salary of $7,000 for the fiscal year.

The budget passed by the senate gives the editor $200, the writers $20 each and the ad manager $250, for a total salary of $5000.

Friend said she would not compromise because she has already compromised enough. Her budget proposal is "a compromise over what the Argonaut wanted" in its budget request, she said.

"We've reached the edge of my compromise level," she said.

Besides, the Argonaut will not accept an ASUI subsidy in its fiscal year, so it will just be spending money it makes itself, she said.

"If we pass our proposal we're just going to let them pay. We're just maintaining our budget with someone else's money."

At the senate meeting, the budget proposals were hotly debated. Several members of the Argonaut staff spoke. Ed Ullman, a reporter for the paper, said the salary increase provided by the rebudgeting makes it worthwhile to work at the Argonaut. "Given the amount of work I put into it and the money I get for it, I consider it worth my while."

Several different arguments were presented against Freund's proposal and for the finance committee's proposal. Sen. Jana Habiger argued that, although Argonaut employees work hard, they do not necessarily deserve larger pay increases. "We're not here for profitability," she said.

When it comes right down to it, you're going to look at that experience you're getting" rather than the money, she said.

"To receive some sort of compensation is important, but I don't feel the wage is the big issue," Habiger said.

Sen. Keli Patton argued that no one in the ASUI makes much money. "I realize all the dedication on the part of the Argonaut staff, but all of us in the ASUI are dedicated...and none of us are making what we should," she said.

She said students in the living groups might regularly visit the office, but they do not want the salaries to be raised.

Neo-Nazi group seeks separation and reform

By Eberose Goines
News Editor

"We're not supremacists, we are separatists...all we want to be is among our own. There are enough white men and women in this country that want to live with a white culture, a white majority. Give us our territory and we'll let the gys, Jews and all the blacks go the way they want."

These beliefs were echoed in an interview with Reverend Richard G. Butler and several other Aryan Nation members at the house of Reverend Jesus Christ Christian April 2nd in Idaho Falls.

Amongst other interviewees were Robert Eddy, director of the New Ganges for the Northern Idaho Neo-Nazi organization, and Southern Idaho representative Johnny Miller.

Members of this religious group have had their church bombed. They have been constantly receiving numerous criticism concerning their philosophy, the methods in which they choose to implement their beliefs and the types of people that are associated with them.

Christian, who grew up in a ranching family, migrated to California in the Thirties. There he went to school and began working in the aircraft engineering and manufacturing Corporation.

After returning from World War Two, Butler noticed a "decline in the white race in general." Given the situation, everything was always done for everyone and no one was free of the earth except for the American peoples.

Claiming to be an anti-communist fanatic, and receiving advice from a colleague, Butler became associated with Dr. Leslie A. Swift, Switzer, member of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian.

Butler claims that this was the point when he began learning the reality of what communism really was. He financed, financed the and relationship between communism, Wall Street, big banks and the people who are, by definition, Anti-Christ.

The church was formed in 1946 in California. After the death of Swift, Butler took over as minister. Later, the church moved to Northern Idaho "because we were tired of fighting the integration problem: we came up here to be with our own kind."

Aryan Nations exist internationally. "We have many nations of our race," said Butler. "The first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (John Jay) said, 'we are gathering in the household of our race although we are divided in many languages and ethnic divisions we are one people with common ancestry, common morality and a common faith."

Butler claims it is hard for young people to understand this because through our educational systems, we are not exposed to the important elements of American History. "This construction was an organic document that had its foundation in the Laws of Mount Sinai and developed through Christian thought and the Republic form of government that we have here today," said Butler.

World War II was not fought in order to protect our homes. It did nothing to take away inheritance that was provided by the blood sacrifice of our forefathers.

"The laws of the Old Testament and the new one are total separation of the races where you set the bounds of their habitation. You separate and divide the alliance for the same structure."

When asked if he was interested in making a separate way in order to serve his goals, Butler responded, "if you don't understand the way the words are written in the scripture, get a dictionary. If you put the definitions of the words down in front of you, you'll come out with what I say. People who think I interpret the Bible are simply saying they don't want to meet the issue. I can show you line by line any intelligent person, who has at least a grade 8 knowledge of the English language, that this is true."

Butler's biggest mystery in the world is why people have been so deceived away from it."

"Read some of the pulpits of the American Revolution by Wingate. The sermons that were preached during that time were saying the very same things that I am saying today...truth never changes."

"Race is a dirty word," said Miller. "It's a species that fits the word. It's a species. It's likes species of wild game that don't cross their species."

Butler believes that if you understand your own household, it will be easier to have a government for our race. Butler believes that in certain places in Africa the majority has the right to exterminate the whites. "While over here, the minority has the right to exist," he said. He questions how this can be so.

"All we're saying is if you're not one of the white race, you don't get in. It's the same thing in this country. Now that we get a sovereign state from a racial nation, our economy will be

Law school awards honors

Tuesday, April 2, Terry Armstrong, UI president and Sheldon Vincenti, Dean of the College of Law were presented with a certificate of appreciation by the Student Division of the American Bar Association. Presenting the certificate on behalf of the Chairman of the Division was Eileen McDevitt. McDevitt is currently a student at the College of Law and has served on the governing board of the Law Student Division this past year. She was elected Governor of the 12th circuit, representing law schools from Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and Montana. During the term of her office she has received administrative support and commitment of funds from the University and College of Law. In light of this support and exceptional enthusiasm and encouragement for the expansion of student leadership in the American Bar Association, the Chair of the Law Student Division wished to recognize Armstrong and Vincenti. This is the first time a student from UI has held such an office.

