UI department friends post $3,000 bail for alleged rapist

They say the grad student is innocent

By ANGELA CURTIS
Managing Editor

A UI graduate student accused of rape is out on bail today after individuals from his university department raised $5,000 to release him Monday.

"That just shows how much we think of Said (Hajib) and how sure we are he didn't do it," James Fazio, Wildland Recreation Department head, said Monday.

Hajib was arrested Friday afternoon on charges he allegedly raped and kidnapped a Cœur d'Alene woman. Preliminary bond was $25,000, but a judge reduced the sum to $3,000 Monday, Fazio said. Individuals within the department raised the money, not the department itself, he said.

Women's Center Director Beth Thomas said she did not perceive that as a problem, since individuals — not a university department — provided Hajib's bail money.

Hajib was arrested Friday in an open laboratory in the forestry building.

"We need to discuss procedures with the Moscow Police Department," Fazio said. "When the police arrest somebody, they assume he is dangerous and frightful. Why expose other people to a potentially dangerous situation?"

Fazio said the MPG should have arrested Hajib at home rather than into a university setting where other students were working.

"It was disruptive and a pure embarrassment," Fazio said.

The arrest stems from mistaken identity, he said. The alleged victim was probably confused and misidentified her attacker, according to Fazio.

"An innocent person spent the weekend in jail," he said.

Officials at the MPG said Monday that Hajib is being checked with one count each of kidnapping, rape and an infamous crime against nature. He was taken into custody at 2 p.m. Friday without arrest, according to a police department statement.

Hajib was not available for comment Monday night.

$63,000 software program will help speed summer aid awards

By ANN ROBINSON
Managing Editor

Financial aid officials here are now preparing to use portions of a new $63,000 software package that could speed processing of summer aid awards. But Dan Davenport, director of UI Student Financial Aid, says it will take five years until the system is completely implemented.

The Financial Aid Management System was purchased from Information Associates, a New York-based company which sells different software packages throughout the United States. More than 200 schools use the financial aid system.

Although the initial cost of the software was $63,000, there will be $3,000 to $6,000 a year until the system is installed, said UI Controller Gerry Reynolds. He said the majority of the funds used to buy FAMS came from the Computer Center's budget. The center uses this money to purchase hardware and software for the university, he said.

Representatives from Information Associates in San Diego have been training the personnel in the UI Financial Aid Office to use FAMS.

Davenport said the implementation will be time-consuming.

"The one thing we don't want to do is to jeopardize the production that's not going to work and we're going to build up financial aid," he said. "It isn't something you just plug in and it works."

Students are expected to see some automated changes in financial aid letters by this summer, Davenport said. The letters will help speed up the process of mailing students know they are owed financial aid.

The $63,000 appropriated to correct earlier inequities between the schools and for work study and research will probably not be altered, Lucas said. The building funds are part of $1.959 million planned for higher education.

"We know we are in a dilemma." — Tom Boyd
Speaker of the House

"We know we are in a dilemma." Boyd said.

"I don't see having any trouble passing the House," Boyd said. "I see a lot of trouble in the Senate."

Lucas took the opportunity to jab the Idaho Board of Education in its much delayed search for a new UI president.

"I'm going to ask Lionel Hampton to write a new song, "Elizabeth Zinder Come Home," Lucas said. "I've been talking to Lionel Hampton to write a new song, "Elizabeth Zinder Come Home." Lucas said. "I've been talking to Lionel Hampton to write a new song, "Elizabeth Zinder Come Home."

"I can't believe they'd try to go with censorship and with all the doors closed," he said. "They need all the day-light they can get so the people can get the right answers."

