Parade by day... Party by night

By Douglas Jones

Moscow Mardi Gras weekend was off to a fine start as even solemn weather held back and let the traditional Grand Parade pass undaunted by rain.

This year’s parade was a mixture of old and new, in keeping with tradition, the white floats were a testament to the artistic ingenuity of their makers. My favorites included the beautiful but delicate castle, and the outrageous eccentric “Poiligriness.”

The second showing of the UI Law school’s Brief Case Corps was larger and more ordered, but one law student cheated and seran-wrapped her case against possible foul weather.

Additional unexpected entries of Moscow Jugglers and “Vets Juggling Pets” added to the festive feel of the street show. It was, however, not as pleasing. The addition of advertising was a dangerous precedent to set. Though humorously done, it still brought an element of commercialization unbefitting the occasion.

The parade was viewed by 6,000 plus spectators who braved the expected rain and wind.

Parade prize winners included the University of Idaho School of Business, Rep. Bunyon youth group; The Moscow Chamber of Commerce Welcomes the Stranger; Washington State University veterinary school’s Vets Juggling Pets, best drill team; Idaho Washington Dry Peas and Lentil Commission Split Peas, best theme: Flamming Jazz Trumpet, best overall; Happy Hounds 4-H Club, most sincere; Palouse Ski Bunny, most original float; Poiligriness, most creative float; Medieval Castle, prettiest float; UI Rodeo Club Meets the Rainers, crowd pleaser.

We sat in the ballroom and surveyed the aftermath of Mardi Gras.

The floor was dusty from the black and white shoes of a zillion party-goers and strewn with popped balloons, crushed glass, fallen banners and serpentine lying in forlorn heaps.

Half-smoked cigarettes and empty bottles were a definite anti-climactic note. A tangible ghost of a wild party.

But it was more than a wild party. The Beaux Arts Ball fulfilled its purpose: it bridged gapes in the community. The ball was a rare entwining of sexual clusters: middle-aged Muscovites, young UI students, and faculty members and their spouses.

A black and white dress code heightened the creativity of the celebrants. There were a few bizarre costumes sprinkled throughout the predictable array of black and white tuxedos and formals.

Among the minglers were a groovy ’60’s couple, a Roaring ’20’s couple, a man with a white cardboard movie camera over his head and a couple dressed as skunks.

One noticeable face in the crowd was a pseudo-blood splattered strait-jacketed were-wolf led around on a leash. The girl leading him said, “It’s the only way I can get him to go out with me.”

People who wanted a respite from the ballroom intensity were entertained by a somewhat professional cabaret showcasing local theater talent, Jackie Farringdon, Denise Wallace, Michaela Gallina and Robert Morgan sang, danced and told morbid jokes to a delighted audience.

Riding the buses to and from the soring bars was half the fun. We found out quickly that no smoking was allowable, except for hospitality, but laughing, falling and singing the theme.

The good, the bad, and Senate Bill 1336

By Matthew Foulke

Legislative Correspondent

BOSIE — How would you like to attend “the UI at Boise” or “the UI at Pocatello” It could be possible if the bill before the Senate Education Committee becomes law.

Senate Bill 1336 would establish a University of Idaho system in which an executive officer who is a president of UI would control all of the state-operated schools of higher education including UI, ISU, and LCSC.

Senate Bill 1336, along with its counterpart Senate Bill 1335, are designed to make higher education in Idaho more unified by creating a chancellor who would be directly responsible to the Board of Education or Board of Regents.

The prospect of a chancellor presiding over the two universities and colleges has drawn both praise and criticism. But Otter, a Republican candidate for Lt. Gov., wholeheartedly supported the idea, before a joint meeting of the Senate and House Education committees while former Idaho governor Robert E. Smyly spoke in opposition to it. Smyly did not believe the chancellor could provide a solution. He proposed open competition between Idaho’s institutions for programs, money, and prestige as more desirable alternative to achieve higher education in Idaho.

One of the leading proponents of the chancellor system is Rep. Janet Hay. R-Nampa gained first-hand experience in dealing with the universities since she served on the Idaho Board of Education for 12 years. Rep. Hay pointed out that the board is not made up of professional administrators, and she believes that a full-time chief administrator, who is an authoritative professional could be more effective in dealing with university presidents.