While a full house of spectators awaited the decision on campus parking, the Faculty Council debated a proposal to divert funds from companies investing in South Africa and again delayed decision on parking for two weeks. The council decided to postpone the decision for another two weeks to get a proposal from the ASUI Senate. The item will be discussed again at the Faculty Council meeting on April 16.

The council delayed decision on the issue at their last meeting, referring the topic to an ad-hoc committee consisting of three Faculty Council members. The ad-hoc committee, charged with developing alternate solutions to campus parking problems, gave their report at the council’s Tuesday meeting.

The committee recommended that the parking in core lots on the campus, such as the administration parking lot, should be limited to UI employees on regular appointment. The committee recommended changing the university's present egalitarian system — which lumps faculty and staff with students — to a prioritized system. They say that the faculty and staff, “who deliver the work of the university teaching, research and service,” should be afforded priority.

“Off hand, we know of no other state university that does not make special provisions for its regular employees,” said the committee in its report.

Joanne L. McHale, chairperson of the Campus Planning Committee, also talked to the council, telling them that decisions on parking should be kept in accordance with concerns for pedestrian safety and campus beauty. McHale said that the peripheral lots, such as the one next to the Riddle Dome, are underutilized. She said that people should be encouraged to use the peripheral lots.

Spanish fiction translator to speak

By Kristi Nelson
Staff Writer

One of America's foremost translators of Spanish fiction, whose works include the the translation of Gabriel Garcia Marquez' Nobel Peace winning novel, One Hundred Years of Solitude, will be in Moscow throughout next week to lecture and teach.

Gregory Rabassa, professor of romance languages and comparative literature at Queens College in New York City, is the seventh in a series of distinguished scholars brought to campus under a $250,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

"He is the leading translator of contemporary Spanish American prose at this time," said Dennis West, associate professor of Spanish and coordinator of the scholars series.

Highlighting Rabassa's visit will be a free public lecture entitled, "Words and Beyond: Translations as an Interpretation of Culture." It will take place April 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the College of Law courtroom. He will be addressing classes, faculty, and the University Language and Culture Association privately during the week.

Rabassa, a native of Yonkers, NY, received the National Book award in 1967 and was a finalist for the honor in 1971 and 1977. After graduating from Dartmouth College, he received his Ph.d from Columbia University in 1954. Early in his 22 year stint as an associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese at Columbia, Rabassa began translating after becoming involved in the production of a literary magazine.

Rabassa said in a telephone interview from his Long Island home that establishing a reputation as a translator is perhaps easier than the same task for a writer.

"The translator has the advantage of being tackled on to a good writer, and you get published sooner," he commented.

Yet with many of Garcia Marquez' novels and short stories to his credit, along with works by other notable Hispanic authors such as Mario Vargas Llosa and Miguel Angel Asturias, Rabassa's reputation can stand on its own.

The Phi Beta Kappa member said he communicates with authors mainly by mail, but has met most of them, including Columbian Garcia Marquez, personally. Most of the authors

Many Argonaut staff members received a lesson in politics in Wednesday's budget meeting of the ASUI Senate. Writers, editors and other employees attended the senate meeting in hopes of seeing an equitable and fair budget for the fiscal year.

What they saw, however, was a classic exercise—ASUI style—in petty politics. Instead of passing the budget for the Argonaut, which was prepared through negotiation between the newspaper's editors and managers, ASUI President Jane Freund and the Communications Board took it instead of a badly divided Senate Finance Committee.

The vote Wednesday night was the culmination of a lengthy process, one which apparently did not work. In January Freund asked the various ASUI departments, the Argonaut among them, to submit budgets for next year; the departments were given subsidy guidelines, which reflected a decrease (due to projected enrollment declines) over the year. The Argonaut submitted its budget to the Senate Board, which unanimously approved it. After the board's approval, the budget moved to President Freund, who cut proposals in several areas.

Before making cuts, however, Freund consulted with the newspapers to find a way to become the budget. The newspaper's editor, managers and staff were completely satisfied with the budget; it represented, for the first time ever, an opportunity to have salary equity at the ASUI level. It also represented payroll levels the Argonaut felt were ones which could be maintained over the period of several years.

It was not to be, however. The finance committee's majority said they felt people at the Argonaut are paid too much. Instead of a smaller staff, the Argonaut should make do with the wages the budget called for. They changed the budget, and passed it on to their colleagues in the rest of the Senate.

We cannot help but be bemused that seven members of the senate—the John Vanderpool, Chris Berg, Jana Habigen, David Doez, Relli Patton, Gary Lindberg and Relli Kast—were in fact the few in their own ASUI Communications Board, President Freund, and the eloquent defense from the Senate Board. But the Senate Board, with Larry Seid, Mike Felton, Larttess DeKlotz, Richard Kuck and Holly Richtill, were all realistic. We understand the senators who voted to pass the amended budget had many reasons for doing so. As far as we see, the presentations the newspaper had made in the course of the last month have been sufficient to answer any questions the senators may have had.

