VP office expansion into vandal lounge scrapped

By BENJAMIN LONG

The Vandal Lounge is safe for now.

After a barrage of negative feedback tossed at acting Vice President of Student Affairs Hal Godwin at this week's SUB Board meeting, plans to adapt parts of the Vandal Lounge into office space have been put aside, board members reported.

The lounge, located on the first floor of the SUB, is one of the largest nighttime study areas outside of the library and is often packed with stressed students avoiding enforced silence during exam weeks. The new administration had its eyes set on the space as an office for the reconstituted position of the vice president of student affairs.

Godwin said at the meeting that he will share space in the SUB with New Student Services until an alternative can be found. Previously, the position of vice president was filled by former Coordinator of Student Services Terry Armstrong from an office in the Administration Building. The move to Room 154 in the SUB is designed to make the new vice president more available for students, Godwin said.

Wednesday Godwin and Facility Planning Director Joanne Reeves presented to the SUB Senate a proposal to enlarge the room, and take up some of the Vandal Lounge.

The ensuing flood of disapproval by students surprised the administration, President Elizabeth Zinner said.

"I received a tremendous education about the lack of study space on campus," she said. "The real issue isn't just the Vandal Lounge. The important issue is the shortage of study space."

Armstrong's former office in the Administration Building is being filled with two clerical workers, she said.

SUB General Manager Dean Vetrim said the students at the meeting robustly criticized the expansion plans.

"Godwin was waiting for input. He's gauging it," he said. "He's listening to students. That's what he should be doing." Vetrim also said that "as vice president, he has the power to do whatever he wants to do."

Godwin was out of town and was unavailable to comment on the meeting.

Tribunal decision appealed

TEKE's defend rushing procedure

By KARA GARTEN

For possibly the first time ever the largest Idaho fraternity is appealing an Interfraternity Council Tribunal decision.

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity is asking the University Judicial Council to review a tribunal judgment on charges that the Tekes did not follow legal rushing procedures during this fall's rush week.

Tau Kappa Epsilon President Mike Gocht said his fraternity handed out "interest cards" to rushes that showed the fraternity was interested in having those men pledge the fraternity. The IPC Tribunal ruled that this was illegal because it appeared that the Tekes were handing out bid cards before they were allowed, since the "interest cards" could be easily confused with bid cards.

However, Gocht said he didn't think there was any confusion over the function of the cards. "It was explained when we handed them out that they were not bid cards," he said.

Gocht said he felt the Tekes would get a fair trial this time—something he said they did not get through the Tribunal because the Tribunal acted as both the plaintiff and the judge.

"If a house brings charges against another house, then Tribunal works well. But when..."

"It was explained when we handed them out that they were not bid cards."

— Mike Gocht

The Tekes have been represented by ASSU Attorney General Cliff Brown.

IPC Tribunal President Scott Shorn said the Tribunal's involvement in the situation is over now that the university is handling the appeal.

"Every house has the right to appeal a ruling by the Tribunal."

Shorn said. "It's out of our hands now."
Major vetoes student lobby bill

By J.E. ERICKSON
Senior Staff Writer

A bill concerning the Idaho Student Lobby passed by the ASUI Senate Wednesday night was vetoed by ASUI Vice President Lynn Major Thursday. Major was acting student body president yesterday due to the absence of ASUI President Tina Kagi, who was attending the Idaho State Board of Education meeting in Sandpoint.

The senate passed the bill 7-4 and approved ISU's Constitution and Bylaws. By approving this bill, the ASUI officially became a member of the student lobby. For nearly two years, student body officials from Idaho's colleges and universities have been developing the political action group, which is intended to provide Idaho students with an effective voice in the state legislature.

In a memo addressed to Kagi explaining the veto, Major says she does not believe the "bill reflects the true will of the senate.

Major made her decision after talking with Senators Kurt Gustav, Steve Dunn, Mike McKee, and John Goetschke, the same four senators who voted against the original measure Wednesday afternoon. Boyer had requested the ASUI Attorney General Cliff Brown to attend the meeting.

Major says the senators she spoke with expressed concern over the "haste" of the decision.

"They were also concerned about a lack of built-in mechanisms that would not leave them for protection of the students," Major said.

Major's memo cites the failure of the ISU Constitution and Bylaws to provide for constitutioal amendment, a free structure and legal liability.