The chancellor could act as a single person for all of Idaho’s institutions of higher education. Rep. Hay sees a chancellor system as creating the possibility of a state-wide curriculum and catalogue for courses with ease of transfers between schools.

Deposition could be reduced as the chancellor would be able to create, delete, or move programs among the various institutions.

Doctor Charles McQuillen, the executive director of the State Board of Education, predicts that the chancellor bill would allow “create form without substance.”

He believes that there would not be enough monetary support from the legislature to support a chancellor and still give the position the power. Doctor McQuillen also stated that “the environment in Idaho doesn’t contribute to a central system.”

He said that there was only support given to the individual institutions regionally and by alumni.

Doctor McQuillen stated that under a chancellor “the UI has less than any other institution.” Programs could be shifted to other institutions readily, he said, noting Idaho’s law school in particular.

Doctor McQuillen also noted that if the intended power were conferred upon a chancellor, then he could gain a certain degree of power over the board. He said that “a board is never the equal of a chancellor in (available information).”

Legislative Bill Update

The青铜: All local legislators will be in session this week.

The Senate Education Committee will be hearing testimony on Senate Bill 1369, the giving Idaho’s local legislators more say in the shaping of educational policy.

The House Education Committee will be hearing testimony on House Bill 1009 on the changing of teaching policies. The bill would allow the director of Education to alter the current rule 19-01 which those who may be teaching Idaho schools must not become older than 60 at the age of 60 and the House Education Committee.

Hironaka wins award for range management

By Michoah Harb
Staff Writer

A faculty member that has been with the UI for more than 30 years has won the Outstanding Achievement Award for Range Management.

Minoru Hironaka, a professor in range land ecology, was honored with this award on Feb 12. The head of the Range Resources Department, David Bryan, accepted this award for Hironaka from the Society of Range Management at an international meeting in Orlando, Fla. last week.

According to the certificate accompanying the award, it goes to those individuals "whose contributions or careers have become eminently noteworthy in advancing the science and art of range-related resource management."

"I was surprised and honored," Hironaka said. He also said he guessed that the award was given to him because of the general work he has done in the past.

He is viewed as one of the world's foremost range ecologist, and has frequently conducted and reviewed research for the National Academy of Sciences. He has also won the 1983 Outstanding Faculty Award from the Associated Students of the University of Idaho.

Forest Engineering Conference in Moscow this week

Forest engineers from throughout the Pacific Northwest will be in Moscow, Wednesday-Friday, for the third annual Inland Empire Forest Engineering Conference at the University Inn-Best Western.

In conjunction with the conference, there will be a short-course on the use of electronic spreadsheets in forest engineering from 9:30 to 10 p.m. Wednesday, in room 225 of the UI Administration Building. Topics include the use of spreadsheets in timber sale appraisal, harvest planning, and the analysis of cash flow.

Main conference sessions will concentrate on the following: forest roads and forest transportation — lowering the cost and environmental impact; applications software; the human factor: potential for improvement; and experience with new equipment and methods of logging.

Speakers representing a variety of specialties will discuss different subjects during each session.

The registration fee for the short-course is $40. The conference registration fee is $85, which includes lunches on Thursday and Friday.

For more information, or to pre-register, contact University Continuing Education, UI, 885-6486.

ALCOA helps recruit minorities

By Sally Nakamura

For the Argonaut

ALCOA, the Aluminum Company of America, has awarded the UI Minority Students Services a $500 grant that will be used for recruiting minority students to the UI Minority Student Adviser Tiajuan Ball said.

The money will be spent updating a 10-year-old brochure informing minority students about available scholarships and special individual attention given to students.

Gem makes final four of collegiate yearbooks

By Erin Fanning
Staff Writer

The '85 Gem of the Mountains was judged as one of the top four yearbooks in the nation last week by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association (CSPA), according to Jon Erickson, Gem editor.

The Gem was one of three yearbooks to receive the silver crown award and came in second to the University of Illinois, winner of the golden crown award, at the CSPA national conference in Boston this spring.

