UI student Benson runs for rep seat

By ANDREA VOST
Staff Writer

University of Idaho students are active in student government, but how often do college students run for state office?

Betty Benson is a UI graduate student working on her master’s degree in Geography. She goes to class, she has exams, she struggles with the every-day stress factors all students struggle with. What element differentiates her from other UI students? You won’t see any other graduate students running on the election ballot on Nov. 6.

Benson is running for Idaho Legislative Representative for District 5 on the democratic ticket. A student herself, and the mother of a student, quality higher education is a major concern. “I support higher standards in education starting in elementary school through high school. I think students should be required to have more science and math and tougher classes to be better prepared for college,” Benson said. “Education is important for the sheer pleasure of learning. The more you know, the more you know you don’t know.”

Benson has lived in District 5 (the five northern counties) over half of her life and currently lives in Moscow. She is married and has three children, one of which, James Benson, is a forestry student at the university. Communication between the administration and all the students is one of the problems Benson would like to see changed at the university.

“The administration tends to think that all students are either Greeks or in the dorms, when on this campus over half of the students live off-campus. These students are not represented or considered in any form of communication,” Benson said.

Notices on campus, bearings on issues and other events should be communicated to the off-campus students through other means than are being done currently Benson said.

At a pro-choice rally earlier in the week, Benson spoke on reproductive rights and clarified her pro-choice stand stating that politicians should not be making decisions about individual rights related to privacy and reproduction.

Though her political campaign has taken up much of her time this semester, she managed to keep up her studies and continue working toward her master’s degree in geography.

SAEs investigated for possible hazing

By M.L. GARLAND

An investigation is being conducted into allegations of pledge class hazing in the University of Idaho Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

“Our fully cooperating, both on-campus and off-campus,” SAE President Rob Alexander said. “As stated in a letter to be sent forth a re-stating of our policy and programs on campus, and are doing so.

The UI Student Advisory Services and the national SAE fraternity are conducting separate investigations. The allegations are involved in situations where the student is a member of the pledge class and centered on alleged complaints of sleep deprivation, verbal abuse and mental harassment.

In addition, the SAE national office has ordered the local chapter to cease all pledge class activities until the investigation is completed. According to University Communications Director Terry Maurer, a national representative visited the campus and the suspension of activities was a result of the visit.

Creek Adviser Linda Wilson is aware of the investigation, but said she is not all able to discuss the case.

“The University of Idaho has a zero tolerance policy on hazing,” Bruce Pittman, dean of Student Conduct, said.

Creech, who is being held in a Boise prison, has been given the death sentence for killing two people in Idaho and several others in California in the mid-70s. Although he has no possibility of parole, he wants to marry his Boise girlfriend, Sheryl Miller.

Prison officials will not allow the marriage on the grounds it poses a “security risk.” Creech is appealing their decision on the grounds that Creech’s constitutional rights are being violated.

Charn, who is also the ASUI Attorney General, worked as an intern for the undisclosed Boise law firm this summer and has signed a contract with the firm to begin work there following graduation.

About six weeks ago, Charnay called one of the partners at the law firm and told the partner that he had been assigned the Creech case through the Legal Aid Clinic.

Charn says Creech, who is being held in a Boise prison, has been given the death sentence for killing two people in Idaho and several others in California in the mid-70s. Although he has no possibility of parole, he wants to marry his Boise girlfriend, Sheryl Miller.

Judicial Council reviewed

By DAVID JOHANSON
Staff Writer

The University Judicial Council, which deals with discipline of students, has recently come under attack by ASUI Attorney General Dennis Charney.

Charney, who last week brought a brief before the Faculty Council argued that report on three amendments that would change the operating process of the UJC, says the current judicial system "obtains easy convictions against students which works well for the university, but poorly for the student."

Charney said that the title "judicial adviser" is a deceiving one to students because they go into the Student Advisory Services office ready to listen about an incident they were allegedly involved in and the "advisers" are actually the prosecutors.

"Easy convictions are obtained against them and they are then railroaded by the SAC to enter into another illegal agreed settlement," Charney said in the brief.

Charney would like to have an amendment to the Faculty-Staff Handbook that would include a burden of proof in which the council must be absolutely convinced of the student's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Charney said the judiciary council needs only probability of misconduct at this point to make a case against a student.