"It was not a hasty decision," Kagi said. "It has been worked on for over two years, and this is the most extreme time in considering we are meeting with other ESL organizations this weekend." The ESL meeting will be held Saturday in Coeur d'Alene.

Concerns were raised during the debate of the ESL bill, and we agreed to take those to the ESL meeting and recommend their adoption," Kagi said.

It was a tough bill to get through last night (Wednesday), and many people wanted to take it until next week and fix some of the problems before it passed," Major said. "The time to make amendments is not after you pass reflect beforehand.

Also during Wednesday's meeting, Kagi read a letter to the senators reprimanding Major for her controversial proposal to the ISU University Curriculum Committee.

Earlier this week, student leaders of the lower house had submitted a proposal to the UCC asking for the approval of a SUNY curriculum proposal to the UCC for consideration.

"We are advocating representative decisions over authoritative, secretive actions and request your compliance with these standards," the memo, directed at Major, says. "As a member of the student government, it is your obligation to consult with students, especially those to be directly affected, prior to taking action to change policy." While authored by Kagi, senators Goetschke, Patty Makey, Dunn, Brian Casey and Marc Boyer also signed the memo.

Sen. Lisa Krepel choose not to sign the memo because of a lack of information on the issue.

I resent that Lynn didn't notify us ahead of time," Krepel said after the meeting. If the senator (the Senate) were forced to make a knee-jerk decision to sign the letter or vote to support Lynn's proposal," Krepel said.

"I'm indifferent to the letter," Major said Thursday. "I didn't approach the committee for Lynn's support. ASUI Vice President, but as Lynn Major, student leader, who has a problem with this regulation."

Major also contends at least two senators signed the reprisal letter without reading or "knowing both sides of the story.

Kagi said she thinks Major's proposal could harm students in the state because a majority of these students are not committed to full-time status. Kagi said she believes this could discourage students from assuming ASUI leadership positions.

After the session ended, Sen. Boyer was verbally reprimanded by Major and Senate President McKee for his behavior Thursday in a memo to the senate. In addition, he is said in the memo that constructive criticism would have been more valuable.

"We are a body of individuals who are working for the good of the student body, as an unified group," the memo from Boyer said. "That attitude to me means guiding a fellow worker back on the correct line of constructive criticism when he has fallen off..."

Further comment Thursday night.

"He's a good senator, and he knows he has made a couple of mistakes," Major said, "but he says it won't happen again and I believe him."

In other business, the senate approved bills providing for the appointment of Paul Franco for the ASUI Programs Board, and Tony Lingner and Denise Penton to the ASUI Political Concerns Board.

Student leaders may lose privileges

By SHERRY DEAL
News Editor

A proposal to ban a regulation allowing some student leaders to take fewer than 12 credits but remaining full-time students is still under consideration after two committee meetings.

Lynn Major, ASUI vice president, presented the proposal Wednesday to the University Curriculum Committee, in what she said was an effort to enhance the leadership image of student leaders.

In the Bulletin, academic regulation 0-1-1 states that the ASUI president, vice president, senators and Academic editors can take a minimum of three credits, pay full-time student fees, and be considered full-time students for all purposes other than financial aid.

Originally, Major's proposal was not intended to affect Argonau editors, but the committee felt the regulation had to be consistent for all student leaders.

Major's reasons for excluding Argonaut editors were that the Argonaut is a written publication that has to be produced twice a week, and that the editors are appointed by the Communications faculty, not elected by the student body.

Take charge

Chin urges students to get shots

By DONALD K. CHIN, M.D.

Topics in this column will cover a broad range of health issues concerning a concern called 'Health.

"Your Health Is In Your Hands" implies you have control of your body and must take charge of your life and well-being. Rubella, or three-day measles, is a mild viral illness that causes a fine rash lasting three days and is accompanied by fever and lethargy. The principal importance of rubella lies in the devastating effects it can have on the fetus in utero if a pregnant woman contracts rubella in the first or second trimester of pregnancy. Measles, or rubella, produces a high fever, a cough, eye problems and a rash for seven days.

Several student leaders spoke in favor of Major's proposal, saying ASUI positions are paid positions, and should be treated as extra activities.

"They (ASUI) positions aren't meant to take the place of education," said Doug Kern, Interfraternity Council president. "That's what we're here for in the first place."

"I feel anything we can do to facilitate participation in student activities is beneficial."

Tina Kagi
ASUI President

ASUI President Tina Kagi, who is currently enrolled for three cres, said she feels her experience with the ASUI is as valuable to to her as any class she will be required to take.