"This board should have set an example in hiring. They should have had a procedure," he said. "They should be persuading Zinder to cope. They're not persuading anyone to do anything."
CONSERVATION INTERNSHIPS OFFERED. Climbing in Mt. McKinley National Park, study botany in Hawaii, or be a river ranger on the Middle Fork of Idaho's Salmon River. The Student Conservation Association is offering more than 800 expense-paid internships this summer and fall. These internships are with federal agencies -- the National Park Service, U.S. Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management -- and with state agencies and private companies. Most positions do not require a lot of experience, says Joe Colburn, SCA representative. A slide-and-VCR program with a complete listing of internships and applications will be available in the Appointment Room of the SUB Thursday from 3-5 p.m.

CORRECTION. The university is asking the federal government for assistance to fund a new Earth Resources Building. A Friday news article "Idaho is asking help to help..." improperly stated that the money was being requested to fund a proposed University Center. The same article failed to indentify Jerry Wal- lance as UI assistant vice president for Budget and Planning. The Argonaut regrets these errors.

Finalist Zinser sends her job demands to Idaho ed board

By ANGELA CURTIS
Managing Editor

The only remaining candidate for UI president submitted a list of job demands to the Idaho Board of Education Friday.

President-elect Elizabeth Zinser sent the list to the board the same day she was officially offered the job. Included in the list were questions about job ben- efits, cleaning arrangements for the UI president's home, funding for the university and the UI's role in Idaho's educational sys- tem, according to board Execu- tive Director Rayburn Barton.

"Dr. Zinser has a number of questions she wants answers to," Barton said Monday.

Two board members are now in the process of drafting an offi- cial response to Zinser's list, Bar- ton said. The board should have the document prepared by Wed- nesday, he said.

Once the board agrees on the proposal, it will be forwarded to Zinser for "serious discussions" between the candidate and board, according to Barton.

Interim or Education

Barton said he is still optimistic about chances Zinser will accept the presidency here. A message Barton had received from board President Charles "Tiny" Grant read: "Talked with Zinser. Everything looks good. Will call." The board was expected to name a president Feb. 17. The three other finalists for the posi- tion dropped out earlier this week.

Thursday, Barton said he expects to be able to name a president this week. Monday afternoon, he said the search could extend one or two more weeks, and possibly longer. He would not speculate on when the search might end.

"Everybody here wants this to come to a conclusion," Barton said.

Zinser was campus favorite for the position, Barton said. Her candidacy received endorsement from the local chapter of the American Federation of Teach- ers. Zinser is vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. If Zinser becomes UI president, she will take office after UI Presi- dent Richard Clift retires in June.

A UI assistant professor will talk about AIDS from a public health and health education prospective here Thursday.

Page earned his doctorate in health education from Southern Illinois University and prior to coming to the UI, he was on the staff of the Utah Public Health Depart- ment. He has also taught at the University of Northern Colorado and the State University of New York at Cortland.

Page's talk is part of the International Lunch and Learn Seminar Series sponsored by the UI International Trade and Development office.

• ENROLLMENT HITS NEW RECORD

Enrollment at the university is at its highest spring level ever, the registrar says.

"We had 9,255 students enrolled on the 10th day of class, which is up 489 more than last spring," said Matt Telin, UI registrar.

That represents a 5.28 per- cent increase from a year ago. The previous record spring enrollment was 9,067 in 1983.

"We are experiencing increases when predictions were that we would be experi- encing declining enrollments," Telin said.

Calculations of credit hours and numbers of students used to arrive at full-time equivalent (FTE) enrollments show that the university has 7,551 in FTE enrollment. That's a 7 percent increase or 496 more FTE students than last year when that figure was 7,055.

Disabled Student Services Director Milhollin makes sure people get to class

By WENDY WOODWORTH
Contributing Writer

This weekend’s snowstorm has created few problems for disabled students who sometimes maneuver wheelchairs or crutches across icy walkways to get to class. But the snow, which was cleared or had melted from sidewalks by Monday afternoon, represents one of the many challenges faced by the coordinator of the Disabled Student Services.