Yesterday morning President Freund vetoed the budget bill, thus throwing the issue back in the collective senate lap. This decision pleased the staff of the Argonaut, but we also recognize that this controversy is debilitating. The time and resources of individuals in the Senate and those working for the Argonaut really do not have the time to continually haggle over the budget. The negotiation and compromise some senators seem to want has already been accomplished; prolonged discussion was inappropriate in its stage of the process at this late date it seems like nothing more than an exercise in futility.

The Argonaut staff is tired of having the budget held over its heads; now is the time for a workable, equitable and just budget to be enacted by the senate. The students of the UI deserve nothing less.

Minority WASP

While growing up in Boise and attending school in the 1950s, I hadn't ever had the experience of being a minority, much less been the object of prejudice because I belong to that blant group, the WASPs. So when a globe of ballistics phlegm from across the narrow aisle exploded at my Nike clad feet, I felt anti-Caucasian vibrations suffocated my heretofore sheltered mind.

Surrounded by poor inter-city blacks and Chicacos in a crowded waiting room at Queens City Hospital I felt more isolated than I ever had been surrounded by a brick wall topped with barb- ed wire. I hugged my contraceptives red ski parks closer around my SOI Levis. and wished that I had dressed in New Wave or Old Good Will like the natives. I scribbled my name in the cracked linoleum chair, and tried to console myself that the old, whiskered whose tobacco-stained hands were shaking, didn't mean to lito the offensive missile my way.

Most of the bored eyes in the stark room seemed glued on my blond hair in dull interest. and I wished I had succumbed to the latest punk fashion—blue or purple would have seemed less obtrusive. They were wondering what this foreign object was doing at the dental clinic. and so was I. I could be listening to Ruth Bachtel in the pastel office of the best oral surgeon in Great Neck, the affluent, predominantly Jewish community just a few miles—and a few tax brackets—away on Long Island. Having been a nursery there for a Jewish family, I knew that by now I should be feeling the tallest, blondest person and the only WASP in sight (people used to ask me if I was Swedish). But when they discovered I was from Idaho they weren't disappointed—it seemed even more exotic. but the security and anonymity of the poor non—WASPs was uner- ving: walking into the Corner Club in a dress paired in comparison to this gownlet.

Still, as a U.S. citizen suffering from negative cash flow, I had as much right to have my four decayed wisdom teeth, victims of gumming many Chexia. I paid on pre-night, pull- ed for 14 dollars as they did. Besides, I figured I was entertaining the bored manegerie, for this waiting room lacked even tattered back issues of Womens Wear Daily to help pass the time. Next to me, a teenage boy pulled out a core sex book and when someone began to laugh, he looked like Dr. Suesa, but I privately pretended not to be interested. I even tried to hide my shock when...

two police officers strode by with a handcuff- ed, roving new paper vendor in tow who screamed that he was Queen Victoria's favorite gigolo and could prove it. I finally did feel part of the crowd as we all anticipated the revelation, but they hustled him into an exam room before he could substantiate his claim.

The commodity disintegrated when a harried nurse called my name and I rose gracefully, with all heads cocked in my direction, and slipped through the double doors. I never thought I'd be relieved to face the pliers and obsequious smile of an obvious dental student from Ithaca.

When I emerged a half-hour later after a thankfully easy extraction, the eyes picked me up like radar and followed me to the phone booth across the room. As I dialed my adopted family's number, I pulled out one by one the bloody pieces of cotton which plugged my mouth, but when I tried to speak, gibberish spewed forth: I'd forgotten the numbing effects of the anesthetic. Sounding like a drunken Rodney Dangerfield, I communicated that I needed a ride home—my attentive audience made no effort to conceal their smirk.

Rephugging my mouth with the soggy cotton. I went to the wash room outside the hospital downtown, Jamaica, Queens. A pleasantly reminiscent name, except that the sun was glistering off the antiquated porcelain, the store window, instead of off the white, balding beams. I tried to shake off the memory of the men in men's beach trunks; and the only spectator around was the Colt 45 at the guard at the hospital gate.

I spied two men outside the hospital, the middle-aged Jane and Bernard Bohn. They were talking about the two college students, the Mannequin and the Coyote, whom I had been accompanied by the previous day, and the two men seemed to be discussing my case, even though I was wearing my sailor's cap. I was also wearing a man's sockets of socks which I found under the bathroom sink, and the Antelope and the Coyote had occupied a pair of panty hose and large, inflated, hot (in every sense of the word) pink bunny rabbit holding a carrot for the cent's tax, of course.

It was April and the Easter season, or so my WASPish mentality assumed. I ceased anxiety with the three foot high flags floating in the breeze, with blood trickling from the corners of my chimpunk cheeks, and tried to ignore the giggles of the little kids speeding by on their beer-and-soap driven dune buggies. When I finally returned to the haven and relative familiarity of my house in Great Neck. I sighed and rushed to give my three year old sister her new plastic car, just at the last mo- ment, remembering that I was not in Moscow, or even in Idaho, I yelled—'Here All's it—the Plesive Bunny.'

Questions:

1. What was the main concern of the editors and managers during the budget meeting?
2. What was the reaction of the senators to theArgonaut's budget?
3. How did the budget process affect theArgonaut staff?
4. What were the financial implications of the budget cuts on theArgonaut?