"Just because I don't receive credit for it doesn't make it any less important," she said.

Kagi said she was not in favor of Major's proposal because it makes it more difficult for stuents to become involved in student activities.

"I feel anything we can do to facilitate participation in student activities is beneficial," she said.

However, those in favor of Major's proposal believe that participants in student activities should be able to handle 12 credits and their jobs.

"I don't think we should have to offer incentives to get people to participate in these activities," said Ray Horst, Residence Hall Association president.

Faculty members of the UCC questioned whether removing the regulation from the Bulletin would accomplish anything.

"We may be trying to solve a problem that does not exist," committee chairman Mark Secrist said.

Even if the regulation is removed, Kagi pointed out that ASUI bylaws permit part-time students to hold office, and the only privileges office holders would lose by not being considered full-time students is admistance to athletic contests and use of campus facilities.

The regulation was made to pass Major's proposal, but the issue is not expected to come up until next week's meeting.

Complications include pneumonia and encephalitis, leading to permanent sequelae or even death. Measles is still the leading cause of death in underdeveloped countries, especially in Africa and India.

As of August 1989, there were 5,861 cases of measles reported to the Centers of Disease Control, an increase of 275 percent over 1988. Seventy colleges and universities have reported cases of measles on their campuses this year already.

The University of Idaho Student Health Center highly recommends that every student who has not had an MMR (measles, mumps, rubella) immunization since 1980 get a second dose, except for women who are pregnant or who anticipate pregnancy in the next three months, people born before 1957, those with religious reasons or medical contractions, or those who have had the disease.

The CDC and Academy of Pediatrics is recommending mandatory second-dose revaccination of MMR at ages 5 or 12 and for present college students. No official U.S. policy has been implemented, however.

Take charge of your wellness and help eradicate measles and rubella off the face of the earth, as we have successfully done against smallpox, by getting your MMR immunizations.

Killing dogs is not the way to win

“Winning is everything,” proclaims various television and billboard advertisements for Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park.

Unfortunately the athletes involved in the winning are ultimately the losers. Sixteen dead greyhounds wrapped in plastic were found in an Idaho dump Oct. 11. The athletes had outlived their purpose. As it turns out, the practice of killing dogs as part of the greyhound park’s operation since it opened in 1988.

This grisly revelation is surprising to many, since racing boosters pledged to develop an active greyhound adoption program to placate the 1987 Idaho Legislature into approving racing and betting on dogs.

The athletes were taught to be very active at all. Bob Lee, the Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park's general manager, said in an Oct. 13 Spokesman Review article that only 50 percent of the dogs eligible for adoption are placed in homes. The rest, healthy animals all, are killed.

"It bothers me that the industry would do that," Kooskia County Humane Society Director Pete Nikiforuk said in the noted article. "But it is the same way that the general public raises their animals. When they no longer serve a purpose, even if the animal is healthy, it is put down.

Although it is true that the killing of greyhounds is not the much larger problem of society's attitude toward animals, it doesn't follow that we should accept the killings as a given.

Idaho Racing Commission doesn't see this as a problem. When the commission found out about the dogs in the dump site, they merely adopted a policy requiring that the dogs be disposed of at racing plants. It doesn't matter whether the dogs are rent to pieces or whether they have dirt pushed over them at a dump. The appalling fact is that healthy animals are being killed. Behind the cheap beer, behind the enthusiasm of people screaming, "Money! Money! Money!" on television advertisements lurks a real pathology. It is disgusting to think that anyone would want to continue an enterprise that kills healthy animals on a regular basis.

Let your conscience be your guide: Ban dog racing. Winning isn't everything.

Abortion is still the issue

By now, everyone agrees that abortion is an extremely volatile and emotionally charged issue. Regardless of one's bias, it's often difficult to find any issue that continues to stir as much controversy.

Fortunately, a majority of Americans still support a woman's right to determine the fate of her own body. However, the anti-abortion forces may soon realize something of a victory due to recent trends in Supreme Court decisions. Those decisions seem to be giving increasing power to the states to do as they will with women's bodies. In some states, like Idaho, that's bad news for women.

What we need to get something straight. Without exception, there is not one man on this planet who has the right to tell any woman what she can or cannot do with her own body! Men of the anti-abortion movement might have a different perspective on things if the National Organization for Women were suddenly able to write laws that prohibited a man from obtaining a vasectomy — regardless of how many children he already had.