Erickson said that the related competition where the yearbooks are judged for their various sections, the Gem placed first, second or third in 16 out of 20 categories. He said the Gem won more awards in this competition than any other yearbook.

This put the Gem ahead of the three other schools which were awarded the silver crown and second to the University of Illinois, Erickson said.

He said the awards were even more rewarding after the difficulties the Gem had last year.

"On May 14 at 11:49 a.m. Julie Reagan, former Gem editor, walked out of the Gem office never to be seen again," Erickson said.

When Reagan did not return to compile the yearbook, Jon Erickson was appointed acting editor. By the middle of May, there was not a single page in the printing plant, due to poor planning by Reagan, Erickson said.

Erickson said with the help of two very talented people, Frank Hill and Gary Lun- digren, they were able to put the Gem together in about four weeks. He said they worked from 12 p.m. to 5 a.m. taking only one day off in those four weeks due to power shortage at the SUU.

The result of the hard work was a yearbook that is the second best in the history of the UI, Erickson said. It comes in second to the '82 book, which under the direction of Karen Maguire, was awarded the golden crown award by the CSPA.

Erickson said the awards the Gem has won brings the UI a lot of attention in Journalism circles.

But the awards and attention are not leaving the Gem completely problem free. Due to income expectations for this year the Gem must still sell about 150 copies. Erickson said if an additional 150 copies are not sold, the Gem could see a deficit of about $2,000.

Last year the Gem sold 1300 copies, and with the UI experiencing a drop in enrollment it was irrational to assume we would sell 250 more than last year, he said.

To reach the goal of 1550 copies, new sales techniques were implemented. Erickson said letters were sent out during Christmas break to student's parents in hopes of making more sales. The purpose was to "hit the parent's pocketbook instead of the student's," he said.

Another sales technique was to make the Gem more visible to students by placing it in buildings that students frequented. He said the Gem is a good representation of the school: "like a $19.000 brochure".

Another change in this year's Gem is a new look, Erickson said. They are trying to move away from the traditional yearbook look.

This year's Gem will have more of a "Miami Vice or California influence," he said.

The '85 Gem is still available on the third floor of the SUU in the Gem office for $15.

Repro employees move to Arg

By Erin Fanning

Due to errors in the budget, the Idaho Argonaut will take over the payment of irregular bills for two Reprographics employees, according to Doug Jones, Argonaut editor.

Irrregular help money is running out, Jones said. He said the amount of camera work time for each issue was understated and typesetting was overbudgeted.

Because of this, Stephen Bray and Jeanette Wiser will be paid by the Argonaut with money that is usually used for the work-study program. Jones said. He said it was good business decision to take over the payment.

Argonaut have cost the Argonaut a lot of time and money.

The ASUI could probably do better

The professionals who help the ASUI administer their 34 departments with an operating budget of over $900,000 can be upset by $15,600 more than had been expected, it overspent its budget by one more dollar. The ASUI pays the fees to you to cover the course's budget deficit.

- FY 1984: The Golf Course was projected to receive $129,333 in income, but when the numbers came in at the end of the year, the course had not only fallen short on income but also had also overspent its budget expenditures, again by almost 12 percent. The ASUI had to come up with another $22,500 for a surplus totaling $144,000.

- FY 1985: Last year was the worst. Projected to make a truly unbelievable $160,300, with a subsidy of $1,000, the course lost $1,000. They were more than $44,000 in income or $3,300 forcing a financial crisis for the ASUI when the students began realizing that government had to step in to cover the Golf Course budget folly.

Whether it is a student president or the professionals who were expected to increase of 23 percent in two years is unrealistic.

Chio White, ASUI president, told the golf course expected to make that huge amount because the course was going to raise the amount students pay for green fees to play golf.

Putting aside the question of whether or not students, who have paid for the budget mistakes of the last years, should be the ones to get the golf fee increase, the raising of fees (to whoever gets the increase) is likely to discourage people from playing on the course (higher green fees = less business = less than expected income, again).

The budget presented by the professionals, has other problems as well. It might be best to turn the budgeting process back over to the elected student leaders — they probably couldn’t overspend on the ASUI computer and it couldn’t be erased.