Answers:

1. The main concern of the editors and managers during the budget meeting was to ensure fair and equitable salary for the newspapers. They were satisfied with the budget prepared by the newspaper's editors and managers, but the Senate Board unanimously approved it. The board then passed it on to President Freund, who cut proposals in several areas.
2. The senators were concerned about the salary levels of the Argonaut staff. Instead of a smaller staff, theArgonaut should make do with the wages the budget called for. They changed the budget, and passed it on to their colleagues in the rest of the Senate.
3. The budget process affected theArgonaut staff in a negative way. They were concerned about the cuts to their salaries and benefits. The staff was also frustrated by the lack of compromise and negotiation between the senators and the newspaper.
4. The financial implications of the budget cuts were significant for theArgonaut. The staff was cut, and they were forced to work harder to maintain the same level of service. The newspaper also had to find a way to maintain fair and equitable salary for the newspapers.

My choice

Editor,
Next Wednesday's (April 10th) elections have some very qualified candidates running for the position of ASUI Senate. In my opinion however, the following candidates are the best choices for the seven open Senate positions:

JOHN RAUCH
John just finished a very successful term as the ASUI Loki of his hard work in Boise. John has kept the students' best interests in mind and would be a continued benefit to the ASUI Senate.

GINGO WHITE
As the ASUI Representative to the Senate, Gino has an excellent knowledge of the current legislative and state issues. He will make a very good ASUI Senator.

Finally, HOLLY RICKETT is my choice for the contested Faculty Council position. She has worked as both an ASUI Senator and Argonaut reporter and will be an excellent Faculty Council representative.

John Rauch, Cherri Sabala, Holli Crawford, Mike Cobble, Mike Felton, David Dose and Gino White will make excellent ASUI Senators. Regardless of how you vote, please make sure you vote on Wednesday April 10th. Thank you very much.

Let's hear you

Editor:
The ASUI has a problem on its hands which could be a real opportunity for graduate students. The April 10 election marks the opening of a Faculty Council Representative seat. The term is for one year and could be quite interesting, as the politically volatile parking problem is about to be resolved (hopefully) by the Faculty Council. Nonetheless, no graduate students have expressed interest in this position, and consequently, the ballot next Wednesday will be open. I would urge any politically-minded graduate students to start a write-in campaign. The position could be a real learning experience and is salaried.

The Faculty Council deals with concerns and problems that affect us all, including graduate students. Thus, a write-in campaign begun today, chances of being elected would be outstanding.

I would urge any interested grad students to mount a campaign. Questions concerning the position can be answered by anyone at the ASUI office.

THE CLEANEST ・ THE FINEST

Effective communication is a quality that can be respected and appreciated. During discussion of parking by the faculty council, only one student representative stood up and voiced our opinion. We need someone on the council who will not be afraid to stand up and give student opinion, even though it may pertain to an issue of minimal faculty support. Ray Lance is the man who can provide this kind of representation.

Vote Ray Lance on Wednesday, April 10.

Once again, ASUI Senate and Faculty Council representative elections are quickly approaching. For most senate candidates, this is a time of many headaches, as they direct their campaign towards one of the available seats. For a candidate to be elected to one of these positions, he or she must be strongly dedicated to the students he/she will represent.

There are two candidates who have truly represented this element of dedication. Both Mike Cobble and Mike Felton have shown me that they have what it takes to be an ASUI Senator.

Mike Cobble has attended both senate and faculty council meetings, and is well informed on many of the issues the senate is facing today. He has taken time to stop by the senate offices to talk with some of us individually, as well as getting out and meeting people all across campus. For being a first-time candidate, Mike has shown great concern and enthusiasm which are both very important in being a student representative.

Mike Felton, currently an ASUI Senator who is running for re-election has already shown me that he has what it takes to be an ASUI Senator. Mike has worked very closely with students through service on the ASUI Finance committee and his constant representation of students. Mike Felton has the experience behind him, and is a great asset to both the student and the senate. I would encourage you to remember both Mike Cobble, and Mike Felton as you go to the polls on April 10. You can't go wrong.

Vote for these

ASUI elections near it is important for the voters to carefully evaluate the candidates. This spring there are several very qualified candidates with a wide variety of backgrounds.

John Lyons has been very ac- ctive with the Political Opinion Committee. He is very knowledgeable in state and campus issues and has attended several senate meetings showing he is willing to be a dedicated ASUI senator.

Hollie Coday is currently a member of Faculty Council. Her dedication and excellence in research has made her a good indication of the excellent senator I feel she would be.

Mike Cobble has been active on several student committees as a student representative. He has also attended several senate meetings and is dedicated to a more productive senate.

John Rauch, as a returning ASUI lobbyist, has exceptional knowledge of state issues. The fantastic job he did in Boise is what I feel he would do as an ASUI Senator.

Cherri Sabala is currently a member of Communications Board. Her extensive knowledge about the communications departments would be a great asset to the future ASUI Senator.

This spring we have a long list of qualified candidates I would urge you to seriously consider: John Lyons, Hollie Crawford, Mike Cobble, Sherri Lachendro, John Rauch, David Dodge and Mike Felton when casting your vote next Wednesday.

Student music group spreads jazzmania

Jazz is an important entertainment medium here on the Palouse. The success of the Lionel Hampton-Chevron Jazz Festival is one example of its popularity ... the University of Idaho's School of Music jazz program is another.

But what really signifies a popular medium is the ability for people to find that certain form of entertainment and the ability for those groups that perform to find the places to play. One of the most significant signs of its eminence is a student jazz group know as Jazzmania.