On the surface, the so-called "pro-life" position sounds good. Indeed, the premise that life is precious is an admirable position to hold. But it is precisely the

A novel idea

Editor:

An unfortunate incident apparently happened a while back. Some posters announcing a Stu dent Humanist Association meeting were taken down, possibly with malicious intent. James Smith responded with a letter to the editor decrying this, and if true, correctly so. However he didn't simply stop there, but engaged instead in an equally unfortunate action. Without knowing who removed the posters (or why), and without any evidence presented, Christians, and more specifically, "fundamentalist" Christians to term used alternately to describe a supposed fringe element, and as sort of a catchall phrase for anyone who believes in the Bible, is in sin in crisis. So much for intelligent, open-minded, unprejudiced, informed opinion. It seems to this writer, an underside of the anti-abortion movement, an underside associated with SHA — T. Harter, R. Nielsen et al. that inspires him and her to be a right-wing fringe action people who take the Bible seriously? Why weren't Muslims or Hindus suspected? I did see one of those posters once. I don't remember for sure, but it seems like it was on the glass door entrance to a building. May be a civilian took it down because of improper placement.

The letter's author accuses "Christian fundamentalists" of being the most ignorant, thereby hateful and fearing the apparent anyone's humanity. It is curious then, that the SHA didn't take an opportunity to dispel our ignorance by participating in public debate over issues important to both of us — an offer made at least two times earlier this semester by the Christians who are ignorant and fearful? He accuses the alleged Christian offender of a crisis in faith. If a Christian did tear down the posters, perhaps Mr. Smith is right. So what is it then, that causes the SHA to turn down open dialogue? Do they just prefer the customary vandalism instead of the print from the editorial page? Public debate over important philosophical and religious issues at a university — what a novel idea! — P.D. Brown
Ask Lois:

Some people are lazy, ill-bred

Q. When the Vandal Carte Cafe (VCC) debuted, they said something about looking for the cart under the University Classroom Center (UCC) in bad weather. When the weather turns cold and the pathway between the library and Memorial Gym turns into the packed and slippery snow-ice compound, will Marriott put slat-type runners on the Vandal Carte Cafe and slide it down to the UCC? Does the employee who works the cart get workman’s comp for frostbitten fingers or injuries incurred on slick walks?

A. Using the “runner” option, the VCC becomes the VBSC, or Vandal Bob’s Sidewalk Cart (not what some of you smarties thought). Since Marriott provides a kinder, gentler fire service, surely they must carry insurance covering employee injuries in the line of duty.

Q. What does “stop when occupied” mean? I always thought it meant “stop when occupied,” but I’ve seen several people around town who think it means “slow down and they’ll probably run,” or “try not to hit the ones between the white lines.” Could you clarify this? Also, how come people drive from the dorms to places like the Music Building and the Kibbie Dome — Signal, Curi-ous Pedestrians

A. Ask Lois has noticed this phe-nomenon too. I would say the problem is much larger than “several.” In fact, it affects most Moscow drivers. I have judged it to be a sad condition called “Driver Illiteracy” when you put perfectly normal and reasonable, contributive members of Moscow society behind the wheel of an automobile and they cannot properly read or process written commands such as the one you’ve mentioned. They respond to simpler visual stimuli, such as red lights and green lights, much as in the children’s game “Red Light, Green Light.” We know these people were able to read when they took Driver’s Education, but this sad disease takes its toll. Perhaps pedestrians could combat the problem by carry-ing a big sign with a picture of a traffic signal on it, with the red light colored in red. I have tried pointing at the sign as a hint, but most drivers stare dumbly at me, as if it should be obvious that they can’t read, and ludicrous for me to expect so much of them. They’re having enough trouble remembering the important meanings of red light, green light...

In response to your second question, I must admit that I find such people lazy, not to mention coarse and ill-bred. It must take as long to find a parking space as to walk across campus. These are probably the same people who throw aluminum cans in the trash instead of recycling.

ABORTION

By contrast, we don’t seem to hear much from anti-abortionists about the 12 million children who die every year from the effects of over-birthcontrol. There are children who are already here, who know wrretchedness, who have a personality, who think and remember, children who feel pain. Who don’t we see those who extol the sanctity of life using civil disobedience to fight for the rights of these children?

