ASUI capital reserve ‘critical’

By Megan Goudel Of the Argonaut

The ASUI capital Reserve is presently at $15,761 after the Senate gave Outdoor Rentals its $10,105 and RUOJ $7,259 to buy equipment from the Capital Reserve at Wednesday’s meeting. The alternate bill to giving $10,105 to Outdoor Rentals did not pass. It proposed transferring $4,905 from the $10,105 originally granted to the Outdoor Rentals to the Capital Reserve.

The Senate gave its approval to the alternate bill. President Freund said, “I feel that’s critical.” According to the present Freund, she was against the passage of $10,105 from the Capital Reserve because it might not provide for any unforeseen capital expenses in the future. She said if such a capital expense came up over the $15,761, “We would have to try and pull a loan somewhere or close down that program if it was critical enough of a problem.”

President Freund also said, “I think they’ve put themselves in a precarious financial situation. To liquid reserves sink that low is a mistake.”

President Freund stopped all bids on Outdoor Rental equipment on Tuesday. After the action taken by the Senate, she said she was planning to release the hold yesterday (Thursday).

Jim Rennie, director of Outdoor Programs, said “I think that’s a fine balance. A lot of our concern about the $10,000 we asked for seemed to be about there we need to have some reserves in case something comes up. At that time, there was no feeling that anything was coming up. In the weeks since, the ASUI has manufactured a crisis.”

Sen. Rich Xo, who was in favor of giving Outdoor Rentals the full $10,105 asked that opportunity within the Capital Reserve be increased.

The chairmen of Golf Course Board, Police and Recreational Committee and Recreational Facilities Board, the three unappointed positions, would receive a $75 per month salary, after the Senate passed the bill Wednesday. The money would be taken out of General Reserve, and Board members would also receive a $50 increase in pay for their work on the committee. The Senate passed the bill transferring $1,743 from General Reserve to the Election Board.

This increase returns the salary to the salary Election Board members were cut last year before the ASUI cut the budget.

In other financial business, the Senate passed the bills reducing income in the Student Trust Reserves from Idaho Educational Ad. by $4,462. Arguicated by $9,425, ASUI/SUF Films by $6,316 and the Photo Bureau by $2,500.

Freund said in her speech, “In the span of one minute the Senate cut projected incomes by $21,000, yet nobody even clamped the passing. That action really surprised me and I think that’s one of our biggest concern about the meetings discussing OP. What are the effects of the projected actions? Do you really know?”

The Senate also asked for $600 from its General Reserve to pay for a printing expense incurred by the General Reserve current standing at $4,264 after Wednesday’s Senate meeting and with the $10,000 given to the General Reserve.

Borah hopesfuls named

By Regeon Davie For the Argonaut

Philip Habib, a former special envoy of the Middle East and U.S. alumni, has agreed to participate in this year’s Borah Symposium, chairman Jim Owen announced.

The topic, “The Search for Peace in the Middle East,” will aim at addressing the Palestinian issue constructively from both the Arab and Israeli points of view.

Habib played an active role in the negotiations for the removal of the Palestinian Liberation Organization’s (PLO) forces from Lebanon three years ago when he was serving as special envoy under President Jimmy Carter. Habib has agreed to attend the annual spring symposium for “much less than his usual fee,” Owen said.

Habib has consented to act as moderator of the two to three day program sponsored by the U.S. and the Borah Foundation Committee.

Upon suggestions from Habib, the symposium committee has also invited former President Jimmy Carter, Middle East expert and recent author of “Blood and Absolution,” which is a historical account of Middle East affairs during his term of office.

The committee has also invited Waid Khalafli from the Harvard Center for Middle Eastern Studies, and Moron Benvenisti, former deputy mayor of Jerusalem and author of the “West Bank Data Project,” which is a factual account of the West Bank situation.

The Borah Foundation Committee is currently seeking other available information sources on their chosen topic but as yet has not finalized the program.

The Borah Symposium is an annual workshop designed to further knowledge on current national and international issues in memory of the late Senator Borah.

ASUI House

Hazzard wants new chamber

By Sara Kersh Of the Argonaut

Andy Hazzard, by throwing his hat in the ring, has made it a three-way race for the office of ASUI President.

The 24 year old native of Boise says he is running to create more opportunity for students to get involved in the Reserve Assembly. “I think that I could make a big impact on campus, not because I’m personally important but because of my policies.”