The brief also petitioned the council to "divest the University Judicial Council of its powers to make its own procedural rules," because such power is in an inconsistent and of legislative power by a judiciary.

The final petition by Charney to the council asks for the enactment of a set of procedures which "must be utilized by the SUA Office when it is involved in a student for disciplinary misconduct.

In response to Charney's brief and report, the Faculty Council has recommended to Ad Hoc committee to look at and scrutinize current UJC procedures and make suggestions for possible changes. The committee is made up of four faculty members and four students.

Myran Schreck, an associate professor of law at the university, is one of the faculty members on the committee. Schreck was also chairman of UJC for almost six years.

Students gear up for pre-registration

BY ANDY CHRISTENSEN
Contributing Writer

University of Idaho students will again enjoy the opportunity to preregister for classes.

According to Registrar Matt Telin, "96 terminals will be up and running" for registration beginning Monday, Nov. 12. Students may register from any of the mainframe terminal sites on the campus by following the printed directions available in any college dean's office.

Students should pick up a time schedule and a sample registration card to work out a schedule. With this, the student should see his or her adviser, according to Telin.

Preregistration advising began Oct. 25, and is to continue through the end of the preregistration period. Students should secure special departmental forms for courses which require that step; for example, private music classes. Registrar's instructions suggest selection of alternative courses in the event that a course closure or cancellation awaits a preregistering student, although it is possible to "fine tune" the schedule after the official preregistration period.

'We'll leave the system active just as long as we can — probably Jan. 1, 1991," Telin said. "But we'll have to run the official registration forms shortly after Christmas."

The system will be available 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday every week until the beginning of the spring semester.

Telin said preregistration for the fall semester was a great success, and commented that the ULC is one of only three universities using this type of mainframe registration process.

This semester, however, the alphabetical listings which only students are to register has been split over a five day period. The split is intended to produce "less terminal waiting," Telin said.

Only one alphabetical grouping per day is activated for preregistration.

The preregistration system is a cooperative effort between the Registrar's Office, Computer Services and Data Processing.

Alphabetical groupings are scheduled beginning Monday, Nov. 12 for students whose last names fall between "letters K through M," Tuesday for N through L, and Friday for names M through Q.

Exact procedures for the online course entry program are available in the preregistration booklet from the registrar's or student's office.

Student, Telly, said he had only one way to approach the preregistration: "Don't log off without pressing enter." If a student fails to get in without first confirming his or her courses, the course will not be entered into the system.

"A few students did last time," Telly said, "and that can cause problems."
Fifth ASUI senator resigns

The number of ASUI senators to resign this semester climbed to five yesterday after Sen. Steve Brooks turned in his letter of resignation Wednesday.

ASUI Vice President Mike Gotch received the letter Wednesday and announced the resignation at the senate meeting later that night.

According to his letter Brooks was unable to fulfill the job duties due to other commitments.

At the Wednesday night senate meeting, the constitution for the Idaho Student Lobby was ratified and $2,113 in dues were appropriated from the general reserve to make the ASUI official members of ISL. The dues reflect a 25 cent per student membership for which will be paid each year out of the ASUI budget.

ISL is an organization of Idaho universities which will help lobbyists to address higher-education needs in the Idaho senate.

According to Sen. Charles D'Alesio, ASUI's delegate to ISL, Idaho State University and Lewis Clark State College have already ratified the constitution and appropriated funds to pay for fees.

Changes in the constitution will limit two-year college ex-officio memberships meaning that Northern Idaho College and College of Southern Idaho will not hold veto power in the organization. Some concern was expressed by members of the senate since North Idaho College was a charter member of ISL when it originally started in the 1970s.

"We have no more obligation to them (NIC)," D'Alesio said.

AUI Vice President Mike Gotch, ASUI vice president, more than 1,000 students signed the petitions to place the referendum on the ballot.

As well as serving to place the referendums on the ballots, Gotch intends to use the petitions to bring the administration's attention to student feelings on the parking issue. The petitions state that those signing are against proposed plans for the university to charge for on street parking on several campus streets and also ask that students be allowed to purchase gold parking permits, currently available only to faculty and staff members.