For those anti-abortionists who base their position on “natural principles” and believe they are doing “God’s will”, there are some salient points to consider. One third of all pregnancies are naturally aborted. Of those not miscarried, one third are legally aborted. Thus, for every 100 pregnancies, 33 are miscarried and 22 are legal abortions. With this in mind, it seems that God abors more “babies” than so-called abortionists. The overwhelming majority of abortions are the result of unwanted pregnancies. With this in mind, one would think that anti-abortionists would seek realistic ways to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies. Yet, they are usually the most vociferous opponents of contraceptive devices and research that would improve the effectiveness of those devices. Their solutions always seem to be premised on an outdated morality. Accordingly, if we all simply abstain from sex until we’re blissfully married, the abortion issue would magically disappear. Now there’s a solution firmly grounded in reality!

The objective lesson is abundantly clear. Total victory for anti-abortionists is dangerous to all of us, not just women. This planet is rapidly losing its ability to support all of us. Bringing more children into this tenuous situation is no different than fighting a fire with gasoline.

Hey! Let’s go bowling

By GRETCHEN KELLEY  Staff Writer

“Bowling?” my roommate asked, looking at me quizzically. “You’re writing about bowling?”

“Sure, a lot of people bowl,” I said, looking hopeful. If you are looking for something inexpensive and fun to do this weekend, bowling might be just what you’re looking for.

Moscow has two bowling alleys, the SUB Underground on the University of Idaho campus and Bowlerama Inc. at 1008 Main St. Both are open, airy places, complete with large-pattern carpets and brightly colored walls, exactly what you would have expected.

Both alleys have 12 lanes. The SUB Underground charges $4.00 per hour, or 10 cents per frame, and 30 cents for each additional frame. The alley is open from 8:00 a.m. - 11 p.m. daily.

The Bowlerama, which is open from 9 a.m. - 11 p.m. daily, charges a flat rate of 12 cents per frame or 75 cents plus tax for shoes.

Bowling is the largest sports organization for women in the world. A women’s league bowls every Tuesday in the Underground, and a faculty/staff league bowls each Wednesday.

The Bowlerama’s Thursday Night Scrarch league is now setting up a scholarship for girls on the university’s bowling team. The students do not need to be bowlers, but will be required to have a certain grade point average. Interested persons may contact San Miller or Gary Fuller for more information.

“Interest in bowling has really dropped off in the last 10 years,” Miller said. “There is no more organized bowling around here.”

People seem to be watching more bowling on TV, involving themselves in physical fitness, and being more aware of how the game is played.

“I think that more people would enjoy it if they took the time to go to the Bowlerama,” Miller said.

The UI bowling team practices four times a week as a team and meets team members practice an additional 15 to 20 hours a week.

“I really like to be involved on campus, and bowling is a good way to do that,” said Ken- nedy Wilson, president of the UI bowling team and a senior geography student.

Unlike other sports, collegiate bowling teams are not placed in divisions based on school size. The UI team competes against bowlers from Stanford University and other large schools, which makes it tough, according to Wilson.

“We played a lot,” Wilson said. “In fact, the bowling team probably travels more than most collegiate teams.”

Wilson said bowling was included in the last Olympics as an exhibition event, but because of the growing popularity of the sport, it will soon be a medal event in the 1992 Games.

“It’s a great diversion from studying,” said UI team member Bob Meyer, a sophomore in electrical engineering. “Bowling is something I can do alone or with friends.”

Both the SUB Underground and the Bowlerama offer a Monte Carlo night, a tournament with prize money. Open to anyone interested, Monte Carlo night is offered Saturday nights at 8:00 p.m. at the Bowlerama and Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SUB. An entrance fee is charged.

So, if you are looking for something new to do, you may want to check out the SUB Underground or the Bowlerama. Since it might even be a medal sport in the 1992 Olympics, you’d better practice up.

By GRETCHEN KELLEY  Staff Writer

According to Merriam-Webster Dictionary, caricature is the representation of parts or features of a person in a ridiculous or exaggerated way. Adam Swann is more than just a hobby for a talented man named Wirk.

Wirk and his dog, Molly, have been visiting the University of Idaho for over a year now. Sometimes Wirk is working at the Poinsettia Café drawing caricatures as a hobby at the University of Minnesota.

Wirk said that he loves more all the time and that his style has changed slightly over the years. Wirk spends his summers at Lake Tahoe, where in the early 1980s he had a chance to draw Marilyn Monroe. He has also drawn Michael Jackson, Diana Ross, and many other stars.

