Blue Key donates trees to arboretum

The Shattuck Arboretum will grow more roots this fall, thanks to the Blue Key service honorary donating $1,300 worth of Gingko trees to the arboretum Friday.

According to Blue Key President John Vanderpool, the club is donating the trees as a way to express its appreciation to the university for its commitment to higher education for the citizens of the state and nation.

In a champagne ceremony Friday at 8:00 a.m., Vanderpool will present a framed certificate to University of Idaho President Richard Gibbs. The presentation is part of a wrap-up of Silver and Gold Days.

The trees will be planted this spring in the Asian section of the arboretum, and a bronze plaque will be mounted by this fall.

Money for the donations comes from annual sales of the Blue Key campus student/faculty directory. Funds also go to the Blue Key Talent Show, the Centennial and for scholarships.

Vanderpool said the gingko trees are interesting for several reasons. First, they are of a rare variety which have both male and female trees. Second, they are a botanical curiosity because, unlike most conifers, they shed their leaves, according to Dr. Richard Naskali, director of the arboretum. Third and perhaps most significant, Vanderpool said the club chose the trees because their leaves turn Naskali gold in the fall.

Naskali plans to use the trees for classes as well, because the species has been around since prehistoric times and each tree lives 1,000 years.

The presentation will be at the Elks' Lodge located at 112 N. Main. Admission is $4 for students and $8 for parents.

City water is soured

BY CLAYTON MAILEY

City officials have once again informed local bars and businesses that recent water samples have tested positive for contamination.

On Wednesday, the City of Moscow was informed by Lewiston health officials that two water samples submitted as routine testing this week were contaminated with a coliform bacteria.

The fecal coliform bacteria was described by State of Idaho Water Quality Engineer, Kerby Cole as one that can only come from the intestines of warm-blooded animals.

While drinking unboiled water, city officials in a meeting today explained the city has already been taking steps to protect the city water of contaminants.

Weekend robbery at local bar hits KUOI fundraiser

BY ANGELA CURTIS

In a Monday morning robbery, the KUOI radio station lost all money earned in a Friday evening fundraiser at local tavern John's Alley.

According to KUOI Station Manager Leigh Robartes, KUOI officials did not take the money back to the station to lock it after the fundraiser, but left the money in a cooler at the bar along with money from the tavern's till.

Monday morning between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m., the thief broke into John's Alley through the back alley, stealing money from both KUOI and John's Alley.

The station sponsored the fundraiser/dance at John's Alley to raise money to upgrade equipment, especially purchase a compact disc player if matched by the ASUI's new matching funds program.

Robartes said he is still checking into John's Alley's insurance to possibly cover the losses.

Robartes said the Moscow Police Department has suggested to him that it would be better not to release the exact amount stolen. However, Robartes did say that the sum was great enough to purchase the CD player if matched by the ASUI.

Robartes said he did not think the thief knew the KUOI money was left at the bar, calling the possibility "unlikely."

"But it is possible somebody could have known John's Alley had a very good weekend," he said.

Robartes said the initial anger at the thief has worn off, but it was frustrating to see all the work that went into the fundraiser wasted.

"Of course everybody feels ripped off," he said. "A lot of energy went into this."

However, Robartes said there is a positive note.

I think you'll be seeing a "never-be-defeated" attitude emerging," Robartes said. "In fact, we're planning another fundraiser for a couple weeks from now, in which we hope to recoup our losses."

The fundraiser is planned for the weekend of April 22.

He said it had been intended as a non-alcoholic fundraiser, but alcohol probably will be served to help compensate for the weekend's losses.

"We really want to make up for it," he said. "I expect a good turnout."

Senate revises and updates Rec Board

BY DAWN BOBBY

The ASU Senate updated the Recreational Advisory Board's duties Wednesday in a meeting at the Walter Complex Conference Room Wednesday night, despite Sen. Molly Weyen's objection that the bill was written "pre-
".

The bill, submitted by Brad Cuddy, came out of the Senate Rules and Regulations Committee with no recommendation. Rules and Rels Chairwoman Tina Kapi said the committee "had trouble".

Weyen referred to the third section of the bill, which would give the Rec Board the power to investigate any "unfair, unethical or administrative policies in "all campus recreational facilities." Weyen said she wanted a list of some facilities in the bill.

Current Rec Board Chair
Steve Smart, who helped ASU President Brad Cuddy write the bill, said it would take too much time. The bill would have to go back to committee, be researched and returned for a later 'meeting.'
Smart suggested a later bill could add a defining list to the third section.

Weyen said she preferred to do that.