The petitions will be photocopied and presented to President Elisabeth Zinsner by representatives of the ASUI Ad-Hoc Committee on Parking.

Any university is currently doing legal research into the idea of charging for on-street parking. If enacted, parking on Elm Street, Nez Perce Drive, Blake Avenue, University Avenue, Idaho Street,

Students cautioned to avoid campus computer virus

Students are being advised to use extra caution when booting up computers in the campus PC labs due to the threat of a computer virus in the area.

John Marten, a stereo lounge employee in the SUB, said he was told there is a virus in the area that has hit campus computers before. He said the virus is easily avoided by "cold booting" the computers.

Marten said students should turn off the power on the computer before starting to work. He said this will prevent the virus from spreading to the student's disk, if the virus is present.

According to Leo Stephan, computer lab manager, cold booting the computer, rather than booting up by hitting alternate, control and delete keys, is what he has always recommended.

He said the virus in the area is the Yale Alamosa virus. He said it is basically harmless, but can erase files on a disk if not detected.

Students said most labs on campus have virus scanners that can detect the virus, if students want to have them checked.

"We're just trying to be cautious," Marten said.
Senators should be responsible with student money

You're not told during the pastoral television commercial, as the rustling monk in the studio mid-western accent waxes about quality and commitment, that the SBIR Plan is the reason behind the ground-breaking Saturn automobile is that lethargic industrial giant, General Motors.

Chuck Brockway

Commentary

The Saturn division of GM was initiated in 1982 with a specific goal: whatever it takes, pull out the plugs, and build a small car better than the Japanese. Throwing conventional wisdom out the window, Saturn has made radical changes in the way management handles its workers. Managers don't manage from behind mahogany desks; they're on the plant floor, asking questions, talking with workers, who by the way, don't punch time clocks. Cars aren't assembled by disgruntled workmen holding on to their assigned pieces of plastic. Autonomous, self-selected "teams" of workers move along on a platform with the car as they put it together. And, perhaps most startlingly, the United Auto Workers will be involved in all aspects of the business.

To Japanese management, the techniques instigated by Saturn are second nature, but in America, they represent revolutionary changes.

An evolution is in order for GM and the UAW, but the odds favor the Japanese. Cars like the Honda Civic and Toyota Corolla have been honed to near perfection by the whiz-kid of market pres- sure. Cars sprouted from a corporation of a total lack of standing on a platform with the car as they put it together. And, perhaps most startlingly, the United Auto Workers will be involved in all aspects of the business.

Williams helping state progress

Editor:
Living in the state of Idaho, it is not difficult to realize that our state government has been doing an admirable job. Our economy is at a growing peak right now, and our education keeps improving. I think it is safe to say that Idaho is gaining more recognition nationally, and this is only going to grow in the future. I think that our state government is doing a great job, and I am looking forward to see how they continue to improve.

I don't believe that we can credit this success to the governor alone. Rather, I believe we need to credit the individuals who hold these offices. One of the individuals who has made a great contribution to the success of this state is our present state auditor, J.D. Williams. After Joe R. Williams retired following thirty years in the position of auditor, Williams was appointed by Gov. Andrus to fill the position. Since then, Williams has made great progress toward improving efficiency in the state, and making the government less expensive to run. Through strong management of the state's financial affairs, Williams has made a difference in the state government that will better prepare us for Idaho's second century. A Democrat, Williams has a wealth of experience that makes him a valuable member of the Idaho government. In the coming election, I urge Idahoans to vote for J.D. Williams for state auditor.

Books good sources for environmentally aware

By STEPHANIE BAILEY
News Editor

There has been a recent outburst of books dealing with different environmental topics and, although most students don't have enough time to sit down and read non-required readings, there are some good ones out on the market that might make interesting reading over break.

The book "Save Our Planet" by Diane MacKicham (published by Doubleday, $18.95) explores how humans can affect positive social changes, giving over 100 "quick and easy actions" to try. The book goes beyond environmental issues and explains food, hunger and agricultural issues, socially responsible shopping and investing, in addition to peace, non-violence and human rights issues. By covering a broad range of subjects, there should be something of interest for almost anyone interested in getting involved in an issue.