“My favorite part is listening to the stories people tell and being able to distort faces.”

Dirt Fisherman, a Boise band, will perform Saturday night in the SUB Ballroom along with Moscow’s Igniteous. The dance is sponsored by ASUI Productions.

Dirt Fisherman seems to be made up of a myriad of personal- ities and talents. Dave, K.T. and Gina create a variety of guita- r and singing, while Dan and Gavin provide original percussion and bass sounds. Each member adds to the band’s originality by writing music.

A description of Dirt Fisherman’s music seems to be hard to find. In a recent interview, Dave defined the band as “college radio progressive.”

Dirt Fisherman has been compared to exceptional bands like Jefferson Airplane and The Doors. The more the band plays together, the more “homogenized” the members become.

“We write from personal experience,” K.T. said in the same interview.

Dance to feature Boise band

By GRETCHEN KELLEY  Staff Writer

The band was formed in a local Boise bar and became popular in the Boise bar The Zio. Dirt Fisherman seems to reek of a hometown aura with a mixture of the original 1980’s attitude, with the exception of the use of drugs. Although the song “Horse Sense” is about someone being addicted to heroin, alcohol is the only drug the band claims to partake in.

Most of the band’s material is seen as protest music, but band members do not see themselves in that light. The band’s line-up includes songs such as “Perpetually Burned,” “Political Frostration” and “Rachel Miller’s.”

The band members, who enjoy sharing their music, see the music as a gift. Dirt Fisherman has developed a loyal crowd of fol- lower who claim there is nothing like experiencing the band in concert, and Saturday night is the perfect opportunity. "If you can’t make it to the SUB Ballroom around 8:00 p.m. with $2, look for the band’s album, which will be released soon."
Mikey’s Gyros ‘neat’ restaurant

Atmosphere offers whisper of Greek

By SHIRLEE CARBAUGH
Staff Writer

In the 1970s, Mikey’s Greek Gyros was known as an exclusive hippie hangout. Although hippies are still welcome, owner Beri Harvey would like to establish a new clientele.

“I’m not quite sure how I would describe the people who come here. It is so varied, and that is really what I want,” Harvey said. “We are working on a specific image for the restaurant.”

ATMO-SPHERE: The restaurant has a unique, contemporary dining atmosphere with a whisper of Greek. The eatery has three dining areas: the back, the front, and the patio area. I especially like Mikey’s front dining area. The walls are adorned with sketches of Greek people in traditional dining wear. In this casual and inviting environment, my favorite place to sit is at the huge, comfortable window seat. As a non-hippie, I can eat there without feeling isolated.

SERVICE: Although this restaurant is mostly a “do-it-yourself” place, some service is available. I get the distinct impression that the waiters and waitresses resent dealing with the service end of their jobs.

TASTE: I had the house specialty, the Gyro (pro-nounced “you-row”) and the nacho supreme. The food is incredible with a capital L. The meat is slowly cooked on a spit and put into fluffy pita pockets. The large portions will satisfy any hungry person. The nacho supreme, with all the olives, cheese, sour cream, hot peppers, and guacamole, can be a meal in itself.

PRICE: The average meal is less than $5, a great price for the budget-conscious college student. The food is definitely worth the money.

On the whole, Mikey’s Gyros is a neat restaurant. On a scale of 1 to 4, I give Mikey’s a 3.1.

Vandals face Eagles

By ERIK ELO
Staff Writer

After two weeks on the road, the Vandals (5-2) will be back in the friendly confines of the ASUI-Kibbie Dome this weekend to face the Eagles of Eastern Washington University (3-2).

The game will feature quarterback John Friesz’s attempt to break the Big Sky Conference and the University of Idaho career passing yardage mark set by former Vandal quarterback Ken Hobart. Friesz needs just 138 yards to break Hobart’s record of 9,300 yards.

The Vandal offense will face an EWU defense ranked second in the nation in turnover margin. UI’s defense, coming off a strong performance against Montana State University, will be tested by a strong Eagle running game.

Saturday’s game features a matchup between a Vandal offense that has turned the ball over only six times in its five-game winning streak versus an Eagle defense that has intercepted 12 passes and recovered 10 fumbles in five games.

EWU is also second in the conference in scoring defense, allowing just 19.4 points per game.