"Why do two jobs, when you can do one and get it over with," she said later.

The Senate voted to pass the bill, with only Weyen voting no.
"I can't believe that Rules and Rels did not even meet to recomdand the bill. It was written prisively, and nobody gave it a second thought," she said. "They just passed it.

According to Smart, the bill gives the Rec Board a more reassonable jurisdiction.

"The (Rec) Board has been in effective (defunct) for 14 years," Smart said in a later interview. "Princ" pally, it was the sole responsiibility for the funding for the ASU-Kibbie Activity Center Manager. Let's be practical—we don't have the power to do that.

Smart said that before the Rec Board collapsed, it was quite posible for a student to gain access to a manager, but it had been absent-ent for so long that those duties were taken over by the university.

UI to host ISIL Thursday

Students from Idaho's colleges and universities will come to draw a line on the state level through the "1984 Inter-College Legislative Summit.

In its fifth year, the ISIL is holding its third spring session at the University of Idaho this year. The Billy, who is in charge of the Idaho colleges and universities. The spring session is a homeownership session, according to ISIL Secretary of State Michael Kernan.

Elections for ISIL governor, lieutenant governor and seven standing joint committee chairman will be held during the session, which will be held April 16-18.

"One purpose is to serve as a forum for the political leaders of Idaho," Kernan said. "The other side of that is to limit the leaders and give them the opportunity to have hands on experience (with the issues)."

ISIL will be holding a meeting this Wednesday to foster student interest in the session. For more

Silver/Gold kickoff dedicated to student leaders

BY BETH PETTIBON

The University of Idaho will offer the annual Silver and Gold Days today with a campus-wide dedication at 1:30 p.m. today and a Champlagne Suite dance tonight at 8 p.m.

According to Chairwoman Karine Metzler, Silver and Gold Days, which were created in 1981, is a celebration of the UI heritage, and is sponsored by the Student Alumni Relations Board.

The University of Idaho will offer the annual Silver and Gold Days today with a campus-wide dedication at 1:30 p.m. today and a Champlagne Suite dance tonight at 8 p.m.

According to Chairwoman Karine Metzler, Silver and Gold Days, which were created in 1981, is a celebration of the UI heritage, and is sponsored by the Student Alumni Relations Board.

The tree, which will be planted on the Administration Lawn, is dedicated to student leaders and presidents of living groups.

"The presidents of living groups are not always recognized for what they do," Metzler said. "A tree that will last forever is a small token of appreciation for all the work they do."

A balloon launch will follow the planting, and the names of each living group president are printed on a program which will be tied to the balloons. A leadership address will be given by former Latah County Senator Norma Dobler, a strong supporter of youth activities.

The Champlagne Suite will be held at the Elks Lodge and features the big band sound of "Second Time Around" from the Lionel Hampton School of Music and improvisations performed by Stage fright.

"The suite is to toast the people that aren't recognized very often," Metzler said. "This includes the alumni, living groups and the community. The dance is also a great place to take your parents to kick-off the weekend."

Three free glasses of champlagne are included with every ticket to people 21 and older and refills will be 50 cents. Students and children under 21 receive three glasses of pop. Tickets, which are 54 for students and 8 for adults, are available at Ticket Express, Chamber of Commerce, Alumni Office, and any Student Alumni Relations Board member. They are also available at the door.

Turtle Derby is tomorrow

BY LAURIE DISTELDOM

Who said the turtle is slower than the hare?

Find out if it is really true Saturday as the 30th annual Phi Delta Turtle Derby brings out the fastest turtles in northern Idaho.

This event, which kicks off the beginning of Great Week, is sponsored by the Phi Delta Theta fraternity to raise money for Stopping Stones.

Stopping Stones is a local nonprofit organization that raises money to help handicapped people in the area.

The Phi Deltas sell turtle derby T-shirts and buttons to raise some of the money, but the major source of fundraising is individual donations turned in at a booth that is set up during the race. The fraternity raises about $300-420 for Stopping Stones each spring.

Turtle mania starts at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday and anyone interested in donating or just watching the race and skins is urged to attend.

Convocation honors held today

The 1988 Honors Convocation at the University of Idaho will feature an address by Anne Ruggles Gere, professor of English and education, titled "Perspectives on Literacy."

Gere is a professor at the University of Michigan and has written a number of books about writing, including two composition textbooks.

The UI's Honors Convocation recognizes the achievements of students named to Deans' honors lists, those initiated into scholastic honorary societies, those beginning study in the University Honors Program, and recipients of the Alumni Award for Excellence. There are more than 1,400 students listed on this year's Honors Convocation Program.