The group, Jazzmania, is a five-man combo featuring saxophonist Dan Carlson and trumpeter Dale Curtis backed by a rhythm section. The rhythm section includes Paul Schieffert on piano, Steve Kompst on bass and Mike Petersen on drums. All are students at UI.

The Moscow Hotel in the Garden Lounge provides the band with its greatest exposure. The group performs on alternating Wednesday nights with Cross-Current, another jazz group consisting of faculty from both the UI and Washington State University. Jazzmania does make other music performances and tries to style their music depending on their audience.

“We've played for private parties, the Law School party, the commencement party and the Elks Club. We like to play any kind of music to please all of our audience,” said designated leader Dale Curtis.

The group first got together and started playing in the fall of '83. Curtis booked their first "gig" at the Hotel to keep the group playing and provide some incentive.

"Anytime you get a group of guys together it's fun for a while, but you need the incentive. Part of it (the incentive) is the money and part of it is the audience." Curtis said.

Curtis, a junior in Music Education, began playing trumpet in his school band in

Play handles hard question of suicide

By Douglas Jones
Staff Writer

Second Chance, a play produced by WSU Theatre and written by WSU professor Lou Furman, played Monday evening in the Hartung Theatre.

The play was performed in what seems to be the typical environment for such productions: a near-empty theatre.

This was unfortunate, not only because the play was written by a fellow 'Palousean,' or because it was well done, but because the subject matter of the play is a topic of urgency that needs to be examined by all segments of our community.

The subject is suicide.

The story line revolved around a young girl named Marie (Camille Carrigan) and her encounters with her parents (Diana Fairchild and Hestet A. Rees), teacher (Douglas Lalli) and boyfriend (Chuck Bigham).

The pressure of the of her relationship with her boyfriend cause them to breakup which precipitates the his successful suicide. Blamed for his death by the boy's sister (Lori Lee Bishop) and disturbed by the impending divorce of her parents, Marie takes an overdose of pills.

The play then enters semi-surrealism. In a dream-like state she is visited by her boyfriend who informs her that she is dead. She watches as her parents, teacher and friends grieve and question her death. Seeing how her death effects the people in her life, she desires to come back.

Her boyfriend tells her that there are "no second chances." But for her there is.

Furman does a wonderful job in creating an emotionally involving story and spotlighting the sensitive issue of suicide.

This was Furman's intention: to make people aware of the growing problem of teenage suicide, and hopefully, by getting people to talk about it, to somehow prevent it.

Carrigan's portrayal of the average teenage girl going through emotional distress was more than believable as she succeeded in making the audience empathize with Marie.

One negative comment: upon returning, Marie's conclusion that she was "in control" of her life was totally unsupported by her observations during her death-like trance. While in that trance, seeing how her parents and friends suffered after Marie's death, one would have thought that the moral was not to commit suicide because of the suffering the act could inflict upon others. Instead, her final conclusion, unsubstantiated by the rest of the play, was that her problems did not justify her desperate solution.

Jazz, next page

Redding, California. He describes his age as "29 and holding." He cites his music career as three years in the Fort Bragg Army band; professional performing for many years; living in Alaska for ten years and giving-up playing for two of those years; and finally deciding to return to college and learn the art of teaching music.

The sax man of the group is Dan Carlson, a senior in music education. In any given performance you may see Carlson play one of three musical instruments. What is really amazing is that not only does he play them all, but he plays them all exceptionally well. Carlson is one of those saxophone players that can play the tenor, alto and soprano saxophone.

Rounding out the group are the bassist and drummer who provide the time and feel for Jazzmania. A sophomore in music composition, Steve Kompt has been playing the bass since junior high. Having gone to school in Las Vegas, Kompt has been exposed in many aspects of the professional music scene.

Drummer Mike Petersen is majoring in music percussion performance. He originally majored in mining engineering but made the switch when his old band director suggested he try music. A junior, Petersen is already thinking about his alternatives after college. His prospects include the Air Force's music programs or continuing his education and working towards his Masters degree.

When asked why he plays jazz Carlson said, "I don't know...probably I'm just addicted to it more than anything. It's so original. A lot of it is improvisatory and gives an individual the opportunity to express themselves. It's America's music.

Paul Scheffert, Jazzmania's pianist, is majoring in music composition and wants to pursue a career in performing and writing music. Scheffert is originally from Grangeville where he played trumpet in his high school band. However, he rebounded his outlook and decided to take the piano seriously.

Vandals to feature 5-2 "D"

By Greg Klimer
Sports Editor

The defensive unit of the University of Idaho will have a few different wrinkles next season, namely bodies and a 5-2 set-up.

According to Vandal defensive coordinator John Smith, the coaches decided the 5-2 would be their strategy mid-season last year.

"We re-evaluated what we were doing," Smith said. "We tried to see if what we were doing was unrealistic to the players we had."

What the Vandal defensive brain trust found was that the 5-2 would bolster strength up the middle.

"Our people were responsible for two gaps up front last season," Smith said. "This way, the guys will just need to fill one hole."

"It really doesn't change things too much," Smith explained. "We're just asking for more support."

The five of the 5-2 could almost be classified as 4 1/2 with the "whip" linebacker lined up over the opponent's tight end.

"He's more in the strong safety or quick linebacker mold," Smith said. "He'll have some pass coverage duties."