Two UCLA books published by Doubleday are also excellent sources of environmental information. "An Atlas of Planet Management" edited by Dr. Norman Myers ($18.95) includes 250 pages of wonderful full-color photographs and graphs which explain why things are the way they are by detailing biological and evolutionary backgrounds of problem areas around the world. The "State of the Art" by Lee Dunrell ($18.95) details eco-system relationships.
Anti-abortion laws to make birth control priority

Editor:
Any political candidate who claims that an abortion ban will cause women to kill themselves with coat hangers is either senile, ignorant, a liar or all of the above. He is senile if he does not remember that to Roe v. Wade in 1973 coat hangers were used because, among other factors, the Catholic and other churches prohibited members from using birth control. Not any more. Also, The Pill had just been introduced on the market and many women did not use it because it was either unavailable to them or else they were afraid of experimenting with such technology. Not today.

Next, the "candidate against coat hangers" is ignorant if he is unaware that birth control is widely available to everyone today through efforts of the following, safe-sex campaigns, public schools clinics and the whole "birth-control" movement.

Finally, the candidate is a liar if he says that abortion is not being used as a form of birth control right now. This means that in the event of an abortion ban, women will go to coat hangers instead of coat hangers. The pro-abortion candidate also says that rape and incest have to be considered. I agree; however, only one to two percent of the millions of abortions performed daily in the United States are due to rape or incest. The "candidate against coat hangers" is a senile, ignorant liar and should be aborted at the polls.

Benson interested in education issues

How would you like to have a voice in the Idaho Legislature? Is there an opportunity to elect one of their own to the Idaho House. Her name is Betty Benson.

Why should University of Idaho students be interested in Betty Benson as the Idaho legislator? The most obvious reason is that Benson has a vested interest in Idaho’s education system. As a graduate student teaching history in geography, a university employee, Benson has particular interest in the college students, education is by far her top priority. Benson realizes the importance of education in solving many of the problems facing the people of Idaho.

Benson supports access to education for all Idahoans, not just those who have won the lottery. As federal support for students declines, we must seek and elect those candidates who will renew a commitment to an educated citizenry. Benson is one of the few candidates in this election who truly understand the difficulties of paying for a college education along with the needs of the University of Idaho. She also has the commitment to make a difference for us.

When it came time for UI students to voice their concerns about parking and student fees to the administration, Benson was there. She is in touch with the campus community and she is not afraid to stand up for our students. Benson has worked with so many institutions competing for state control and the value of whose representatives is not willing to give in to those who wish to bludgeon the university’s flagging spirit.

Benson’s campaign for the Senate is one of the most active in the area. Benson may not have the financial status of her opponent, but she does make up for the difference with hard work. If elected, Betty Benson, already, you will probably find her at your doorstep some evening after class. Speaking of class, she is so knock on every door in Latah County before the election. At the same time, she’s going, I think she will do just that. Watch for her and ask her about the issues. You will get a straight answer — a rare commodity in politics today.

Betty Benson, University of Idaho Student, Latah County.

Scott not anti-gun person

Editor:
Rumor has it that I am some sort of gun-control freak. This is probably a result of a poll that was published by the National Rifle Association in its current issue of "Gun Digest." Please allow me to set the record straight.

The poll had an arbitrary grading system. My reply was actually given a low grade because I stated that I favor legislation to control the distribution of assault weapons. That does not mean that I am an anti-gun person.

As a career naval aviator I was in weapon systems engineering just pilot before going to war twice as a tactical fighter pilot. Before coming to the faculty of the University of Idaho in 1974 I served two more combat tours as the weapons officer (and security and external defense officer) of the USS Oriskany, an attack aircraft carrier. I own several guns, a rifle and a firearm, and I like to hunt. Obviously, I know a little bit about weapons, possibly even as much as some members of the National Rifle Association. I am aware of a number of members of that organization who do know a great deal about weapons. I am about small arms and the legal aspects of control of firearms and that is why I believe that the value of adult life is active duty in the U.S. Navy in support and defense of our country. In order to protect United States, I join them in support of its Second Amendment.