Most disturbing though is how conservatives enjoy wallowing in Reagan's rhetoric. Like hippo's playing in the mud, they love it when he draws a line in the sand, he demands America's greatness, its freedom, its material wealth, et. al. Surely then, such a great man could not be able to administrate in small ways it has made a mistake. Surely we would be more critical of our beloved right wing dictators in fact rob the people of the freedom we so cherish.

Yes. Reagan has done some good for the American people. Unfortunately this, and maintaining our position as number one in the world (as if such things could be rated) is all that most people care about nowadays. In a nation where self criticism is more important than self criticism, Reagan is obviously the man of the hour.

The ASUI could probably do better.

Ignorance prevails again

Sara Donart
Staff Writer

Just when it seems the Idaho legislature has reached the height of absurdity and demonization of a bill that provides for the dismissal of any teacher who suggests that homosexuality may be normal and acceptable, I refer to the House of Representative’s new famous “queer lover” debate and the subsequent passage of a bill that provides for the dismissal of any teacher who suggests that homosexuality may be normal and acceptable.

Unfortunately, this dubious form of entertainment where grown men retreat to their name-calling, obscures the more important point at hand. According to the Idaho House of Representatives, educators are no longer to be given the mission of opening minds or presenting a world of knowledge free from prejudices. It is more important, it seems, to some of the tiny minds of the Idaho legislature that only one narrow view of the world be presented as hallowed and accepted.

At least one can’t accuse these legislators of inconstancy. Their recent attempt to mandate the teaching of creationism in Idaho schools chose to selectively ignore the separation of church and state, and the sanctimonious nature of their bill makes one of those pseudo-constitutional guarantees. It would seem that more than a few Idaho legislators could benefit from a refresher course in American government — that is, if there were any left in the state education budget for remedial education.

If they were to take such a class, however, they might be reminded that the government works best with an informed and educated electorate, in an atmosphere where the free exchange of ideas is protected and encouraged. And what better place to encourage informed decision making than in our schools.

The authors of our Constitution understood the importance of maintaining that open marketplace of ideas and took pains to protect us from supression and censure. But now Idaho lawmakers, driven by a sanctimonious view of the world and an intolerance of pluralistic thought, have chosen to ignore the wisdom of those early statements.

The issue here is not whether or not homosexuality is a normal or acceptable lifestyle. In fact, it is not. The issue is how it is treated in society. It is Idaho’s teachers, those who have just a piece of their Constitutional rights legislated out from them, who should be the ones to lose big on this one.

With luck, the bill may die in some committee or on the floor, never to see light of day in the Senate floor. It would be foolish, though, to consider this an isolated incident, something that was only缔合 by when no one was looking. Two-thirds of the house voted in favor of passage, enough to override a gubernatorial veto. Rating the debate one legislator accused two of his legislators of being “queer lovers,” presumably because they should lose his head for the suppression of civil liberties in the name of righteousness.

No, it was not an aberration, no slight blip on the screen. Hawaii’s session’s roster of similar attacks on education and freedom. But maybe we should just chalk it up to some kind of primal struggle to maintain a certain legislative species — ignorance begetting ignorance.

To Be, Or Not To Be: Part II

Victoria Seever
Columnist

“One nation under God — Who’s god lower case g) didn’t they have in mind? America prides itself on being founded on a premise of religious freedom, but it didn’t accommodate the gods of Native America, the black slaves or a Chinese work force. Fact, America has a hard history of religious, racial and social persecution.

I’ve never grasped the sanctity of winning converts by bigotry. I’ve never accepted the inconsistency between the spiritual teachings of Christ and the repressive hypocrisy of those teachings as practiced by so many people who lay claim to the name Christian, regardless of which religion they pick to do it.

Yet a “Christian America” pretends to be the ultimate authority on everything from music to diverse cultures, political powers, a moral majority and abortion. It enforces the famous blackboard of the country while being fragmented from its extended contexts. It preaches rigid individualism but usually condemns nonconformity.

And what does the hand of opportunity offer the unwed mother and the single parent child?

A confused message about sexuality. Censure of her private life is the logo against which the child could suffer too. Criticism if she chooses to be a single mother because many conservatives insist on the “stability” of the two parent family, despite the rising rates of divorce, wife battering, child abuse and a general dissatisfaction with extended roles.