Classes will be dismissed from 12:45 p.m. to 3 p.m. today to allow students to attend the convocation.

After the convocation, President Cline will host a reception in the SUB Ballroom.

She also spoke to the public Thursday in the KIVA. Her address was titled "Thinking About Writing," which discussed her research in composition. A reception was held for Gere following her address at the Sweet Avenue House.

ASUI elections: Student government deserves some recognition for their work

Woe to thee who become public figures in the good of U.S.A. We treat our heroes hard. Take figure skater Debi Thomas, for instance. She worked out over 20 hours a week for months preceding the Calgary Olympics and the world figure skating championships in Budapest. Then she fell a couple of times performing maneuvers on ice that even the most se- minally inebriated burglar in the law school wouldn't claim to be able to accomplish even after 300 hours on dry land in the least of student's teachers (and that's saying something). After each perfor- mance Debi skated off the ice to be confronted by some television band. I can see how disappointed she must be after failing to win the gold medal. Well, in the best style of comedian Sam Kin- sant, what's wrong with the BRONZE medal? She's ONLY the THIRD BEST FIGURE SKATER IN THE WORLD! She's only better than billions of other people. Good grief America!... And take Ed Moore, a.k.a. "Big Ed," a.k.a. "Captain Sleeweezee Maanam." Just because Eddie M. likes to break the law doesn't mean that he can't enforce it upon everybody else. But you want to know a truly thankless job? Try serving as a student senator for the ASUI.

Jason Alberdi, Brian Casey, Michael Fleming, Jeff Friel, Michael Harman, Charmaine Johnson, Michael MacDonald, Lynn Major, Susan Perry, Brett Re- noold, Steve Smart, Molly Weyen and Brian Wirthman have all got it off to you. Good luck finding many students on this campus who will care what seven of you will be doing next year. You know, who cares what the ASUI Senators are quite literally members of the Board of Directors of one of Idaho's largest corporations? Who cares that the ASUI Senate will spend more than three-quarters of a million dollars of student money next year? Who cares that the "lucky" seven to be chosen next Wednesday (April 13), will have the opportunity to work with ASUI President Brad Caddy (one of our best) to better student existence on this campus? If figure proves representative, not to worry, and even fewer will care enough to be informed of the issues and candidates involved in the ASUI's version of Campaign '84.

ASUI elections are worth following. They are every bit as en- tertaining as national elections. They are also considerably more professional than Idaho legislative contests. More importantly, they deal directly with issues concern- ing University of Idaho students. Take the lead story of April 5th's Arg, for instance. "Student fights proposed gun ban." I have it on the inside track that the University really doesn't want to propose a total and outright ban on fire- arms. In fact, quite the opposite may be true. But unless a positive, consistent solution can be found, the growing number of firearm safety violations on campus, what alternative does the University have? These types of issues are ideal for senate participation, and it takes a positive, creative and determined of senators to work with the University to find answers to these kind of questions.

Students are presented with the opportunity to elect 7 senators on Wednesday, April 13. Further, stu- dents will decide whether or not the ASUI will ban the posting of ASUI campaign material on the UCC, and that it. Take time to vote. The ASUI is worth getting involved with. The "good old days" of the ASUI Senate are history. No longer plagued with egotistical dorks and stereotypical ditzes, the senate has become an efficient organization dedicated to advancing student issues. Further, it provides both a forum and a voice for student concerns. Yeah, I did my time in, back in '84, or was it '85 Anyway, things are bet- ter now than they were then, and, with enough student interest, input and response, things will get bet- ter still, and that is in every student's best interest. Polling booths are located in the sub, the com- plex, the Ad building and many other areas all over campus. Learn and vote eh?

Time for a recant

As the semester winds down and the number of Argonaut issues are rampaging through single digits, I feel it is ne- cessary to recant an early editorial ("Apartheid", January 22, 1980) before I can justify otherwise.

Apartheid. Rape response to members of the Coalition for Central America marched with signs to Moscow's Friendship Square to inform the world that Moscow, Idaho, was next.

* January 26. Demonstrators from both sides of the polit- ical spectrum hit the street of Moscow to rally the Febru- ary 3 congressional vote on Contra Aid. University of Idaho College Republicans and the Coalition for Central America marched with signs to Moscow's Friendship Square to inform the world that Moscow, Idaho,

* January 26. Cass Davis staged a nine-hour hunger strike shortly after President Reagan's State of the Un- ion address to protest proposed $60 million dollar Contra- package Restored Peace in the World. Davis maintains that the Contra aid package is a violation of human rights.