Coordinator Dianne Milhollin says just making sure disabled students can get into classrooms is sometimes a challenge. Early each semester, Milhollin asks instructors to juggle classrooms so that disabled students have access to them.

“I know she’ll move it if I can’t get into the room,” said Brian Casey, a wheelchair assisted student studying psychology here.

At registration, Milhollin meets with disabled students who could have problems with access to their classrooms. She talks one-on-one with the students to find out their needs when a classroom is inaccessible.

Casey said, “I usually have one to two courses, but three at the most each semester that need to be moved.”

Milhollin is immediately in contact with the registrar’s office to find out other potential sites for an inaccessible room. She then goes to each of the sites so she can explain the specifics of the room to the professor.

Next, she contacts the professor teaching the course and explains why the class needs to be relocated.

Milhollin then asks the professor what his/her specific needs are and what he/she can do to help. After discussing the professor’s needs, she lists the possible new sites given to her by the registrar’s office that would fulfill their requirements in a room.

Milhollin said that during this process “it is important not to compromise the integrity of the course nor the professor.”

With the help and input of all people involved, the situation goes back and forth until a solution is found. Sometimes when no other solution is readily available, the only solution is a temporary one. Last semester, a wheelchair-assisted student needed access to a room in the UCC. The only immediate solution was to construct a temporary platform which required the door to remain open during class.

“I usually have one to two courses, but three at the most each semester that need to be moved.”

— Brian Casey

Milhollin said, “There is never a course a student can’t take. It just requires creative solutions.”

Casey had a course in the music building which required a ramp and an elevator to make it accessible. While waiting for the ramp and elevator, which were on order, Casey recorded the course on audio tape.

When it is impossible to find a room which meets the needs of both the student and the professor, a directed study program is devised. Casey spent four to five weeks watching a video tape in the library for one course.

Of the 57 buildings on campus, 41 are essentially accessible to disabled students. However, the psychology building is not one of those accessible. Casey’s adviser meets him at Casey’s fraternity — Theta Chi.

A 20-year plan which began in April 1977 should make all buildings at the university accessible to disabled students. Last semester 86 disabled students attended classes.

In the past, Casey missed courses for days and sometimes weeks. However, at the beginning of this semester he was able to attend the first day of all his courses that had needed changing.

Milhollin said she believes in “a process of finding a solution rather than staying in the problem.”

Good Luck Vandals Against BSU!
Why true Vandal fans don't love Boise State

The preselection polling votes are counted, and it would appear that true Vandal fans would love to wreak havoc with the UI's southern school, Boise State University.

This is especially true after last week's Vandal win over the Broncos in the BSU Pavilion. The loss dropped Idaho from number one in the Big Sky Conference to second place and put them in third in the nation.

But Thursday night in the Kibbie Dome the Vandals will once again take on BSU and try to reclaim their number one title. The entries for the "We love BSU" contest show that few Vandals have anything good to say about Boise State.

The top ten entries are:
1. A true Vandal fan loves BSU because one can compare the UI's truly athletic prowess to BSU's atonic display of stumbling incompetence.
2. Boise, Boise don't be blue just 'cauz we beat you in football, too. Broncos, Broncos, we Vandals love you. Someone's got to be number one, and we're number two.
3. With nicknames like "the cowboys," "Simurfs," "Riverstate Tech," and "the 13th grade," someone has to love BSU. — David Johnson
4. We love BSU because without the "University" part of their school name, their athletic programs only add up to a bunch of B.S. — Matthew Hanson
5. We don't love the Broncos because they were stuck up — even before we turned them into glue. — Alberi Beckstrom

This is some new use of the word "feminist" with which I am an unaccustomed. And comment- tary? Just what exactly was Mr. Long commenting about and ability to behave as an ass while under the influence of alcohol and nicotine?