The leading candidate to fill the "whip" position is 6-foot-2 junior Dave Parker from Sandpoint.

The other end of the defensive front will be for the Vandal "trouble-maker." He should be our big play man, the trouble-maker," Smith said. "He'll be rushing 50 percent of the time."

The inside men will be John Andrews, Dave Young, Mike Bailey, Daryn Young or Mark Schlereth.

"Mark has been a pleasant surprise; he can be dominant," Smith said of his Anchorage product. "He's turned in a 4.7-40 already."

The linebacking corp looks solid with the return of last year's leading tackler, middle linebacker Mike Cox.

"He has the strength to face people; he can take them on," Smith said of his junior backer.

Other returnees are Tom Hennessey, Nolan Harper, Kevin Bailey and Peter Wilkins.

Although losing corners Steve Simpson and Cal Loevall to graduation, the defensive secondary looks good led by two-year vet Mark Tidd.

"We must control the six strategic waterways of the world," V.J. Lenin quipped.

1. Strait of Gibraltar
2. Suez entrance to the Red Sea
3. The Aden exit from the Red Sea
4. The Malacca Strait
5. The Cape of Good Hope

Ball today
The University of Idaho baseball club returns to Guy Wick’s field today as they play host to Spokane Falls Community College in a twin bill starting at 1:30.

The Idaho club, 0-1, will return the favor as they travel to Spokane for a double dipper Saturday against S.F.F.C.

Bad weather has forced the club to cancel their last six games and Coach Paul Mathis feels the weather was a factor in the club’s loss this year, a 23-13 loss to Shoreline Community College of Seattle.

Their pitchers had no continuity. "They just hadn’t had enough work,” Mathis said.

That’s Mr. T, as in Mr. T of the “A Team.” That’s nothing to get excited about, but the referee for the match was Muhammad Ali. Billy Martin was the announcer and Liberace was the timekeeper.

Cyndi Lauper, who manages the current women’s champ Wendi Richter, was also there and got into it with the Fabulous Moolah.

Yes, sir; pro wrestling is back. What’s that, you didn’t know it had gone anywhere?

Well, it virtually disappeared on the national scene until the popularity of All-American wrestling and TNT (Tuesday Night Titans) grew.

Now we have Mr. T and Hulk Hogan, the current “world” champ, hosting Saturday Night Live and appearing on the talk show circuit. They even made an appearance on the CBS Morning News the other day.

As sport, wrestling probably leaves a little to be desired. But as entertainment it can be just plain fun. Who else can give you cage matches, battle royales, sleeper holds, flying moons and piledrivers?

Wrestling is the vaudeville of TV sports. It gives you gags, pratfalls, goofy costumes and overacting. When you think about it, it’s no worse than any sitcom the so-called major net works give you.

When I was a kid, the stars of the sport were greats such as Pompo Ferro, the Wild Bull of the Pompes, Mad Dog Vachon, Crusher Kowalski and Haystack Callihan.

It used to go down to the local armory when the show came to town and it was thrill to see these crazed behemoths throw each other around the place.

They’d hit each other with chairs, eye gouge, bite each other and pull foreign objects out of their trunks. But the most fun was watching the crowd.

Little old ladies and men would be at ringside shaking their cans at the bad guys they loved to hate and shouting encouragement for the guys who always “broke down.” Us kids would mob our favorite cult heroes seeking autographs.

And they’d always oblige. Even the baddest of the bad.

After all, they were just working men trying to make a buck.

So what if they tried to rip your t-shirt off? We knew a bad guy could never win in the long run.

And that’s what always comes down to — the good versus the evil. So what if they jam it up a little? If we watched TV simply for the culture it provided, the tube would hardly ever warm up.

Someone in a match between Mr. Fuji and Superfly Jimmy Snuka and see if you don’t yourself cheering (if only for yourself) for Superfly to give him a good one off the top rope.

It may not be as deep as “Dallas”, but it’s not good clean entertainment I’ll challenge Liberace to a cage match.

All-Idaho set

The University of Idaho men’s track team heads to Boise this Saturday to defend its title in the annual All-Idaho Track and Field meet at Boise State University.

The Vandals captured the title last year by scoring 74 points. Boise State finished second with 64 followed by Idaho State in third with 30.

This year’s meet is scheduled to begin with the women’s 5000-meter event at 11:00 am and the first field event at 11:30 am. The meet will once again be strong in the sprint events this season with veterans Dave Smith, Everett Waniels and Sam Rodaux returning. Joining the veterans is freshman Chris Stokes. These four athletes have already qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships in the 400-meter relay with a qualifying time of 39.81.

Smith is the defending winner in the 100 and 200 meters with times last year of 10.53 and 21.55 respectively. Rodaux placed second in the 400 last season and captured the 400 meters with a clocking of 47.94. His best time this season in the 400 is 47.46.

In the field events, shot putter Tim Taylor and pole vaulter Steve Miller are expected to gain points for Idaho. Taylor, who competed in the NCAA Indoor Championships earlier this year, qualified with a throw of 60'9". He has thrown over 58 feet outdoors. Last year he placed second in the event with a throw of 54'1".

Ott, a freshman, has vaulted 16'-0" indoors this season and already matched his personal best of 15'-6" outdoors. Last year’s winning height was 15'-6" by Pat Simmons of Idaho State. Joining Ott in the pole vault will be Mitch Wolfe and Mike Dougherty.