Hazzard, a political science and philosophy major, has an extensive background in both student government and state wide campaigns. Two years ago he served one term in the ASUI Senate and was elevated as chair of the Associated Reserve of Idaho, a state wide student government organization. Also while in the Senate, Hazzard served as chairman of the Reserve Rules and Regulations Committee.

Hazzard has also worked for U.S. Representative Larry Craig in Washington D.C., and Lt. Gov. David Leroy in Boise.

Hazzard said that one problem in the ASUI is the lack of student input. His proposed solution is to create an ASUI House of Representatives. “There is a perception amongst those living off campus that they have little opportunity to get involved in student politics,” said Hazzard. A House of Representatives would allow living off campus students, organized into constituencies, to be represented. "I would be the ball in their court," he said, referring to off-campus students.

The ASUI and the House of Representatives would work together with either a joint or double committee system, said Hazzard. "I think, though, that it is important to keep the Senate because it acts as a pipeline for overall student feelings," he said.

The presidential candidate is currently researching how the necessary changes in the constitution could be made to implement his proposal. Hazzard, on the budget, advocates fiscal responsibility. He said the current administration has done a good job. "A really strong executive approach helps keep the balance," he said. Hazzard also said greater communication between departments and the executive would help balance the budget.

It has been suggested that the election has become a contest between the student body and the administration because the campus Rifle Team is Greek and White, and other student groups are Asian and International. "That’s an artificiality,” said Hazzard, who is Greek. "I want students to vote for me because of what I say and not because of where I live," he said.

FLU SHOTS AVAILABLE

Some of the symptoms of flu include fever, chills, congestion and coughing. Leonard said the shots will be available for two more months, “but the sooner the student gets the shot the better. The vaccine protects against type A and B influenza, which are the most common types of flu. Anyone allergic to eggs should avoid the vaccine because the virus is grown and fertilized on eggs.

The shots are available at the Student Health Center for $8, or from any private physician.

CANDIDATES WANTED: Apply for ASU now

Three weeks ago, the ASU elections season kicked off, the earliest start in years. There was a rush by candidates to take out petitions and announce their bids for office.

So far the campaigns have been conducted with a positive regard toward student government. For the first time in a while, candidates are not running against the ASU, but indicate they wish to become part of an organization that is doing positive things. This is a welcome change.

The three candidates for president and the three for vice-president currently serving on the ASU staff or official in some position.

There is a geographical balance among the office-seekers. Seven from the Main Line Greek houses, four from New Greek Row, and five GDF.

Unfortunately, there are only two hopefuls from Off-Campus. About 54 percent of the students live "out there." They could bring a step closer to the ideal geographical balance, but the student government must be more inclusive to become the official voice for all.

ASU is not the only elected official. It is the Associated Students University of Idaho. That's all of us.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In a scoop of colossal proportions, the Idaho Argonaut, learned that the Reagan administration is engaging in an effort to sweep the biggest cover-up in American history. A high-level classified paper leaked to this writer reveals that the government has been hiding the Russians, and the American public, for the last five years, the nature of the nation's national defense.

It has long been assumed America's protection depends upon what the Pentagon calls our "nuclear triad." I.e. bombers, submarines and ICBM's. More recently, Star Wars has been proposed as the means of ensuring our security for the foreseeable future. However, a highly placed CIA official told the Argonaut that as early as 1981, the President became dissatisfied with all these programs.

"Just as Star Wars will make missiles ineffective, so will more distant technologies render Star Wars obsolete." Reagan reported to have said, "What we need is a way to insure America's freedom, not just for a decade or two, but for many lifetimes. I want that to be the legacy of the Reagan administration."

Shortly after the President's remark, the Grand Corporation, a conservative think tank in Washington, was secretly given a contract to study this problem. Their solution, which has become official government policy, can now be revealed. The last five years our government has been shifting away from our nuclear triad to a "new triad" defense, composed of toxic wastes, acid rain and the silent desert.

So shocked by the implications of this new strategy, the Grand Corporation sought further information from the CIA informant. He asked, politely at first, but later, "House unanimously be it a part of our defense when we don't spend any money on them?"

"Precisely," the informant replied, "That's the beauty of this plan," he replied. "It requires no money. In fact, it requires very little money. Don't clean up these wastes be spent elsewhere -- like the military budget, for example."

It was suggested to him to elaborate on the logic of the new toxic defense.

"It's really quite simple," he said. "In order to keep the Russians out, we had to find a way to keep them from putting up an umbrella. We presently have over a quarter-million toxic waste sites operating in several states and shooting more being created every day. This gives us a total of several hundred megatons of waste which we can't afford to have any more. This - which we wouldn't want to be in the first place."