April Fool's Day is well over a month away, so I can only assume that Mr. Long's column was not a joke. It is bad enough to live in a culture which accepts and encourages the idea of women as a sexual fodder with neither thoughts nor feelings, but to do so while under the influence of alcohol and nicotine is doubly justified — "they (men) upwards of $1,000 a week for their paramilitary campaigns" in an otherwise responsible newspapers is irresponsible.

I suggest that if Mr. Long should wish to further advertise himself as a beer-swilling, farting, good of 'boy with the sensi- tivity of a grape, let him do it in a more appropriate publication.

Student feels harassed by MPD

Editor: I would like to express my dis- pleasure with the head of the Kibbie-ASU! Dome security and the Boise Police Department during a recent Saturday night game.

I had a great Mardi Gras day and was looking forward to enjoying an exciting ballgame with my 9- and 3-year-old sons and their 7-year-old friend. We went through the hassle of finding a parking space and get-ting into the Dome. The Dome was pretty full, and we went down to our normal seats in the student side. My 3-year-old likes to play with Brandon Carter (who is the son of a Vandal basketball player) during most games, so we normally sit down close to the clock.

I found some seats and pre- cided to sit down. That's when a gentleman said, "Hey man, you can't sit there, it's for us women." I said I had three small children and just wanted to enjoy the game. Then he said, "women" showed up and demanded that I remove myself and my children. This guy and his three "women" started han- sing us, so I began to tell the kids we had to find another seat for from here onward. One of the "women" physically pushed me down the blachers.

Next thing I know I was sur- rounded by police and Dome sec- urity. No one inquired about what had occurred. Lt. Stuart Wagner told me I had to leave. I asked why and he said that I was disorderly. I didn't argue with him and let the Dome diagnosed. Two weeks prior to this I had written to the captain of the Mos- cow Police Department regar- ding Lt. Wagner (the officer who removed us from the Dome), and his lack of assistance in an error made by the police department. Obviously Lt. Wagner let this prior occurrence sway his judg- ment without finding out all the exorbitating circumstances. I do not appreciate nor will toler- ate this sort of police harass- ment and intend to let it be known.

NRA tolerates criminal activity

Consisting of more than 3,000,000 members, the National Rifle Association is as large as the Sierra Club, the National Educa- tion Association, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Common Cause combined.

Wielding a political action committee known as the Political Victory Fund, in which over $2,500,000 is raised per year, the NRA coordinates more money for political campaigns than any other group, raising over $2,500,000 per year. The NRA has successfully attacked the NRA, which has seen its membership drop by 50%.

The NRA is now an organization that is both successful and powerful, with a budget of $2,500,000 per year, and a membership of 3,000,000. The NRA is no longer the weak, ineffective group that it once was.

Why should we have access to military assault rifles designed solely for killing people on battlefields? Do we need further replays of the Stockton, Calif. incident in which a rape fire assault rifle was used to kill five elementary school children and wound 29 others? Is it our solemn duty to provide crack gangs with a weapon as terrifying as our current one? Why is it possible to buy a weapon that is both ban and paramilitary weaponry in one store? Why is it possible to buy a weapon that is both ban and paramilitary weaponry in one store?

The NRA's stance in protecting paramilitary weaponry is its major weakness. This is the only reason why we have to ban this weapon. If we were to create a weapon that is both ban and paramilitary weaponry, we could not allow this weapon to be used by any crack gang.

FEBRUARY 28, 1989
CHRISTIAN (page 4) or not to have an abortion should be left entirely in the hands of the individual woman and her physician. Exactly half of the anti-abortion speeches and propaganda I have ever come across were the ravings of men, most of whom will never have to carry a child, and most of whom were the victims of religious indoctrination. From the content of the columns mentioned above, it is easy to come to the conclusion that Mr. Stucker has been severely, probably inexcusably indoctrinated. I was raised a Christian, and remained one until I saw through the hypocrisy of it all. I do not hate Christians (although only a few are what I would call friends), but one thing I do detest about many Christians is their need to convert others, which I think must be linked to some sort of mental illness.