I hate war, and I deplore the uses to which assault weapons have been put in our society, which sometimes seems anything but a war. We need to do what we can to control the distribution of assault weapons. Too many people who would misuse them. To that end, whenever possible, I think it is important to me that such control has been, or can realistically be achieved with extant regulation. I will not favor legislation that would be redundant.

Let me cut the bottom line. I have no beef with the NRA, but assault weapons must be curtailed.

KUOI abusers press freedoms in ad

Editor:
In this age in which the American people (deal of freedom is constantly under attack, I feel fortunate to be in college. Yes, in an era in which women’s right to their own body, life and the right to free speech are under attack, it is good to see our campus is on the cutting edge of questions authority.

I am referring to KUOI’s radio program “Hipps vs. Car.” Their advertisements are right on the edge, two in particular stick in my mind. The first which was out last April has a picture of a bare-breasted woman with something attached to her breast (was it a beer bong? couldn’t tell). While the more recent flyer, which surfaced last week, had the picture of a Native American man with meat hooks through his pectorals. I assume this is a Native American man involved in a religious ceremony. The copying was so poor initially it is difficult to tell what is in the pictures.

I think that it is really great that KUOI uses these two images to advertise a music program. I think these images of a Native American in renegade and a bare-chested woman are really great. They do a good job of conveying what KUOI stands for.

If you would like to find out the subdue (or overt?) marginalizing of women and Native Americans. I mean it’s a nice way to portray my mother and sisters. And I am further impressed with the way KUOI dealt with the diversity of religious practices.

I saw your advertisements, and it was so very aware of the role of women in our society, non-male, non-status quo roles are regulated to occupy. Thanks much for reminding me that the ideas and laws of our society start here — in Boise, Salem, Sacramento or Washington, DC — they start with KUOI.

When I told a friend about your ad they responded, “You know, I really believe people have the right to say what they want.” I agree with that, and I also believe that members of the mass media (and members of college) have a responsibility not to abuse the power that they are given.

By your irresponsible objectification of Native Americans and women, I feel you have abused the power of the press.

From a legitimate radio station, I would hope for a more professional standard in the future.

Gatewood blinded by emotion

Editor:
When I read an article written by one of your staff writers on Oct. 23, I was absolutely shocked at the conclusions of the writer and even the right to speech are under attack, it is good to see our campus is on the cutting edge of questions authority.

The article, written by Chris Gatewood, was about the downfall of the Oakland Athletics. It contained complex numbers, strictly written on ugly emotion and every of the most successful teams in any sport that are not an A’s fan or a Red Sox follower, but that I am a pure baseball fanatic. I give credit where credit is due and well deserved for any team having had an exciting season. Unfortunately, I don’t have my own column to write a rebuttal against Mr. Gatewood to get the facts straight.

The Oakland A’s have enjoyed enormous team success. Yes, success. Why? Because a team doesn’t make three runs straight World Series appearances on luck alone. Individual. Even though Oakland has come away with one championship, this doesn’t mean they total losers by any means. Give me another point, especially to make three separate championship appearances. You won’t find that many, especially with the way KUOI dealt with the diversity of religious practices.

I saw your advertisements, and it was so very aware of the role of women in our society, non-male, non-status quo roles are regulated to occupy. Thanks much for reminding me that the ideas and laws of our society start here — in Boise, Salem, Sacramento or Washington, DC — they start with KUOI.

Tired of oriental food that looks like something your cat coughed up? Tired of paying high prices for miniscule amounts of grub? Tired of smelly waters, slow help and crowded restaurants where starvation comes before reservations? In short, do you need a change? What you need is a quick visit to Philippine Cuisine.

Philippine Cuisine, unlike your typical pseudo-oriental eatery, is owned and operated by Benoy and Dohla Advincula, who're both authentic Philippine cooks, and their experience shows. The foods offered are not only tasty and original, but are all carefully prepared with fresh and homemade ingredients.

The best time to visit Philippine Cuisine is on either a Wednesday or Saturday evening, when, for $6.99 per person, you can indulge in a buffet that includes salad, rice, noodles, steamed vegetables, specialty chicken, pork terriyaki kabobs, egg roll and dessert. The only thing missing from the table that you must buy separately is a drink of your choice, but you could always go my route and drink water (it's good for you).