In search of fresh arguments, the Argonaut stumbled across Nuclear Regulatory Commissions documents which advocated the establishing of "beezer-reactors" throughout the country, ostensibly to provide electricity.

This paper has since revealed that the real purpose of these reactors, which produce more plutonium than they consume, is to ensure an ever-increasing supply of these extremely radioactive wastes. This will guard against any attempt by Soviet or Greenpeace agents to destroy our national defense.

Unfortunately, to the general public, the House and Senate voted in closed session to support this new strategic defense. Congressional documents reveal that Sen. Paul Laxalt (R-Nevada), made an impassioned speech in favor of acid rain. He said that Nevada had been getting along quite well for centuries without any trees. He also mentioned that even the current Congress would dare flood rivers where all the fish were belly up. See "Falsehoods of the Week" for a list of the Senators who had forced the President into cleaning up as many as six of the toxic waste sites.

"It was an attempt to serve the interests of the defense. It was also an attempt to maintain the President's position that "vegetable" should not stand in the way of national defense."

"Precisely," the American Associations for the Preservation of American Landscape, said. "It was on the threshold of lifetime security. The CIA estimates with eight more years of Republican leadership, the job should be accomplished. Then for the first time in human history, a nation will be able to face the threat of overseas invasion."

Don't you feel safer already?

LETTERS POLICY: The Idaho Argonaut will accept letters to the editor until noon on the day prior to publication. They should be limited to one page in length, typed, and double-spaced. For subjects requiring greater exposition, arrangements may be made with the editor. Letters must be signed in full, and include the name, address, and phone number of the writer. Proof of identity will be needed at time of submission. Letters should be no longer than one page in length. Confirmation of authorship is made. Names of writers will not be withheld. Letters may be edited for mechanical and spelling errors. Only two letters from any candidate for ASU office will be published. Letters which support more than one candidate will be apportioned accordingly. The Idaho Argonaut reserves the right to refuse to publish any letter.

Distinguished author, May Sarton, spoke at UI

By Sarah Kerruish
Of the Argonaut

May Sarton, a distinguished American author, spoke at the UI on Monday evening, the Tuesday morning. On Monday, at the Aguaclal Science Building, her theme was "Passion, the joys and hazards of being a poet. On Tuesday, in Brink Hall, Sarton led an informal discussion about writing, women, life and America.

Sarton has written over thirty volumes of poetry, novels and journals. Tina Foryes, from the UI English department, introduced Sarton on Monday. "She is a legend in her lifetime and fortunately our time," said Foryes, UI English department.

The 73-year-old lady looked fragile as she walked on stage, but when she spoke her voice was sonorous and bursing with vitality. The standing ovation she received at the end of the reading was a testament to the way she had touched the audience with her poetry and her enthusiasm for life.

"The life of a poet is wonderful, but it is not an easy life," said Sarton. Although she has written novels and journals, Sarton considers herself primarily a poet. "In solitude I would write only poetry, for myself and God," she said.

The poet explained that she writes her novels only "at that awful time" when she cannot write poetry, being able to write other things during those periods saves her from becoming an alcoholic, she said. Her poems begin with an image, Sarton said. The inspiration can be something as simple as a glass of water, she said. It can be a place, like the Greek Islands, which inspired the poem On Patmos. "A poet is someone who thinks in images, who sees the world in a grain of sand," she said.

Once Sarton has an image she then begins the process of exploring that image. "I don't know what I'm going to say before I write the poem," she said. "My poems often go through fifty drafts."

Sarton said she knows a poem when she has an image and line of meter. She said the rhythm of a poem is as important as the best to pop music but not as obvious.

Sarton described how lines of a poem about her father came to her on a train. The nursery rhyme type rhythm seemed at first ridiculous and trite to her, but later she said it became the perfect medium for answering her father who had many childlike qualities. "Trust Your Subconscious," she said.

Sarton described herself as essentially a lyric poet. "It is lyric poetry that one remembers," she said.

One of the great hazards of being a poet is vulnerability, but it is also a great asset, said Sarton. In her poem The Frog, the Naked Creature she says. "It is alarming to find the soul leaping to the surface exposed." "But pain is the great teacher," she said. "True poetry is written in the vulnerable." Sarton's poems reveal a rare spirit. A deep humanitarian impulse pervades her writings.