* Beginning in early February, "State Bored" riff and raff and Senate Bill 1313 was successfully defended with the use of lobbying from UI students. ASUI officers and other student enthusiasts arrived by the trunk loads to State Board meetings in Lewiston and legislature meetings in Boise to prevent the State from doing a financial injustice to the State of Idaho.

* March 7. Students claiming the UI Collette Theatre's production of William Hoffman's As Is was a porn- ographic venture protested outside the theatre on the last night of production.

* March 22. Students objecting to the procedures and performance of the UI Math Department had an oppor- tunity to air their complaints at the Math Forum set up by ASUI Senator, Larry Moritz. Student representatives made their present known at the Forum. This Forum has opened the door to resolving the problem threaten- ing student's lives, which brought the protest to an end.

* March 22. Central America breaks into the news with a week long program of activities in the SUB to op- pose current foreign policy in the U.S.

* April 7. Senator Steve Symanski press conference in the SUB was not met with opposition. As UI College Republicans and reporters soaked the wealth of Symanski's knowledge, six different local political groups held a counter-press conference to show that not all Idahoans were backing Symanski's policies and views.

And the list goes on. However, this does not mean we can stop now. Are you kidding?

There are more than enough issues to fuel some- one's nostrils on campus. Next up is ASUI Senate elections. Don't be misled!
Why is the world silent about Iraq's crimes?

Editor:

I remember a few years ago when the tragic accident happened at Bhopal, India, in which a few thousand people died or were injured. For weeks after the disaster all TV, radio, and newspaper accounts in the East and West commented on that accident, and they condemned the officials of that chemical factory, who were taken to court. And the whole world sent help to India.

But on March 17, 1988 something happened in northwestern Iraq worse than the accident in Bhopal and worse than any event that history can remember since World War II. Iraq warplanes, by the order of President Saddam Hussein, dropped bombs containing mustard gas, cyanide, and nerve gas on Halabja and on neighboring towns which also are in Iraq. More than 5,000 were injured. The injured people will have health problems for the rest of their lives. Most of them are children, elderly people, and women. By the time unfortunately the world was almost silent and the press said little about it.

Of course this is not the first time Iraq has used chemical weapons. They have been using them for the last few years against the Iranian army and civilians, and unfortunately, not only did the world not condemn Iraq, even the United Nations did not condemn Iraq officially or by name. (Believe it not, Iraq is one of the countries which signed the 1925 Geneva Protocol against chemical warfare unconditionally.)

I believe the United Nations and all of the world, especially the press, are somehow responsible for that tragic event in Halabja because if they had condemned Iraq the first time they used chemical bombs against Iranians, then the Iraqi ruler, Hussein, would not have dared to use this time against their own people, who oppose him. Unfortunately, other countries did not enact sanctions against Iraq; in fact, they are helping Iraq because Iraq is fighting against Iran. Now I remember why Time magazine a few months ago proclaimed the following on its cover: "Iran vs. The World."

"Cover" tunes nothing new to the industry

In response to your commentary in the 4-18 Argonaut (David Blakely), it might interest you to know that "cover," when used as a verb in the recording industry, dates at least to the early years of rock. Pre-1960s, that is. White artists regularly would "cover" tunes by black musicians, as the airplay and sales potential of the black artist were greatly limited. So, Bill Hailey did a "cover" of Big Joe Turner's "Shake, Rattle 'n Roll." Greats and lesser lights were involved. Elvis was "covering" earlier material at the start of his career, so was Pat Boone. Did you know "The Twist" wasn't originally Chubby Checker's tune?

Well, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery.

"Where have all the artists gone?" They may be harder to find these days, its true. You might try the latest offerings of Robbie Robertson, the Dead, or U2. Failing that, maybe we both should just content to have the music of Otis Redding, Woody Guthrie, Bessie Smith or Django Reinhardt to listen to when we need to be reminded.

La Boheme entertains with its comedy, tragedy

REVIEW BY

DAVID JOHNSON
Staff Writer

La Boheme is one of today's most modern operas. In four acts, La Boheme delights the audience with its comedy, tragedy, and song. With the combined talents of singers, actors, and orchestra, Puccini's opera offers an interesting story that builds on itself until the fourth and final scene.

The setting is Paris during the late 1800's where four young men try to live together on their small income. The story involves one of the men, a poet named Rodolfo, meeting and falling in love with a beautiful but ailing girl named Mimi.

As the story progresses, a woman named Musetta enters with a wealthy man named Alcindoro in front of her former boyfriend Marcello who in turn becomes jealous. As time goes on, both men have problems with their lovers, which is sad but sometimes comical for one couple. In the last scene, the story builds to its climax which, in many operas, including this one, is a tragic one.