The best thing about Philippine Cuisine is the food and the portions. On the first trip to the buffet, you'll be handed a plate so laden with goodies that you'll have difficulty totting it back to the table. The worst thing about the restaurant, however, is the lack of space. During most dining hours, the restaurant is merely cozy and comfortable, but during the rush periods, things can get downright cramped—but hey! That happens to every good restaurant, especially in a town with thousands of hungry college students.

Philippine Cuisine, located in Pullman just past Barbas pizza and just before Taco Time, may well be one of the brightest gems on the Palouse. A great restaurant is created not only by its food, prices and service, but also by the atmosphere and the interest of the owners towards customer satisfaction. Philippine Cuisine is a great restaurant by those standards and more. It may require a drive to get to Pullman, but believe me, you won't regret it. P.S. Try the home-made special sauce. It'll make you forget all about Chinese food.

Lynch Mob’s album neato

Review By JAY FORMAN
Staff Writer

Well, the waiting is over. Don Dokken’s solo album came out earlier this year, and another one you’ve been waiting for is finally here, The Lynch Mob’s ‘Wicked Sensation.’

You, know what I’m talking about, George Lynch is back in the music scene, and though the album is good, it’s not what you might expect.

The story is that Dokken broke up after the Monsters of Rock Tour some two years ago, and needless to say, the split was less than amicable. Don went his separate way, forming a totally new group, and George left the camp with Dokken drummer Wild Mick Brown, Bassist Jeff Pilson’s group, Flesh And Blood, we may see, but who knows?

George didn’t want to call the band ‘Lynch’ anything because all of that stuff happened with control of the Dokken name. He saw that The Lynch Mob was a name too cool to pass up. He got a bassist named Anthony Esposito from the L.A. music circuit, and he hired a singer named Ost Logan from Marc Ferrari’s band, Crying Shame. With the new looks, Lynch went into the studio.

He completed an album, When he came out, Elektra, their record company, told him to go back and put some more commercial songs into the mix. The original was too fast. So Lynch complied, and five months later we have an album.

Lynch Mob’s sound seems like they’re casual about what they do. The first song ‘Wicked Sensation,’ Logan asks Lynch to ‘Talk to me, man!’ in a bridge. This one act ways a lot about what Lynch is trying to do here, he’s trying to put forth the effort without worrying about what people are going to think.

When Lynch was in Dokken, the effort was a polished sound, and though Dokken’s music was great at times, it seemed a little hit scared. Lynch Mob doesn’t force anything, and that attitude helps as well as hurts them. It helps in that it makes the songs different from the rock and roll regularities. Logan’s lyrics are here to tell you how it is. Logan must have some serious attitude going for him, because he writes and sings with a sureness that I don’t see very often. He knows his limitations, and he never stretch it. It hurts them in the fact that as Elektra pumped out the songs, don’t have the rock radio sound that most bands need to sell records at times. It’s a smart move on the part of the people know who George Lynch is, that fact alone will probably sell half a million copies, but this attitude is cool, and that’s the matter to me, that should be all that matters to you, too.

The songs are well played. Standouts being stuff like “River of Love” and “No Bed of Roses” another hint of Dokken-ability here, and I suppose that when you are used to a guitar style, it’s impossible to change things completely. I like Logan’s voca- lics, he sounds like what Don Dokken should have done like, Mick Brown’s drumming prowess is prevalent here. As usual, he is in control man- iac and his drums accentuate the music. That’s the way it should be done. His back-up vocals are good, and not super-human, the way Dokk- en’s vocals were. It seems more real here, like four guys playing instead of effected after effect.

I’m not going to tell you to buy Lynch Mob if you’re looking for a Dokken clone, because that’s what this band is definitely not. Rock-n- rollers out there be prepared. This is a good album in a lot of ways, but only time will tell if they stay alive. I think they will. The reason is that they seem to have a longer life for the long haul, and not a time bomb like Dokken was. Check these guys out.

The book is easy to read and small enough to carry with you through the grocery store.

The Vandals will be led by their secondary which has been spectacular. Through the last two games they have racked up 15 passes and have 17 interceptions for the season, tops in all of Co. A. Charlie Crow leading the parade with four picks. “I’m really pleased with the improvement of the defense as a whole.”