"A poet is someone who thinks in images, who sees the world in a grain of sand."

May Sarton

Another review in the Times gave her cause, she claimed. A critic said the novel, A Reckoning was a lesbian novel and used a poem Sarton had written years before as proof. "It was anything but a lesbian poem," she said.

Sarton, after an hour and a half of animated discussion, said she was tired and would like to stop. Admirers gathered around her to thank her.

The magnitude of this incredible lady is best summarized by a lady who in tears said, "She was supposed to come here and talk to us like she did, to make ourselves aware of what we are capable of doing."

MPC returns

By Mike Long

Cliff the Cat

Beneath the stage lights, the actors and actresses of the Master's Production Company took a comical and yet thought-provoking look at the "Great American Relationship."

Their visit was sponsored by the UI's local chapter of Campus Crusade for Christ International, and Master's Production Company is the San Diego-based, dramatic branch of the ministry.

Director of the local branch Ralph Cooley said they are "interested in helping students grow in the spiritual dimension of their lives."

"And MPC is committed to that also and they use the means of drama to stimulate people's thinking in the area of spiritual things," he said.

The Master's Production Company was formed in 1980, according to member Mike Bennett. It was formed because "the leadership of Campus Crusade realized that there was a need for a drama-based ministry and there had been a previous called 'Havergal Players,'" Bennett said.

Master's Production Company performs last Tuesday at the Sigma Chi house in a musical called The Great American Relationship.

The first group was successful on the point of touring in Europe more than once, but they disbanded in the mid-70s and went into other areas of ministry because "people weren't quite sure how to utilize the brand of street theater that they had available," Bennett said. The local branch of Crusade found themselves in a similar situation last year, according to Cooley. "Last year, we had them on campus for one day. And we didn't know how to use them as well as we do now," Bennett said. "Especially in the area of monologues," he said. "This year was much better. They performed about 20 different ones in the two days they were here." The troupe also performed together in two major productions both nights.

"The monologues were done on issues affecting campuses today, such as dating, abortion and suicide. They were used to generate discussion and responses from the audience. Talking about the monologues, Bennett said, "The monologues range in topics, and generally they are about a 15-minute presentation, one person show, thus monologues."

"It takes a fairly objective point of view on topics," Bennett said. "We look at these different topics and they are controversial. People tend to be talking about them, so we get an impression of audiences."

"We give a presentation and lead a discussion after the talk," he said. "We'll look at both sides of the topic and whenever possible, we will present a Biblical view."

"Again, we're sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, and we profess to have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. That is the key difference in every area of our lives," he said.

Vandals plan invasion of ‘Cat den’

Nelson Washington speeds past an Eastern Washington defender to the end zone during Idaho’s 42-21 victory.

By Tim Liberman
The Idaho Statesman

This weekend the Idaho football squad will travel to Bozeman for what looks like would be an easy conference game. The Vandals are 4-1 in conference and 7-2 overall, coming off a big win over Eastern Washington last week. The Montana State Bobcats are 1-5 in conference coming off a 61-14 smashing at the hands of Nevada-Reno. But looks can be deceiving. The Bobcats are the defending NCAA Division I-AA Champions and are hungry to knock off the high flying Vandal offense.

Another factor to consider will be the weather in Bozeman. Traditionally it is a snow bowl up there and that could ground the air attack of Idaho. Montana State has had a series of injuries crippling them this season with the biggest coming to Quarterback Kelly Bradley who had 36 TD passes in ’84. His replacement is Greg An-dal who has thrown for only 3 TD’s this season, hence the offense is off as a whole. The running game is led by Senior Jesse Jones who has 433 rushing yards and 4 TD’s. Meanwhile Idaho is coming off a season where injuries hurt them and are now heading for their best season yet under Head Coach Dennis Erickson.

If the weather is bad Idaho may have to rely on a running game that has done well so far but is still second banana to the potent air game. The Vandals top runner is Freshman Todd Hoitzen who is coming off of a shoulder injury that may keep him out of the game.

Idaho is also hurting in the secondary as Kevin Johnson will be out 2-3 more weeks with a shoulder injury.

Idaho has been giving up an average of 210 yards/game passing while State has been throwing for over 250 yards/game even without Bradley.

The Vandals may also be looking ahead to their next game against Boise State on the 23rd of Nov. That will determine whether Idaho can score losses Big Sky if the Vandals get by Mont-ana State this week.