There are two casts for La Boheme. Richard Palmer plays Rodolfo tonight and Shane Nilsen also plays Rodolfo in the April 9 production.

"Dolci Haffenraker, who plays a young philosopher named Colline, does an excellent job singing while acting his part. In fact, the entire cast, including the children's chorus, do a wonderful job of making La Boheme an enjoyable performance."

With the opera coming to the University of Idaho only once every two years, La Boheme is highly recommended production.

Local publishing explored

In addition to the standard activities of Parent's Weekend, Saturday and Sunday will boast opportunities for writers, published or otherwise, to deepen their knowledge of the publishing industry during the Media Weavers Inc., Northwest Literary Tour, which will have its start in Moscow.

The goal of the tour, which will travel to Washington and Montana in addition to Idaho, is to foster a greater awareness of the wealth of writing and small-press publishers in the Pacific Northwest and to create an inter-area "writers'" connection.

The Moscow presentation will consist of the workshop entitled "Publish What You Write." Saturday, 9 to 12 a.m. in the SUB Ee-De-Ho Room. It will include tips on finding the right markets, on finding out what editors want, on researching for articles, on query letters and on copyrights. Admission to this workshop will be $10 for the general public and $8 for students.

On April 10 at 7 p.m., the Latah Historical Society in McConnel Mansion, local writers will read their works, which will be followed by an exchange of ideas on the Northwest literary scene. Admission will be free.

Scheduled readers are Rob Moore, Pete Cruz, M.J. Eng in Dennis Stovall.

Weaver is a UI associate professor, a freelance writer and past editor of Palouse Journal. He has also won the 1994 Western States Book Awards Honorable Mention in Fiction for "Red Star Over Paradise."

Cruz is a senior English major at UI and has published poetry and fiction published in the Lilac Press and Paradise Coast Journal. Eng is the author of Agave, science-fiction novel; and Things in the Snow, a children's book.

Stovall will be offering a short presentation on "Small Press and Major Tributaries."

All workshops given by Dennis Stovall, co-owner of Media Weavers, will concentrate on writing novels, magazine writing, ghost writing, editing, publishing and marketing.

"Even if you're writing the advertising for a bus block, if you care about your words, you will do your best to make them clean and clean," said Stovall.

He also urges writers to set out by looking at the publishing available locally. There are more than 2,000 local publishing houses, according to Stovall, which range from AAG to AAG. Stovall also urges writers to set out by looking at the publishing available locally. There are more than 2,000 local publishing houses, according to Stovall, which range from AAG to AAG. With his research, Segerman, Seattle's major arts festival, Media Weavers has also received grants from the Oregon State Library Foundation and the Arts Commissions of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

According to Stovall, "The Northwest is among the most literate regions of the country; there are more bookstores per capita;"
Syphony gives ‘Grand Finale’

To further the Washington-Idaho Symphony’s search for a new conductor, the symphony will perform April 11 in the University Auditorium and April 12 in the Lewiston High School Auditorium.

This will be the “Grand Finale” performance of the season.

Conductor Frances Stainer from Los Angeles will be sharing the stage with Hutter Richard Hahn, UI Professor of Music.

Works to be performed include Aaron Copland’s Fanfare for the Common Man, Aram Khachaturian’s Concerto for Flute and Orchestra and Modest Mussorgsky’s Pictures at an Exhibition.

Pictures at an Exhibition provides a musical look at the works of architect Victor Hartmann. His designs and drawings—such as a nutcracker in the shape of a gnuine, an ancient Italian castle, a wooden wheel ox cart and the Great Game of Kier—are explored through the medium of sound.

Stainer is the Music Director and Principal Conductor of the Carson-Dominguez Hills Symphony and the Baroque Consortium, both based in Los Angeles. She has recently returned from Venezuela where she became the first woman to conduct the Maracaibo Symphony.

Hahn has performed in the Pacific Northwest as both a soloist and as a member of the Northwest Wind Quintet. Five years ago, he toured Europe, giving clinics in England, Holland, France, Spain and Germany.

Audience members will have the opportunity to participate in the conductor search by completing evaluation sheets at the concert.

The performance on both dates will be at 8 p.m.

Tickets will be available at the door or by contacting the Washington-Idaho Symphony office in Moscow.

Ticket prices will be $7 for adults, $6 for senior citizens, $3.50 for college students and $2 for youths.

Library usage rates are among the highest, and high scores are the top in verbal skills on national tests, and the region is home to dozens of famous authors with histories more scattered from Brooking to remaining for their shots at success. We know of 100 writers’ groups but there are undoubtedly more.

