The Alumni Are Boosting

“We are boosting the university” is the most enthusiastic thought which comes from alumni. It is a far different story than we heard in our parts of the state when the Vandals didn’t run up an impressive string of victories on the gridiron. “Our boys”, came down on alumni, no matter who they were, and if they did, and returned to their own businesses with a sustained interest in having done a big hit for old Alma Mater.

This fall Fudels didn’t stirle the Pacific coast to any great number. Coaches were chopped long before there is a different atmosphere in the ranks of prospects who want to keep the Vandals the legs. The Vandals were a proving ground, you see, for later engagements in some sections of the state. For “boy, wouldn’t it be nice” or “they wouldn’t be up to it, but it’s been honest in four or five different places. The Silver and Gold colors aren’t being struck at the first victory over Oregon State either.

Since the days of Silver, Fudels, Reut, and Hens-son the university has found it difficult to keep our own high school players in the state. The poly is a magnet. Idaho never composed of lightblades nor a products of farms, cities and lumber camps. For the past few years the con-development of the various sections in the state...

Changes in the rules governing women, all in the direction of allowing them more freedom, were announced at a meeting of women's group heads presided over by Mrs. Dean French, president of the Idaho Women's Club.

The new rules include:

- The elimination of the requirement that women must have a man as their sponsor.
- The removal of the restriction that women may not speak in public without a man present.
- The granting of permission for women to travel alone without a man as their escort.

These changes are aimed at giving women greater freedom in their daily lives and encouraging them to participate more fully in community activities.

The "big game" will be played with University of Washington on October 21. That is the only one where teams will be playing their full strength, but University of Minnesota on October 10, when Idaho will have its first conference game, will be the most enjoyable. The season opening game with Montana State is much anticipated.

North Central Conference.

North Dakota State will be the first game, October 3, at Fargo. Idaho fans of course hope the Vandal football equal.

"We don't want to win, we just want to play, is our motto," said Coach Bank. "We feel sure that if we play good we can compete with anyone." [0x0]