Such intimidation alone coerces a woman toward abortion. Few adopt these unwanted children, especially if they are mulatto, handicapped or no longer babies. Don’t all children require care and love, or is their interest only in little cotton copies of the self? Indeed, particularly the “righteous” reject their own children later if they’ve transgressed values like heterosexuality or noninterracial marriage.

Parenting is much more than a fertilized egg. Life is more than a sexual act. We do not have inexcusable notions, monetarily or emotionally. A woman must weigh the quality of life for which she is responsible against whether an unwanted child should diminish in the potential of herself, and quite possibly, her future children.

The rights of the unborn do not supersede the rights of the living. Our personal lives, our offspring and our offspring’s offspring deserve a world (and a world and a world) so much more than the one we have. It is far more rare and benign than we are unable to provide for our overpopulated world. Men and women can cut it. Sensationalizing the death of a few incapable of conscious cell responses fulfills no one’s needs. America can really make you whether we are an unborn egg from Ju- ly or another egg on July 4th. In April of another strap on personal immortality won’t exist but a brother’s life may instead.

And on no show so as to really report what of children born or unborn in the womb and under the protection of such a system. What of the “limited” nuclear exchange this government prepares where the unborn will be hung like farmers. What of industrial greed that poisons the earth and subjects our children to its toxic effects?

God is not a context of which religion can out- populate the others. Life and death are sacred when we live that way, however that is. Is it never in- mature unless you choose to exist behind blenders and out of the national eye? Is it really reporting what of children born or unborn in the womb and under the protection of such a system. What of the “limited” nuclear exchange this government prepares where the unborn will be hung like farmers. What of industrial greed that poisons the earth and subjects our children to its toxic effects?

Home Economists to visit fashion capital

By Michon Herb

If you are interested in fashion, styling and the Big Apple, then the Home Economics Dept. is planning a fashion study tour just for you.

According to Kathy Kearney, coordinator of the trip, students will get the opportunity to visit various fashion designers, fashion buyers, and get an all around view of the fashion industry. Students will get to visit the Fashion Institute of Technology, meet some publishers of fashion magazines as well as visit a museum of costume collectors, she said.

"The students can get a broad perspective of all the career possibilities by going to New York on a tour like this," Kearney said.

There will be a meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 20 at 7:30 p.m., room 204 in the Home Economies Building for all those who are interested.

The cost of the tour is subject to a decrease because of the decrease in airfare, she said, but the estimated cost will be under $8 970. This includes the airfare, ground transportation and entertainment, transportation, airfare, tickets to Broadway plays, as well as two credits from the UI.

The trip is scheduled to begin May 20 to May 28. Kearney said this trip is for fashion merchandising students, business students and interior design students and all those who are interested.

"New York is the fashion capital of the U.S.," she said. And she added she is looking forward to just being in the city.
UI swimmers bow out with style

The UI Vandal swim team competed in its last meet this weekend when it hosted the Pac-12 championships. The team, which has 12 years of existence, will be beached permanently due to budget cuts. It will be replaced by the UI Bite and Paddle Team.

The men performed very well according to Coach Frank Burrus. As they captured fifth place with 535 points. Washington was the overall winner with 1244 points.

Burlison said after the meet, "The kids did really well. Our goal before the meet was to give UPS (University of Puget Sound) a good scare, which we did as they only had us by three going into the last day of swimming."

The depth of the UPS swimmers proved too much for the Vandals as they increased the hold on fourth to more than 60 points on the last day.

The UI team set many personal seasonal and school records over the weekend. The top swim of the day was by junior Beth Root, who collected a first in the 200-meter backstroke. In the event Root established a UI record of 1:55.35.

He showed his talent by collecting numerous other places, including second in the 400-meter individual medley (4:09.80) and fifth in the 200-meter individual medley (2:07.27). He was also a member of three placing relays for the Vandals. They were the 400-meter freestyle, fourth place, 800-meter freestyle (fifth place), and the 400-meter medley (sixth place).

The next highest finisher for the men was Andy Hyll, who collected a second in the 200-meter butterfly in 1:54.85. Hyll had one of his best times of the year in the race.