For more information concerning the Northwest Literary Tour, contact Tine Forney of the UI English Department and/or Keith Peterson and Mary Reed of the Lewiston Historical Society.

Shananders dominate in Mountain West

BY MIKE LEWIS

It's easy to pinpoint why Idaho's number one women's doubles tennis team is so good—they've been a force for so long. Cathy and Patricia Shanander have been playing tennis together for eight years, and the work has paid off. Paid off, that is, in a wave of success that includes a 12-0 season, doubles record and a 7-5, 7-4 victory over former league-leading Weber State last week.

Perhaps it is a contrasting style that makes the tandem click. Patricia is the stylist, with fine form and technical skill, whose finesse sometimes gives way to a hot temper coupled with frustration.

"I have a bad temper when I'm on the court," explained Patricia. "I'm terrible, I'm a terrible looser. I try. If I play good, she just outplays me. If that's true, but if I'm playing terrible, if something is off, then I'm the worst loser in the world."

Cathy seems to be the photographic negative of her sister, something which Patricia calls "great mental toughness," but with form reflective of her childhood uncoordination which once earned her the distinction of "Hacker," much to her sister's disatisfaction.

"We used to playUSTA(Under-ed States Tennis Association) matches all the time," said Cathy, "and one time this girl hit a low shot and I came off the court and we walked around. Patricia was coming down, bowing me and the girl came out hugging her and she met her friend and she said, 'I played so bad,' and that girl was a HACKER!" Patricia got mad and she turned around, grabbed this girl by the neck, up against the wall, and said 'You apologize! She was mad. I'll never forget it.'

"Patricia, as one might suspect, denies that the event ever took place, but she is quick to agree with Cathy regarding her early

Cathy, a sophomore business major and, like Dick, a fencing and physical education major, grew up together in Moscow, Wash., and, began playing tennis, when they were 12 and 11, thanks in the influence of their father, who was the local high school tennis coach. The two girls excelled in both their high school careers, and Cathy had already taken three singles matches, all of them in such order that Cathy graduated Sedro Woolley, where she was a class valleteress, and received scholarships offers from Pacific Lutheran, University of Washington, and West Point, Army. Among other reasons, the choice favored "Probably the main reason I chose it (Salinas) was because of the boy friends and I had to do it," said Cathy half-jokingly. "He told me we can't get along. He said, 'You can't go.' And I said, 'Yes.'"

Unlike Cathy, Patricia was not influenced by her dad to go to college, and despite graduating high school in May, signed up for college.

"I didn't, get any. In fact, wasn't even positive that I was going to college," said Patricia. "Pat (Swaeford, former tennis coach and, like Dick, a former tennis player) called me. She didn't really understand why I was real insane to travel around the world, you'll have to get a coach, and then get sponsors and stuff like that. Both of them have both been coaching the tennis clinic at the high school, and they both have really the unification of their situation has been really big for us."

In all reality, the only way you could even make anything more is, if we went nationally, which isn't really good, it's like a step right back for us."

"As a junior, I'd be too much of an idiot to let Patricia agrees. "It's very expensive, you have to have money to travel around the world, you'll have to get a coach, and then get sponsors and stuff like that."

The only thing really, really want that I want for college—"Pat (Swaeford, former tennis coach and, like Dick, a former tennis player) called me. LETTER

GIBB

I want to welcome all of you to the University of Idaho for Parents Weekend. This is our way of saying that we are pleased to have your sons and daugthers enrolled here at the university, and to have you join us for the weekend.

The University is here to provide the best pos-ßible education for the students. We don't ever want to lose sight of this fact.

It is, of course, true that at times student problems arise, but the best part of my work is that of being in contact with the students. I never turn down an opportunity to meet with a student group.
When I do, if the group is small enough, I always find out what the student's name is. home town, majors, and in what year of school they are. Natu-rially I can't get well-acquainted with all 9.000 of them. but I do come in contact with several thousand and get very well-acquainted with many. It is especially rewarding to me to get to know the students while they are here, and then watch them graduate and become successful in their careers.

1889-1989

University of Idaho

This is an especially exciting year for us inasmuch as we have started our centennial celebrations. These celebrations will involve everyone in the university community and will take the university to every part of this state as well as to other parts of the world. One of the things we will be doing in connection with the activities is establishing a University of Idaho centennial grove of trees in every county in the state. I will personally participate in each of these dedications which will begin in June and end in September. We'll also have students involved in these dedications. We hope that when this event occurs in your county, you will be present to help us celebrate.