Christianity has long been a cult where women are made subservient. I recently attended the wedding of a woman I love very much, and was somewhat dismayed to hear a local minister tell her at the altar that "God will make women beautiful, if they submit to their husbands in all things" (paraphrased). The vast majority of Christian sects do not even allow women to be ordained. These sects are controlled by men, and the men control the women.

What I see as the root of this problem are men who want to control women, and who for "moral" (religious) reasons do not want women to have the right to an abortion. Granted, there are some women who are also opposed to abortion, and I would do well to state why I disagree with them. One of the things in which I disagree with many anti-abortionists is the belief that life begins at conception. This is an interesting concept, and since no one has any evidence one way or the other, I will not waste time disputing it. It is of interest however, to our society as it seems to tie in with the belief in sex for procreation only.

What Stucker is calling for when he calls for civil disobedience on the part of anti-abortionists is an attempt by religious fanatics to violate the civil rights of millions of women across the country, because of the archaic religious beliefs of the members of a cult that has become far too widespread. I think that the decision to have or not have an abortion would be best left to the individual woman and her physician.

—James H. Smith

NRA (page 4) membership waivers in the face of the NRA present of inhibiting such weapons, innocent lives will continue to be taken.

Edward Leddy, a spokesperson for the NRA, recently said, "The National Rifle Association believes that to be effective, gun laws must be directed at criminal behavior, not at simple gun ownership and use." This statement is logical enough and also very ironic, if the NRA really believed and followed this philosophy, why would they protest against background checks and waiting periods? Designing a system requiring buyers to provide background information to prevent lunatics from purchasing guns is directed at criminal behavior. Banning paramilitary assault rifles would also decrease criminal access to mass murderer weapons. The NRA lies in stating that it favors gun laws directed toward criminal behavior. Its main philosophy is geared toward fighting any form of gun control because it fears that more moderate gun control laws will be implemented after low-level gun laws have been enacted.

Banning the sale of paramilitary weapons to civilians and enacting waiting periods and background checks certainly aren't the main answers to crime prevention in this country. Guns can be purchased through the black market without restrictions, and other types of weapons are readily available. These measures would be a step in the right direction, however, by helping to diminish the domestic arms race. This would help our law enforcement community in its job of fighting crime, and it could also help save the lives of innocent bystanders of gang war violence. Once the NRA destroys its selfish exploits, these proposals will become reality.

ESPN commentator says Vandals' crowd won't be factor in game

Pressure? What pressure?

Even though Idaho's Big Sky Conference title hopes are on the line for Washburn, head coach John Roberts is easy going.

"It's going to be a good game," said Smith. "It's going to be exciting."

The Kibbie Dome Thursday, 7:30 p.m. Join the crowd for the classic annual Idaho/BSU game.

Vandal rugby begins season with two matchups in Oregon

By MARK MILAM
Sports Writer

Despite early injuries, defeats and practice-hindering snowfalls, the Rugby Club is charged up and ready to go.

The team travels to Oregon for its first two league matches against the University of Oregon and Oregon State.

The club is coming off a successful showing in the Rugby All-Collegiate Tournament in Furtland. UI took third while rival Washington State University took the championship. UI defeated WSU in an earlier tournament match.

In the tournament series the club played a total of five matches, winning three, tying once and losing one.

"We did quite well," Coach Matt Hansen said. "It was the first time we had played outside. Up until then we had been practicing inside of the Dome."

Last Saturday in an exhibition match against WSU, the Rugby Club was handed a 16-15 defeat.

Not only did the club suffer a loss but they came face to face with a common enemy to all clubs—player injuries. But Hansen said injuries will not affect team performance at this point.

The Vandals have a great deal of experienced and talented players returning this season, including Dave Beer and Steve Wohlschlegel.

Big Sky meek next for tracksters

by Lynnette Fixel

The men’s and women’s track teams fared well this weekend, as several UII competitors traveled to the University of Montana and Eastern Washington University hoping to qualify for the Big Sky Conference Men’s and Women’s Indoor Track and Field Championships.