Robert Roga, Mark Bechtel and David Zimmerman all picked up sixth place finishes in their events. Roga in the 100-meter butterfly (52.41), Bechtel in the 400-meter individual medley (4:20.96) and Zimmerman in the 500-meter freestyle (4:53.78).

Zimmerman, who has been a workhorse for the swimmers all year, enjoyed success in other events as he collected an eight place finish in the 200-meter freestyle (1:45.26), while being on the placing relay teams along with Root.

The 400-meter freestyle had the dynamic duo joined by Roga and Phil Burdick setting the mark of 3:11.93, while the team of Roga, David, Root and Zimmerman narrowly missed the mark in the 400-meter medley with a time of 3:36.23.

Burlison said emotions at the meet were mixed. "It was a funny type of thing because the guys were excited for the meet but then again there was obviously sadness because for lots of these guys it was their last competition ever."

The meet had a carnival atmosphere up until the last night. During the introduction of swimmers swimming in their last meet, the whole Idaho squad was introduced along with Coach Burlison because this was the last meet for all of them. The team received a standing ovation for close to five minutes.

Following the meet the team held an awards banquet where four awards were given. The "top scholar" award went to Mark Bechtel. He is a sophomore and has a 4.0 GPA in electrical engineering.

The "most improved" award went to Joe Angelo. "Joe came out of nowhere to place for us in the consolation heat of the 200-meter breast stroke," Burlison said. "He chopped 13 seconds off his previous best time in the process."

And Rich Root's performance for the Vandals this season earned him the award for "most outstanding swimmer."

Comeback kids win one, fall short of sweep

By Kathy McCoolal

Ken Luckett scored a career high 35 points, but five missed free throws in overtime victory over Montana State, but lost the momentum Saturday night against the Montana Grizzlies when Larry Kryskowski and company ended the Vandals' three-game winning streak. Idaho got a temporary view out of the dark, 58-54 hours worth, after defeating the MSU Bobcats in Bozeman Friday night, 90-85. But the Vandals, 4-8 in the Big Sky and 11-15 overall, slid back into their familiar spot in the conference after the Grizzlies mauled Idaho 91-68.

In Friday's action, the Vandals bounced back from a 12-point deficit with 1:15 left in the second half to force overtime. Idaho's 35-point performance was also the first time this season that the team scored over 30 points.

"We had to come back again," Trumbo said of his squad that had everyone thinking, "He had a great game and we won't be able to beat them next time."

The Bobcats came out fired-up after intermission and jumped into a 12-point lead. But the Vandals failed to fold. "We hung together," Trumbo said. "We hung together and settled in and we had a great game."

When we got to the four minute mark we had good fortune." Luckett sunk a three-point basket with ten seconds left to tie the game at 75-75, putting the Vandals into the third overtime of the season.

"It was a good win for us," Trumbo said. "We shot 56 percent from the field and 78 percent from the foul line. Idaho's lucky streak founded as soon as Idaho stepped foot in Missoula due to the "mishmash" the Grizzlies had which Trumbo referred to."

"It was Kryskowski's last home game as a senior," Trumbo said. "They lost to us this year and they needed a win to stay on top in the conference. The only way a team could have beaten them was to have the Cellos play them," he said.

Idaho's hot shooting dropped to 47 percent from the field, but had a perfect night at the line going 12-12. Kryskowski was one point shy of his career-high mark with 33 and pulled down 17 rebounds. Idaho's leading scorer was Matt Hawks with his career-high 19 points. He was also the team's leading rebounder with five.

"We never had a good chance," Trumbo said.
Heartbreaking loss

By Tom Liberman
Assistant Sports Editor

It was a bittersweet farewell for the Lady Vandals as they dropped a key game in the Ribble Dome to the University of Montana 72-64.

The loss marked the first time since the '84 season that the women have been defeated at home, and also was the end of any dreams the ladies had of winning the post-season tournament.

3,200 fans filed into the Dome hoping to see Idaho avenge an early season loss to Montana in the same fashion that they had against Montana State, 78-59, on Friday night.

Especially hard hit by the loss were the Idaho Seniors who will never play at home again.

After the game the red eyed players signed autographs for their young fans.