Another activity which is taking a considerable amount of time is our Centennial Fund-raising Campaign. We have established a goal of 85 million to be used for four primary purposes. First, we plan to raise approximately $6 million for what we call investing in potential. that is the student.
This money will be used primarily for scholarships and fellowships. The second part of the campaign will be invested in achievement. About $7 million, or so, for building construction. The campaign is coming along nicely, and I have no doubt that we will exceed the goal before 1989 is completed.

We are very proud of this institution and the beauty of the campus. But above all. this institution is people. We work hard to make sure that no student, faculty, or staff is treated as though they are a computer card. We want everyone con-ected with the university to be treated as a very special individual. I tell the freshmen, during orientation, that whatever problem arises. someone here at the university can and wants to help them. If they are not sure where they go. they come see me or my executive assistant. Terry Armstrong, and we will put them in touch with the appropriate people. The record of graduates has been outstanding, and we intend to keep it that way.

Centennial kicked off

Years go into celebration

BY JILL CHRISTINE BECK

The University of Idaho kicked off its 100th birthday this early semester with a week of activities, including a community breakfast and a week of performances. Almost 4,000 people attended the kick-off breakfast held January 25 in the ASUS-Kittebe Dome. Classes were dismissed for the event so that students and faculty members would be able to participate.

In 1985, President Richard Gibb appointed Roy Flusher, professor of theater arts, to the position of Centennial Coordinator for the 17-month-long event.

Things started getting underway in the fall semester of 1987, as the official UI Centennial banner was unveiled at the season’s first football game. The athletic logo was also first presented to the public. It can be seen on the football turf of the Dome and on all UI athletic team uniforms.

Several other projects are already underway, or in the planning for the celebration:

Centennial Minutes. Centennial Minutes are public service announcements which are being aired throughout Idaho and in the Spokane area during the UI Centennial Celebration.

“We have something unique in the way that we have structured these Centennial Minutes,” Flusher said. “We are using people from the local (TV) markets to make the Centennial Minutes for us.”

With this idea, viewers in the Boise area can see local citizens, including local civic leaders and UI students from that area narrating the Minutes. Viewers in other area, such as Idaho Falls or Lewiston, will see members of their community narrating the segments.

A total of 75 different narrators were used to read 12 different scripts. These spots are distributed to the five television markets throughout the state: Spokane, Lewiston, Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho Falls/Post Falls.

Also being distributed are five standard scripts, which are shown in all markets. These figures are known throughout the state: Gov. Cecil Andrus, Sen. Steve Symms, Sen. Jim McClar, Rep. Larry Craig and Rep. Richard Stallings.

Buy-a-Brick. The buy-a-brick project involves the selling bricks with brass nameplates to alumni and friends of the UI. The bricks, which will go on sale this spring for $35 each, will be placed in a newly developed Centennial Plaza.

The Centennial Plaza will be located between the library and the University Classroom Center. Money from the buy-a-brick project will go into a general scholarship fund and into the Student Leadership Fund.

The Centennial Museum. The pictorial history of the UI, written by Keith Peterson, features university history through its 256 pages and more than 330 photos, plus different issues of student publications and stacks of records.

Founder’s Day Award. Dr. Terrel H. Bell, former Secretary of Education to President Ronald Reagan, received the first Founder’s Day Award on Jan. 29, 1988. This award was given in celebration of the UI birthday. It was on Jan. 30, 1889 that the UI was officially established. The Founder’s Day Award will be given annually to an individual or group of individuals in state, regional or national education.

Bill established UI in 1889

There is hereby established in this state, at the town of Moscow, in the county of Latah, an institution of learning, by the name and style of the University of Idaho.”

On Jan. 30, 1889, Territorial Gov. Stevenson signed Bill Number 20, which established the University of Idaho. Classes began three years later, on Oct. 12, 1892 with only two professors, one of which was the first UI President, Franklin Benjamin Gaub. The first commencement ceremonies saw two men and two women receive their degrees in June of 1896.

The university’s first Administration Building was completed in 1900, but on March 30 1906 the building was destroyed by fire. The steps from the building can still be seen beside the current administration building, which was completed on August 17, 1909.

Other highlights during the university’s 100 years of existence include the start of the Argonaut in 1908. On June 11, 1902 Ridenbaugh Hall was dedicated; it is now the oldest building on the UI campus. Women’s athletics were established on March 30, 1929. Nine years later, in 1929, Memmott Gymnasium was dedicated. The University of Idaho now boasts more than 6,000 students from all over the world.

DYNAMITE crumbled the walls of the 1906 Administration Building after a fire gutted the building.