Defensively the Vandals will present a variety of problems for the NAU defense which is ranked last dead last in the conference in total defense. The Vandals have used an even mix of the run and pass to score 151 points in the last three games. The Vandals continue to be led by the rushing of Devon Pearce, the passing of Steve Nolan and the receiving of Kaye Dunn. Dunn leads all of 1-AAA with 73 catches for 920.

Swap a big success

By TOM BITHELL

Tuesday night the University of Idaho Student Union Building was a little busier than usual.

That was the night the UI Out- door Program, which is a non-profit organization, has been housing the sale bi-annually for the last 15 years to make room for new equipment. Other retail- ers were invited to make a better sale for buyers. “We’re trying to get buyers and sellers of outdoor equipment together at one time,” Beiser said. The last night the Outdoor Program sold both the indoor center and rental center, comes out of the year and buys grants later the ASU. One such grant was given to the program last spring to expand the rental center by adding downhill ski. Hopefully this will be ready to rent by Christmas break, Beiser said.

“Tamp down and up on what we’re here for — to meet the demand,” he said. “You’ll be able to rent (shoes) for a whole week and the price of one day at a resort.”

Fencing gives different look

H ow about a sport that reminds you of those missing scenes from the movie “The Pirates of Pen- zance”? At Idaho they now offer a sport that might not be as dramatic but; nonetheless, offers the participants the chance to use something like a sword called a foil.

The sport I’m referring to is fencing and it’s a sport that is relatively unknown throughout the United States but is gradually gaining popularity here at the University of Idaho. This semester the fencing team officially gained club status and is being a physical education class for the last five years.

“We asked for $2,200 from the ASU, but we got around $1,200,” said the head coach John Spinosi. “We were pleased with the amount.”

Here is a brief rundown on a few of the rules you score points in upper torso, mean- ing the chest and stomach. Points are not counted for the arm, head or leg areas. Hitting an opponent with your foil is called touch and each touch is awarded one point. Most matches last three minutes and three touches usually decides the winner. Some matches last as long as five minutes with five touches winning. If the amount of touches is not reached within the frame time then whatever has the most touches is declared the winner.

“The sport is a lot more grueling than it sounds,” Spino- si said. “It takes a lot of effort to get a touch.”

The fencing class at Idaho is run on two different levels. There is the beginning class which has 15 students followed by an intermediate class which has 10 students. Academicly the class is hard to improve because there is nothing after the intermediate course. He went on to say that the members keep on taking the inter- mediate course. Usually 20 to 30 people try out for the team and they eventually get weeded out Spinosi said.

“This sport is tougher than people may think it is.” Spino- si said. “This sport is very tough mentally because you are always thinking of ways to beat your opponents. There is a lot of strategy involved.”

This Saturday the team has their first major meet in Spok- ane at the West Central Activi- ty Center. Idaho will be led by their top two fencers Gary Ste- vens and John Laguerre. Ste- vens has the most experience with five years and Laguerre has three years. Both will com- pete in the open division.

“I think Stevens has a great chance of winning,” Spinosi said. “I’m not anywhere near the talent level of Gary.”

Spinosi will also compete in the open division and Fencing writer and Chris Kochan, club president, will compete in the novice class.

Idaho volleyball team making final push for playoffs

By JOE MALLET
Staff Writer

I spoke of Idaho’s Dr. Jekyll/ Mr. Hyde transformation in an article a few weeks ago, and that could not have applied better to this team.

Tom Hilbert, Idaho’s second year coach, has pulled his team, sometimes with hair, from the bottom of the Big Sky Conference to one of the top in the NCAA, according to the Northwest Regional Poll. No one knew that he would be leading the Vandals to the NCAA, but even if by one major let down, Idaho does not make the championship tour- nament this year, you can rest assured that the current frac- ture there in seasons to come.

Idaho’s six freshmen and two sophomores who were brought up from the junior varsity will be the cornerstones of championship teams to come. Even if Hilb- ert failed to recruit for three years, Idaho would be a force. But with more of his magical recruiting, greatness is available.

1999 NCAA Poll just came out, and Idaho is ranked 10th in the nation. According to Idaho’s volleyball sports information director, Tom McAfee, this is the first time ever that Idaho has been ranked.