At Missoula Friday, Eversley Linley won the 800 meters with a time of 1:51.35. Days Onamushu also came up with a win in the 200 meters with a time of 21.86 seconds, and teammate Dan O’Brien was second with a time of 21.99.

The Lady Vandals saw Michele Canday place third in the triple jump and fourth in the long jump. Anne Scott was third in the 400 meters with a time of 59.99. Diane Knudson placed third in the mile with a 5:16.18 mark.

At EWU Sunday, Dan O’Brien was a big winner in the 55 hurdles and the 55 meter dash. With his hurdle time of 7.26, O’Brien not only broke the old school record of 7.27 but also qualified for the NCAA Championships March 11-12 in Indianapolis.

O’Brien was also impressive in the 55 meters with a winning time of 6.39:

“His sixth fastest in the nation right now in the hurdles,” said UI Track Coach Mike Keller. “At the Big Sky Conference meet he’ll have his work cut out for him,” Keller said.

O’Brien will be busy competing in the 55 meter hurdles and 55 meter dash twice, as well as the long jump and a leg on the mile relay. For the women’s team, Carrey Chacoa-Daoi had a great race at Missoula in the 55 meter dash with a time of 7.28, equaling her own school record.

The Big Sky Conference Championship meet, free to the public, is scheduled to begin Friday at noon in the Kibbie Dome. “It would be great if the students would come out and support us,” Keller said.

UI men’s tennis stays undefeated

by Scott Trotter
Sports Editor

The UI men’s tennis team defended its undefeated status against British Columbia University last Saturday, while the women dropped to an overall season record of 2-1.

UI team members San-
tas, Scott Anderson and John Blachled won their singles competitions against the Canadian team. The men’s doubles team, comprised of Martinez and Anderson on one team and Jose Palacios and Chris Kramer on the other, defeated British Columbia doubles opponents.

The women’s team lost by a final score of 3-2 to the Canadians. Patricia Shander and Linda Scokin lost both picked up wins for UI in singles competition, while Cathy Shannder and her sister Patricia picked up a win in doubles competition.

UI makes Big Sky playoffs

BY SCOTT TROTTER
Sports Editor

The Lady Vandals picked up two more wins last week, moving Idaho into position to possibly earn a second place finish in the Big Sky Conference regular season. But most importantly, the win clinched UI’s playoff spot in the post-season tournament. With a record of 15-10 overall and 18-6 in the Big Sky, Idaho is currently tied for second in Big Sky standings with Montana State.

Winning our games this past weekend gave our team an opportunity to be in the post-season tournament,” said Head Coach Laurie Turner. “We’re happy to be there.”

The Lady Vandals’ first weekend matchup was at Northern Arizona on Thursday. The team made the short trip south to Flagstaff and defeated the Bearcats 75-64. Then they traveled to Nevada-Reno on Saturday and swept the road trip with a 70-53 victory over the Wolfpack Women.

Junior Elena Rodriguez scored 20 points and the Lady Vandals outscored Nevada-Reno 20-4 during the last six minutes of the game en route to a Saturday night victory. Junior Van Pelt and senior Diol also posted solid results in the Nevada-Reno match-up. Van Pelt had 17 points and Dial had 12.

“By the second half, we just went on a tear defensively,” said Lady Vandals Assistant Coach Judy Speidstra. “We kept them from scoring, and Dial came out and hit some key shots. Once again, we had three people in double figures, and that really helped us.”

Idaho led 31-28 at halftime and then opened the game up in the second half after leading 30-49 at the 6:42 mark. Nevada-Reno shot a measager 33 percent from the floor in the contest.

“In the first half, we played a little lackluster defense,” Speidstra said. “They’re 0-14 with nothing to lose, and were playing very inspired ball. Reno played tough and did a good job.”