Collections made for time capsule

What will people remember about the University of Idaho 100 years from now? Members of the Student Alumni Relations Board and the Student Centennial Committee are working together to create a time capsule to help save a part of the Centennial year 1989.

Members of SARB and the SCC are working to gather donations for the time capsule, which will most likely be dedicated during Commencement Week of 1989, according to Keith Kenyon.

A list of suggested items has been created, and it is hoped that all living groups will donate an original item, not already on the list. “We want an item from every living group,” Kenyon said.

Exact details of the actual container and site for the time capsule have not yet been released.

“(The container) is being engineered right now by the College of Engineering,” Kenyon said.

The sight for the container is being planned by the College of Art and Architecture. Ideas for contents of the time capsule are varied. One idea would be to ask newspaper editors to write an article to include in the

_This Crested Hill_

REVIEW BY BETH HOWARD

ASSOC. EDITOR

"Although a Moscow newspaper (which probably (no) more sightly location could be found in Idaho for a university," wrote Peterson, "the hill was actually nothing more than a field overlooking a rather ramshackle town when construction began."

Peterson writes of the site of the UI Administration Building and is the focus for Peterson's most recent book, _This Crested Hill_, an illustrated history of the University of Idaho and the "rather ramshackle town" Moscow in 1869 when construction began on Idaho's first university.

Commissioned by the UI Centennial Committee to do the project, Peterson has captured memories in ink and pressed them in this book.

The book traces the university's shaky first years in a state often divided in its views and tight in its pocketbooks as "free thinkers" at higher education, on through the Andy Hardyish days of beanie-boasting freshmen, the mobilization of the campus through "hill" Peterson's book as do many buildings which were once landmarks to the young university.

Peterson, a graduate of Washington State University, recounts the university's growth through the first hundred years from its grass-roots land grant beginnings to the major "monster" university Idaho has become today.

In _This Crested Hill_ is a pictorial archive of the university. The "old" Administration Building, which was gutted by fire March 30, 1906, still stands majestically. Within the basement of Peterson's book as do many buildings which were once landmarks to the young university.

Peterson, author of several books on the Palouse, said that the Argonaut and _The Gem of the Mountains_ were primary sources for his book in addition to the Special Collection section of the UI Library, which Peterson says, "is a little known resource on campus." Another major resource for _This Crested Hill_ was the State Historical Society.

"My main focus for the book" Peterson said, "was to explore what it was like to be a student at the university."

_This Crested Hill_ is a treat for anyone who loves history, tradition, and has an interest in the University of Idaho and the Moscow community. It's a treasure for anyone who has ever walked amidst the presidential grove, ridden up the Hill, walked on the Walk to the class, or just sat soaking up the sun in the plaza of the UCC.

University of Idaho history filled with interesting trivia

Basketball jersey #43 was retired to honor of Vandal and NBA great Gus Johnson, who played for the Baltimore Bullets (January 1970).

Due to an influenza epidemic, no social events or basketball games were allowed on campus (February 11, 1920).

The policy governing second semester hours for freshmen was enacted February 15, 1970.

The Idaho Legislature that the 90th session meet at Malvern Brannon was the only to be reduced in the spring of that year, which marked its last year in its temporary building. The Board of Regents passed the proposal of a bond that included a new campus building in 1913. The first money earmarked for student activities (April 1913).

The faculty decided not to close the university during World War I. Students who left for military service or agricultural work were to receive credit for the portion of the academic year completed (April 25, 1917).

The first electric bell to signal class periods began operation; conveniently, it was \( 8 \) o'clock. The Office of Student Affairs revealed a policy prohibiting hazing employed by women's living groups from dating women affiliated with the group (September 25, 1958).

In response to the Depression, dean of Women Periodical Jane French advised: "Girls, pay for your own shoes and lose your appetite afterwards (September 30, 1930).

Franklin B. Gault, the university's first president, arrived in Moscow, Gault, hired at a salary of $4,000 a year, served until 1898 (September 1892).

The freshman class of 1921 had to wear green beanie; a vigilance committee was apointed by the ASUI president to ensure compliance (October 1920)."
THE incomparable Lionel Hampton once again delighted packed-house crowds during the annual Jazz Festival. Fantastic music attracted fans from throughout the west to the UI campus for a "musical enjoyment."

THE University of Idaho campus becomes a beautiful land of silent white shadows during the winter. Bright white dominates nature as students partake of cold-weather activities.

HOMECOMING Parade brings the beauty out in everyone, as can be seen by this entourage of students from Targhee Hall. The Vandal football team defeated Nevada-Reno making the Homecoming weekend an overall success.