Following this Saturday’s meet, the Vandals will compete at Oregon State University on April 13 in Corvallis.

McMahon resigns

University of Idaho assistant football coach John McMahon has resigned his position effective January 1st, according to Vandals head coach Dennis Erickson.

McMahon, who has been on Erickson’s staff the past three years, said he is resigning “to pursue opportunities outside the college level of coaching.”

McMahon coached linebackers, the offensive line and the defensive ends during his three seasons. He joined Erickson’s staff after coaching for four seasons at Montana State where he served as offensive coordinator and line coach.

Erickson said he will make internal adjustments within his current staff to cover the various coaching responsibilities.

Netters busy

The Idaho women’s tennis team face their most difficult road trip of the season as they head to the coast for four matches. The Lady Vandals opened the trip in Seattle on Wednesday against Washington. On Thursday Idaho travelled to Tacoma for a 3:00 encounter with Puget Sound. They will end the trip in Portland today with conference matches against Idaho State at 5:00 and Portland State at 4:00.

Head coach Jim Sevall says the Vandals will use the strong competition that Washington and UPS provided them for the conference opponents. “While Washington and Puget Sound are not to be overlooked, we will be pointing to the Idaho State and Portland State matches,” Sevall said. “Our goal is to win the Mountain West Conference championship, and beating ISU and PSU would help us reach that goal.”

The Vandals rated their record to 7-1 last Friday by beating Washington State in Pullman by the score 6-3. Holly Benson, Pam Waller, Karine Wagner and Jolene Bacca earned singles victories for Idaho. The doubles teams of Benson-Bacca and Jane Straisman and Kathy Benson clinched the victory. Sevall pointed to the play of Bacca and Waller, both three-set winners, as the key to turning the match in Idaho’s favor. Benson remained undefeated in singles play and is now 8-0, while Straisman is 7-1 after suffering her first loss. Waller and Wagner are both 6-1.

The Idaho men’s team also has a busy week scheduled. The Vandals lost to Washington State 8-1 Tuesday, with Idaho’s Bob Hlavacek taking the only Idaho win. Today the Vandals travel to Cheney to meet Big Sky for Montana State at 3:00.

Gymnastic show

The University of Idaho Physical Education Department is sponsoring the fourth annual Gymnastics Extravaganza to be held Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13 at 7:00 pm in the Physical Education Building large gymnasium.

Pullman’s Gymnastic North Club, the University of Idaho Continuing Education Children’s Program, Physical Education majors and former University of Idaho gymnasts will perform for this highlighted University of Idaho Parent’s Weekend program. Over 80 performers, ages 3 to 20, will demonstrate basic to advanced skills on both men’s and women’s apparatus.

strengthen and we'll be able to live in a self-sufficient society."

Butler claims that the Jews are guilty of terrorism in trying to achieve their means. "Sharon and Begin are the ones who brag about the fact that they are the foremost terrorists," he says that he, with his own hands, struggled to death two British sergeants with barbed wire. Now that's murder. But yet he comes ever here and gets the red carpet treatment as the president receives him..."

Butler believes that the people who own and control us are the people who own and control the money — the Jews. "Parasites", those that charge interest on money, "are trying to eat out the core of our nation."

"Truth has never been popular. President Johnson said the government has a right to lie to the people. I doubt that. You say this is a democracy. Well it is, but the constitution wasn't set up as a democracy. You won't find anything about democracy in our organic document of any part of government in the history of the U.S. from the Declaration of Independence until now."

Butler quotes President Lincoln as saying "never can we ever have the two races together. There is a gulf that divides us. It is so vast that it can never be bridged. I am not for now, nor have I ever been for the equality of the negro and the white man." Butler claims that Lincoln recognized a great harm was being done to the black man but also a great harm was being done to the white man because of the black man.

"We whites are stupid, look at the Japanese. They're racist but we don't condemn them. The same is true with the Chinese. They know the differences and they do something about it."

Butler claims some of the biggest problems his group is faced with now are finances and faulty public perception, which has been enhanced through biased media coverage.

"Our people are the working men of the earth. We have a lot of professional people that want to support us, but, by and large, the majority consists of the working man. The working man is the person who is getting kicked in the teeth." It is not possible to get a job when you're associated with a group that the public looks down on," said Eddy, an ex-marine and California police officer who grew up in the Boston area. "If you really want to know, it feels like being discriminated against — join our church."

"We have a lot of professional people who support us," said Butler. However, some people don't want to publicly be identified with the church and its members. "If things progress," said Edy, "somebody is going to get killed or injured very seriously. He [Broadbent] is afraid of the dark, he sees Nazis under his bed. We've never committed any crimes up here, people came onto our property and planted a bomb."

In a brief phone interview, Broadbent claimed there is no truth behind the accusations. "They're basically wild accusations which I think don't even deserve comment. As far as criminal acts go," said Broadbent, "we investigate all crimes no matter who they are perpetrated against. I don't discriminate against individual members of the Separate group. I won't reveal names of members if a person were to call up and ask for them."

According to Broadbent, when the bombing incident occurred in June of 1981, the Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco was called. "They are set up to help trace information," such as fragments sent out from the explosion which may help determine the exact positive material used."

"People up here don't want to receive all of this publicity," said Broadbent. "They (comm­unity residents) don't tolerate this group and their activities) any more than I do."