Idaho has just one regular season game remaining. The Lady Vandals’ next matchup is against Eastern Washington Sunday at 2 p.m. in Cheney. Regardless of whether the Lady Vandals win or lose, they will still play in the post-season tournament. But Turner is looking for a win. “EWU is just another game for us, but we’re wanting to play well,” Turner said. “We want to win so we believe confidence going into the tournament.”

Touche Troupe moves away from traditional dance

By DENA BANDADAN
Staff Writer

Stretching and twisting, 11 performers gather in the dance theater. Bare feet squeak on the cool linoleum.

Another dancer in socks slides like a kid across the shiny floor. Their movements are at times smooth and fluid, others spastic and unexpected. One dancer moves to the center of the room and begins his interpretive dance — responding to the music, his feelings and thoughts. Two dancers

Orphans explores universal search

By DAVID KELLY
Staff Writer

Opening the spring season for the Collette Theatre is the psychological drama, Orphans, by Lyle Kessler.

The play is set in North Philadelphia where Treat and Phillip, played by Tim Johnson and Dale Huffman, grew up dodging welfare officers, said Director Tom Armitage.

The two boys were orphaned when Treat was a little boy and Phillip was just a baby. Since that time, Treat has provided all the essentials for them — Star Kist tuna, Hellman’s mayonnaise and television — through his “self-employed” thievery, said Armitage.

Phillip has been kept at home, never setting foot outside, because Treat has concocted stories of germ-infested air that would kill Phillip with his special allergies.

“In truth,” Armitage said, “Treat is afraid Phillip would leave him, and then he would be all alone.”

Now, Treat picks up Harold, a drunk played by Toni Patrick, at the local bar and promises to hold him for ransom.

After Treat brings Harold home, the family finds out that Phillip and his parents have been living in the house all along.

Phillip is in the middle-aged, on the lam and can’t return to Chicago because he has burned a few bridges,” Armitage said.

Harold, still not overdosed, tries to be Phillip’s bodyguard and helps Phillip to grow up and look at life in a new perspective.

“Orphans provides an incredible emotional experience that you can’t convey in words,” Armitage said. “You forget you are in a theater.”

Tickets range $3 at the door and at Ticket Express in the SUB. Early tickets are recommended due to limited seating.

“Myron Thompson is the musician. The music is percussive, made with a synthesizer, guitar and noise makers,” Warner said, “The sound is often cartoonish.”

Warner said she and the other dancers in the group have moved away from strict dancing form and style. “I want to get people to enjoy moving and get them to dance how they feel, not particularly how they were taught.” Warner said, “We’ve moved away from technique and more toward therapy. Our dancing gets us to know ourselves and the space around us as well as the group.”

Jazz festival receives world-wide attention

BY JLL CHRISTINE BECK
Entertainment Editor

Glennon made an appearance at this year's Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival. For the first time ever a Soviet group performed with an American group. This appearance also marked the first time that a Soviet group performed in an American jazz festival, according to Festival Director Dr. Lynn Skinner.

The Soviet duo, Jazz For Two, received gifts from the Lionel Hampton School of Music and, because of glasnost, were able to keep them, according to Skinner. If the musicians had received the gifts a few months ago, they would have had to return them, Skinner said.

Pianist Leonid Vintskievich received a synthesizer, and saxophonist Leonit Saaralai received a Selmer tenor saxophone valued at approximately $8,000.

This year's festival also marked the first time that trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, the Ray Brown Trio and singer Carenos McCrae performed together on stage. "All the concerts were incredible," Skinner said.

The festival received international attention with airplay on the Soviet Union over the Voice of America. And, according to Skinner, a friend of Lionel Hampton's called to say he had seen a half-hour news show on the festival. Stories of the festival were also carried on the Associated Press wires.

"It's getting out there," Skinner said.