The Eagle defense is led by freestarter Jason Elliott, who leads the Big Sky in interceptions with five, and outside linebacker DJ Sigurdsson, who registered 20 tackles in last week’s 43-26 Eagle thrashing of Idaho State University.

Last weekend the Vandal offense stifled the vaunted MSU rushing attack for 128 yards. The UI running defense will again be tested when they face the Eagle’s running tandem of Dominic Corr and Ken Thompson.

Corr rushed for 199 yards last weekend and leads the league in average yardage per game with 85.8 yards per contest. Thompson has rushed for 235 yards in four games. The Eagles piled up 337 yards rushing against ISU.

The record continues to fall for Friesz. Last weekend he completed 85 percent of his passes (28 of 33), establishing an NCAA Division 1-AA record for completion percentage. This weekend Friesz can break Hobart’s yardage mark and the 1-AA record for consecutive passes without an interception.

Friesz has thrown 153 passes without an interception. The record is 176, set last year by Jason Garrett of Princeton.

UI looks to improve against ISU and BSU

The Lady Vandals are back in Big Sky Conference play as they take on Idaho State University tonight and Boise State University Saturday night.

Both games will be held in Memorial Gym at 7:30 p.m.

The Lady Vandals, who are 13-7 overall and 4-4 in conference play, hope to avenge their early-season losses to ISU and BSU.

“We have to watch BSU’s outside hitters,” said University of Idaho Head Coach Tom Hilbert. “Our blocking has to be on.”

Earlier this season, BSU (7-1) defeated the Lady Vandals with their quick pace of play and hitters like Sandy Stewart and Debbie Handelman.

“We also have to look out for the setter dumping the ball over,” Hilbert said. “We didn’t do well in stopping that against BSU.”

Women runners travel to Boise

The Lady Vandals hope to play better and be more diverse in their attack.

"We want to play hard and have a good defensive game," Hilbert said.

Z-Fun radio (KZFM 106.1 FM) will be at tonight's game to help cheer on the Lady Vandals and will give away T-shirts and cassettes.

"We hope everyone comes out, especially after the football game Saturday," Hilbert said.

The women dashers will meet several conference teams, including Weber State College, University of Nevada-Reno, Montana State University and BYU.

UI women's Head Coach Scott Lorek noted that the course at Boise is flat, which is fortunate for his runners. He expects his team should have better finishing times on a flat course.

"We're not a good hill-running team," he said.

The UI golf course, which the team ran on last weekend, has more hills than most.

"Our home course is tough," Lorek said. "It's pretty and it's nice, but everyone hates it."

The men's cross country team will sit out of competition this weekend and prepare for an Oct. 28 invitational in Spokane.

UI men's Head Coach Mike Keller said he is adding several new workouts to his team's training to increase the team's fourth and fifth runner strengths.

Keller also wants to improve the running of Bernardo Barrios, UI's top runner. He said he hopes to keep Barrios within the top three runners in the conference for the District 7 meet.

The Big Sky Conference meet will run at the same time as the District meet, on Nov. 11. Keller said he hopes his team will be in top running condition by then.

"In four weeks they will have to run as good as ever," Keller said.

The timeless question, "How do you get a good job without experience, and how do you get that experience without a good job?"

The answer could be Microsoft's Co-op Program. At Microsoft, anything can happen. As a Technical Associate Co-op, you'll provide technical phone support to a variety of users of Microsoft software all across the U.S. On an average day, you may talk to a Midwestern housewife or an East Coast executive one minute, and Julia Child or an owner of a small software development company the next. If you are comfortable with word processors, spreadsheets, windows, BASIC, C, Pascal or MASM, this is a great opportunity for you to get real-world experience before graduation.

We're looking for students who want to prove something to themselves — that they've got the enthusiasm and motivation needed to make it with the world's leader in microcomputer software. Excellent command of the English language and great problem-solving skills are a must. Experience as a computer tutor or programmer is a definite plus.

Our paid co-op positions are full-time and last for a duration of nine months. Relocation assistance is available for non-local participants. Additional benefits include a competitive salary, membership in our local health club and software discounts. In fact, after you complete the nine month program, you'll get the ultimate discount on an IBM compatible or Macintosh computer (depending on group assignment) — it will be yours to keep!

Act now —

We're hiring for Winter and Spring.

We have a limited number of co-op positions, so contact your Cooperative Education Office by October 23 for more information about the program, including eligibility and the upcoming visit to your campus on November 15. Microsoft is an equal opportunity employer.