"All we want," said Butler, "is to be with our own."

"We can't even solve our own parking problem, and you want to discuss this?" Council Member Rosario P. Pasolini asked the board, getting a round of applause from the spectators.

Council Member David J. Walker thought it appropriate to make some statement to show abhorrence of the practice of apartheid. Another proponent of the divestment, council member Kenneth M. Harris, said that the U.S. investments directly support the apartheid regime. Even if the investment is small, he said, it gives the regime legitimacy and dignity.

Harris also said that the U.S. corporations, who are currently investing about $14 billion in South Africa, on using their profits and resources out of South Africa and spending it in a way so they make it easy from them. Since 1976, 41 colleges have approved divestment, either totally or partially, according to a report in the March 5 issue of "Administrative Magazine. The article, which was presented to the council, showed that divest­ment had "neither helped nor hindered" these colleges.

speak English, he explained, but not well enough to do the translations themselves.

He added that a bad translation has the potential to turn the reader off, and perhaps cause the reader to assume that writer has failed, instead of the translator.

Garcia Marquez was happy with Rebassa’s translation of his bestseller.

"He says it reads better in English than in Spanish," said Rebassa in an amused tone, "whatever that means."

Besides Spanish and Portuguese, Rebassa also speaks French, Italian, Catalan and Japanese, a region in northeastern Spain.

Celeste, Latin, and a smattering of German and Russian.

If he devotes all of his time to translating, Rebassa said he can complete a 200 page book in "a month or two." Even for a novel by an internationally known author, Rebassa would only say that he earns "too little," but that fees for translators are rising.

PBW, an organization of translators, has recently published a bill of rights that states that translators should collect royalties, and Rebassa said that now some authors, including himself, have royalty rights on some translations.

"It's another thing if you collect them," he said laughingly.

But he added that you never know when a book is going to be a success with the English speaking world, and cited Italian Umberto Eco’s bestseller as an example.

"With the smash that The Name of the Rose has been, it’s flattering to know that Bill Wievesright (the translator) has been collecting royalties," Rebassa noted.

Rebassa does not think that Spanish will ever become an official second language in the United States because the Hispanic population is so scattered, and he believes that most Americans are "woefully behind" in foreign language knowledge. He supports mandatory foreign language requirements in high schools and colleges, and also urged that it be taken.

"The Japanese learn the language of their business, the Russians learn the language of their politics, and we don’t learn them," he said.

compelled for the students, John Vanderpool and Ray Lance can provide the voice that students need to faculty. Both of these men are efficient and influential debates that bring out points which can sway the council's position on issues. These two candidates would listen as well as research issues and present them to the advantage of the students.

John has been an ASU Senator and is very familiar with the methods needed to persuade Faculty Council members. Ray is an effective leader, listener, and would keep students views and concerns in mind at all times.

Remember to vote on April 10, for John Vanderpool and Ray Lance. Let them represent your views.

Students are paying for the utilities, the equipment and the space used by the student newspaper, as said. If those expenses were included in the budget, the Argonaut would be losing money, he said. "The students are still subsidizing the Argonaut.

He also said that the ASUI does not make the income it has projected.

Sen. Chris Berg said he does not think the Argonaut staff members deserve a pay cut, but there is a limit to the amount of money a person working for the ASUI should make.

Sen. Rich Kuck argued against the finance committee's proposal and in favor of Freund's. "What I think, we should do is trust them," he said. "They've proven that they will work hard.

Freund defended her proposal by saying that cutting the staff members' pay from what they have received since the rebudgeting is like telling them: "Don't try so hard next semester." As for the argument that the Argonaut staff members make more than other students working for the ASUI, Freund said, "Who cares who gets more money?" She said that comparing salaries for different jobs is like comparing apples and oranges.

After this discussion, the senate passed the budget proposed by the finance committee. The senators who voted against the budget were Larry Seif, Scott Speelman, Rich Kuck, Lorna DeBiete, Mike Fellon and Holly Rickett. Those voting in favor of it were Habiger, Berg, Lindberg, John Vanderpool, Patton and Kelli Kast. That tied the vote at 6-6, leaving the decision up to Dose.

Before voting, he looked at Argonaut advertising manager Suzanne Gore. "Suzanne, will you ever speak to me again?" "No," she said. Then Dose voted. "I can't help it. Yes," he said. His vote decided that the budget would pass, as proposed by the finance committee.

Freund said Thursday that she does not think the senate will be able to override her veto because the vote was so close.

Two-thirds, nine of the senators, must vote in favor of overriding the veto to keep the budget as it was passed Wednesday night.

The senate is expected to deal with the override issue at its next meeting, on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the SUB Chief's Room. The senators will probably also discuss the override issue at the pre-session on Tuesday, which is at the same place and time. Both meetings are open to the public.

Another budget issue was whether the senate should include budgets for Nightline, the Student Bar Association and the Idaho Law Review in the budget package. Some senators suggested waiting until the fall to fund those organizations, but the senate voted to include them in the budget. Representatives from the law school organizations said they needed to know now whether they would receive ASUI funds in the fall.

The senate also decided to maintain the Attorney General's salary at $460 per pay period even though the finance committee recommended that the salary be cut to $375.

In other business, the senate passed a resolution supporting a $10 increase in ASUI fees. That resolution will be considered by the UI Board of Regents at its April meeting.