Planning for next year's festival will begin soon and although no specifics are ready, Skinner is confident that it won't be disappointing. "You know that we're going to have the finest that you can find in the nation," he said.

Warner has a visual arts background which has influenced her feelings about dance. She views dance as an art, not entertainment.

"I make you think, not just be a passive audience. Some people don't like this kind of dance, but that's OK," Warner said.

Warner said she wants her performances to be a blend of dance, music and background. Touch Troupe will present five to 10 performances this semester, Warner said. Many of the performances will be in atypical locations, following along the lines of happenings which emerged from the theater world in the late 1950s. "We work with contact improvisation. We focus on the relationships between each other and the space we are in," Warner said.

"Touch Troupe's making its debut performance March 3-4. Touch Troupe is performing a dance called 'Seizure of Guggenheim Museum and Laundromat' which is a comical piece much like the absurd, cyclic UBUs plays written by Alfred Jarry," Warner said.

"We just want to capture people's attention and entertain them. The group is experimental and goes in the direction that the ideas of the dancers take it," Warner said.

Space still available for national exchangers

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
Staff Writer

Although the preferred deadlines passed Thursday, it is not too late to apply to go on national exchange.

Excitement, adventure, a chance to see new places and meet new people were some of the many responses students gave when asked why they went on a national exchange. "It was a great experience," UI student Katrine Bilick said. Bilick attended the University of Delaware last spring.

"We were within one or two hours of New York, Washington D.C., Philadelphia and the coast. There was nothing new to see every weekend," Bilick said. It was interesting and a great opportunity to meet people from different college settings. "I figured if I didn't go then I never would," John Sevver, National Student Exchange coordinator, said about 40 UI students are placed with host schools each year and 12 students are attending school here this semester. About 40 schools around the country participate in the program.

There is no limit to the number of students Idaho can send each year, Sevver said. Students have the option of paying Idaho's tuition or their host school's in-state tuition. Humboldt State University student Jennifer Cox didn't really know what to expect when she came to Idaho.

"I thought there would be more trees," she said.

Along with the different seasons that Californians hope for, Idaho's environment brings benefits that come along with it, like lower tuition and less rain.

"I wasnt rubbing it in—I just wanted Eddie to know the score of last night's game."

Chris Jensen didn't think studying in France was economically feasible, but she ended up attending the University of Paris and travelling throughout Europe.

"My experience helped develop my perspectives and understanding of people," Jensen said. "No classroom at the University of Idaho could have taught me to deal with the situation of being in a foreign country.

Jensen, an intern at International Trade and Development, related her travel and learning experiences at a presentation held earlier this month. She is scheduled to give two more presentations Thursday. The first begins at 4:30 p.m. in the SUR Silver Room. The second begins at 6 p.m. in the Wallace Complex Conference Room.

Jensen said she didn't think she could afford to study in France but after talking with Jack Cooper, coordinator of International Training at the UI, she managed to make it happen.

Cooper says there are four ways students can study abroad.

The first of these, the International Student Exchange Program, is UI's official program. This program has connections with more than 100 institutions abroad and is the approximate financial equivalent to one academic year at the UI.

Another way is called "springboarding." Through this method, students temporally transfer to another institution for the program of their choice and have the transcripts processed and transferred back to the UI.

An exchange program through Boise State University is also offered. In this way, students can springboard through ISSEP.

There is also the independent method in which students can write to the foreign institution directly and apply for entrance without the aid of a program. Also, students can choose an independent program and go abroad with it.

Cooper said he suggests the last method only for those people who can't manage to get into the ISP and springboarding programs.

Because most are handled through the UI, Cooper said financial aid still applies in most of the study abroad programs. The main requirements for most study abroad programs are two years of the foreign language, junior or senior standing and a 3.0 GPA.

"The good thing about the programs is that students are mainstreamed and not ghettoized." Cooper said, "They have to keep up the same amount of native students in all of the classes. Nothing here in Idaho will equal a year overseas."