Team leader and Senior Mary Raese scored 26 points to lead both teams as she played all 40 minutes of the game in the losing effort. She also led the team in rebounds with six.

Four players for UM were in double figures and one more had nine points to lead the attack against the Lady Vandals.

The win moved Montana two games ahead of their nearest competitors in the Mountain West Athletic Conference and virtually assured them of the home court advantage for the remainder of the season.

Idaho now will play Eastern Washington in the first round of the playoffs no matter what happens this weekend when the Eagles and the Vandals play in Cheney, WA.

"I think Montana played a great game," said Idaho Coach Pat Dobratz. "I hope they can't play any better."

After Fridays win against MSU, Dobratz had predicted that the Grizzlies would shut down Raese and Westerwelle and that Idaho had to have their outside game in full gear to win.

However, once the game started it was Raese and Westerwelle who scored 13 of Idaho's 15 points, but Montana's 1,000 percent shooting on their first six shots gave the Lady Griz the advantage.

Montana led by four at the half and stopped several Idaho rallies at the end to hold off both the roaming crowd and the fired up Vandals.

"This team (Montana) is not going to lose composition," said Dobratz. "Against this team you just don't come back."

"We are still struggling with the guard shot," she added. Robin Behrens and Netra McGrew both had off nights as they shot a combined 5-18 from the field.

The night before against the Bobcats McGrew set a single game record for Idaho with 18 points and Behrens broke the all-time season record for the Vandals and now has 218 career points.

Raese and Westerwelle scored in double figures, 26 and 15.

"While the rest of the Vandals attacked struggling with no one else scoring over six points," the coach said. "They (Idaho) say last year they liked it better because they were underdogs."

The MWAC tournament will be held on March 7 and 8 and Montana will be the decided favorite to regain the Conference Championships they lost last year to the Vandals.

The Vandal track teams hosted the Rimrock Games this past weekend to conclude their home indoor season.

The meet saw many top places by both the first and second women, despite the large size of the field. The competition saw as many as 50 runners in one event representing close to 20 schools, clubs and teams.

For the Lady Vandals, freshmen Cathy Wall, Sophomore Kirsten Jensen and Julie Helbing lead the way with 3rd place finishes in their respective events. Wall, in her first race of the season, placed in the 3000 meter. "Cathy ran a good time for this early in the year," said coach Scott Loret.

Jensen collected her place in the Long Jump despite some technical problems on her approach according to Loret.

Helbing, a dominant UI weight person, placed third in the Discus with a throw of 123.17. Other women who had strong meets were distance runners Louise Mainville and Maureen McGinnis.

The two freshmen runners are being counted on to do well this spring during the outdoor season. Mainville lowered her personal best in the 3000 meter to 10:55 while McGinnis was within 2 seconds of her best high school mark during running 5:36.

On men's side, the top place belonged to hurdler Creigh Linquist who was second in the 55 meter High Hurdles.

Other top times were turned in by 400 meter runner Rob Simpson with a 49.3, a personal best by Chris Schulte in the 3000 meter 8:42.3, and otherests by a host of sprinters.

The men's tracksters will now be preparing for the outdoor season which will officially begin with a meet in California during spring break.

Crowd at Starship concert as varied as music

By Christine Poddola
Sail writer

The crowd at the Starship concert was as varied as the music last Thursday night.

The pre-teens in the row in front of me swayed to Mickey Thomas crooning their recent hit "Bars" and hopping to "We built this City." They got to bop to it twice: at the beginning of the show and at the conclusion.

A bearded, balding man named Paul leaned from his seat when he heard the familiar (to him) notes of "White Rabbit." He said he has been a fan of Starship since the 60's when they were Jefferson Airplane.

"Grace slick is the heart and soul of the group but she didn't sing too much tonight," Paul said. "So it doesn't really seem like the old group."

However, another girl at this concert proved Grace Slick could still sing. "She hasn't been singing a lot so it was nice to hear her sing," she said.

Paul added that he hoped they would sing his favorite song of theirs - "Alice" from the Red Octopus album. They didn't.

Reactions after the three hour show were mixed.

A security guard named Morgan found the lyrics "inane," compared to previous days when "they were in the San Francisco crowd and were friends with Jimi Hendrix."