V-bers need wins

The Mountain West Athletic Conference is up for grabs in football and volleyball as well. Bobcats believe this to be their team at 1-5 in conference as they have current-ly won the last eight matches. Meanwhile Idaho is coming off two losses, and should come out clawing.

The next stop for UI will be Boise where the Bobcats, seventh in MWAC standings, will be looking to average an earlier loss to the Lady Vandals. MSU won both of last weekend’s mat-ches and seem to be making a last ditch attempt to rise in conference standings.

“We want to get back on the winning track,” said Bradetich, whose 16-13 squad has lost six of their last eight matches. Bradtich thinks that last weekend’s losses to Portland State and Boise State were two of the best experience for the team, where they found different methods to the Montana boys and come out ahead.

Todd Hoiness: The alternative express

By Tom Liberman

of the Argonaut.

The situation, Vandals up 14-0, fourth down and a yard to go on their own 45 yard line. The Idaho Air Express needs a running play so they go to Freshman Todd Hoiness.

That crucial first down play along with great running all season has put Hoiness as the number one fullback on the team.

Incidentally the above mentioned run was made with a sprained shoulder that occurred on the first play of the EWU game.

Hoiness said, "If it keeps improving the way it did from yesterday to today I'll play against Montana State," of the shoulder.

Hoiness is from Hoquiam, Washington where he played high school football and rushed for over 1000 yards his senior season. He was recruited by most of the schools in the Northwest but decided on Idaho because of the offense that Coach Dennis Erickson employs.

"I came to Idaho because I knew their football program and the wide open kind of offense they run," he said.

It seems strange that a runner would come to a predominantly passing school but with almost 600 rushing yards Hoiness seems to have made the right decision.

In high school Hoiness was All-State and was an honorable mention All-American in USA Today.

"My dad is a football coach and we discussed Idaho," he said. "They had a lot of injuries last year and that will hurt any good team."

While Hoiness did expect to be playing his best season he did not plan on starting or having 100 carries like games into the season.

Hoiness has seven touchdowns and is averaging 65.4 yards/game over double the second best on the team and 5.5 yard carry.

He said that he is very happy here at the UI with all of the campus, people, teammates and coaching staff being very friendly.

He has high praise for the offensive line that blocks for him and the passing attack which makes the running game up.

"Having a good running game makes it easier for the passing attack and when we can get three receivers and then run, the line just blows them (the defensive line) back," said Hoiness.

The offensive line is the best line in the conference as a group," Hoiness added.

While pleased with his performance this season he stresses the importance of the team winning over any individual stats.

The Idaho State game was a disappointment even though I rushed for 157 yards," he said. "My main goal is to keep contributing to the team winning."

He said the team has a chance to win the Big Sky if they play up to their potential.

The worst part of his game he said is his blocking which he is working hard to improve.

"My main goal is to keep contributing to the team winning," Hoiness said.

"The biggest adjustment from high school to college is the mental aspect of the game," Hoiness said.

He said the physical aspect was not as difficult for him because he weighs pretty much the same now as he did in high school.

This week's game in Boise may be a big change for the Idaho running game because the weather might be pretty bad and that could shut down the Vandals game.

Vets Day at WSU to be observed

A series of programs, featuring two leaders or organizations involved in vet care, will be held on campus this Veterans Day weekend, to honor and remember our veterans missing in Southeast Asia, has been scheduled for WSU's Vets Day observance.

Col. Earl P. Hopper (US Army Ret.), of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, and Patricia B. Shelly of Task Force Omega will discuss the history and recent events of MIA/POW issues at the Veterans Day seminar Monday, Nov. 11, at 9 a.m. in Room 216 of the Common Room Student Center.

The observance, with the theme, "A Celebration of Freedom," will also include a Monday noon rally on the Terrell Mall with a presentation of color guard and an address by Hopper. It will be followed by a reception for veterans in the CUB Room 212. At 7 p.m. in the CUB, a forum on the planting and maintaining of veterans in the CUB Auditorium will be held.

Other events will take place the rest of the week, such as the "Resource Forum," in the CUB with representatives of veteran support agencies; Thursday, an open meeting at the Kotonia House; and play nights, which will be a dance in the CUB ballroom.

USSR topic of seminar at WSU

Political and cultural aspects of life in the Soviet Union will be discussed in day-long seminars at the WSU Center for Soviet Studies, November 9, at 9 a.m. in the Buntly Reading Room of the Library.

The program, sponsored by the Center for Soviet Studies and the Office of International Programs, will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Buntly Reading Room of the Library.