"They just bore me: their rendition isn't very exciting," the 20-year old Morgan said.

Two WSU fans, on the other hand, were "pretty impressed" with Starship and both said they would like to see the group play again. One, named Bob said he thought the first band, The Outfield, was fairly bland.

Briefs

- There will be auditions today (between 3-6 p.m.) and tomorrow (between 4-6 p.m.) for Crimes of the Heart by Beth Henley at the U-Hut. Scripts are available from the theater office and all interested in any aspect of the show, from acting to set construction to ushering, are welcome. For more information contact Laura Thompson at the theater department - 885-6922.

- The University of Idaho's 19th annual Lionel Hampton/ Chevron Jazz Festival will be staged Thursday through Saturday on the UI campus in Moscow. The festival will begin with Clare Bate and her Trio in concert Thursday, 8 p.m., at the UI SUB Ballroom. Clare Bate is a musical theater veteran. She has appeared in several off-Broadway productions and performed in numerous regional theater efforts. Admission is $4.50 or $3.50 with a festival pass.

- The running monst of John Philip Sousa, played when his band visited UI in September, 1923, and December, 1927, will again make the referees ring when the University of Idaho Wind Ensemble inaugurates the newly remodeled Administration Building Audtorium.

The concert will be at 8 p.m. tonight and includes works performed by Sousa's band in the two concert appearances it made here. Tickets for the event are $4 for non-student adults and $2 for students and children.

- KUOI will be covering the jazz festival live all weekend.

...to music last Thursday night.

A Spokane couple said Starship looked much older on MTV than on stage.

"Right about the middle it was slow but they certainly made up for it in the end," he said.

A Moscow businessman named Bill has "followed them (Starship) from day 1 but this is the first time I’ve ever seen them."

"White Rabbit," an old favorite for Starship fans, gave one female fan "chills." Many people leaving the coliseum complained that it was too loud, but there was "way too much bass."

to "Gilligan’s Island" were acceptable.

The Garden, Bogart’s, Monroe’s and the Scoreboard Lounge were inundated with avant-garde partners. The few unsuspecting individuals wearing colored clothing looked decidedly out of place. Both bands were hot! The Big Sky Mudflaps kicked off the festivities with good country-western music at 11 p.m. The Crazy Eights took over and stole the show.

A ballroom floor constantly crammed with sweaty dancers gave evidence to The Crazy Eights’ popularity. In fact, by 2 a.m., many dancers were reluctant to leave the dance floor and called back the band to play more of their energetic jazz-reggae-pop music.

But finally they did leave. Slowly the black and white minstrels left their own stage. They straggled out into the wet night and left a deserted ballroom.

"We need to find 2 cats, a black bag, a diamond ring, and a set of gold earrings," David Giese shouted to his throng of twenty to thirty helpers the next day at 2 p.m.

As balloons were cut loose from their loft and floated back down to the floor, Giese stroked by, "Last night was pretty amazing, wasn’t it," he said with a weary smile. We looked at each other and nodded.

The Anatomy of a Great Party Picture!

Squinting Eyes: A condition due to the brilliance of the photographers at PARTY PICS NOW.

Signs Of Disbelief - "No-o-o": This person couldn't believe the service and speed that PARTY PICS NOW delivers finished pictures.

Incredible!!

More Signs of Disbelief: This occurred when he found out that PARTY PICS NOW is pledging .15 per each picture purchased from the major party before the philanthropy. Can you believe it?

Over Excitement: This occurs when people are told that PARTY PICS NOW has no signed contracts. We just want your business because we serve you the best.

Grinning Ear To Ear: This person knows that the proof sheets from PARTY PICS NOW are 30% larger than contact proofs. NO MORE SQUINTING! NO MORE GLASSES!

An Impressed Look: This guy knows that the party pics from PARTY PICS NOW have sharp color along with clear and distinctive titles. Compare for yourself!

Excessive Drinking: This person thought that the fact that PARTY PICS NOW uses Kodak film paper was a great reason to celebrate.

Falling Out Of the Picture: This person had just heard that PARTY PICS NOW is charging a fair price for party pics, $1.95, and fell from the excitement.