Idaho’s close conference competition, Eastern, Washington- ton University, and Weber State College are no where to be found on the list. All of the coaches that voted in this poll know that Idaho is much better than their record shows.

Idaho State University, Uni- versity of Montana and Boise State University occupy sixth, seventh and eighth respectively, and Idaho, who just took the place of Fresno State, is currently tenth.

Idaho’s roster has not changed since the season opening loss to Gonzaga, but a different Idaho team beat Gonzaga in four, a cou- ple of months later. A good illustration of this point is Idaho’s record. Right now it runs 11-14 overall and 6-4 in conference play. That sta- tistic is completely misleading.

According to the Idaho’s sta- tistics, they have won nine of eleven matches.

This transformation from a pack of zeroes into a team of heroes is much as the players as it has been the coaching. The way I see it, two things are responsible for this bipolar swing.

First, we had the youth and inexperience caused by an inex- perienced team. The six freshmen and two sophomores on the team showed flashes of brilliance that made their mistakes all the more frustrating. Now, they have settled down and started to play consistently.

It is scary to think what fresh- men like Nancy Wicks, who has been ranked in the top 20 in the nation for blocks, will develop in the next three years.

Jessica Parkett, Heather McE- neen, Dee Porter and Kris Little, just to name a few of Idaho’s youth, are already mature play- ers. They will be playing together for at least two more seasons. You don’t have to be Jimmie the Greek to figure out this future.

Secondly, all of the new faces on the team this year had made it hard for the team to work together well. Everyone has to get used to not only the new team, but their new teammates as well. Now, after 25 matches and a couple of months of practice, everyone is starting to mesh.

There have been a few constants this year and both of them deserve mentioning. Coach Tom Hilbert and Karen Thompson have maintained high intensity all season, through all the ups and downs.

Oliver looks to extend football career in NFL

By CHRISTOPHER GATEWOOD
Staff Writer

They often say in college football that no matter where you go to college, if you're good enough for the NFL, the scouts will find you.

Senior cornerback Charlie Oliver from the Vandals sure hopes this is true in his case. "I sure hope I get drafted," Oliver said after practice Tuesday. "It's been a dream of mine to someday play in the NFL. I just hope I get a shot."

Getting drafted and getting playing time in the NFL isn't easy. Right now there is only three former Vandals in the NFL and only offensive lineman Mark Schreier of the Washington Redskins is getting substantial playing time.

"I figured by now that John (Friesz) would be playing," Oliver said. "Seeing that makes me realize how hard it's going to be."

Oliver came to Idaho from Ferri's High School in 1986 and red-shirted. As a red-shirt freshman in 1987 he started the last four games after the starter at the time went down with an injury. He played well enough to get an interception and four pass deflections.

In 1988 he added three interceptions and in 1989 he had his biggest year as a Vandal when he had seven interceptions and 83 tackles. He received numerous honors, including runner-up for Big Sky Defensive player of the year to Montana's Tim Haus, and was voted an honorable mention All-American by the "Football Gazette."

"Charlie is as good as it gets in this league," Smith said. "He's been as consistent the whole time he's been here."

All this isn't too bad for a guy that didn't start in high school until his senior year and whose best sport used to be baseball. Oliver, who is from San Diego, grew up playing baseball. He moved to Spokane his freshman year in high school where he also picked up football. But it wasn't until his senior year that his talent on the gridiron began to show through.

"It just never seemed that I was never in the right situation in high school," Oliver said. "Everytime I thought I was about to get some playing time a senior would step in front of me."

When he did get his chance he made the most of it. As a senior he gathered five interceptions on the season, was an All Greater Spokane League and an All-State pick and was voted to play in the Washington State East-West Shrine Game. In baseball he was All-GSL pick as an outfielder in both his junior and senior years. But after high school it was football he decided to pursue.

At one time baseball was my best sport but know that since I've been in college it has definite- ly become football," Oliver said. "After high school I discontinued thoughts of baseball because the atmosphere of playing college football is so exciting. You have people cheering for you all the time. Working your way up in the minor leagues is no fun.

So far in 1990 Oliver hasn't been quite as spectacular to the naked eye. Nonetheless, he's had a fine season. With 48 tackles.

Dahlquist takes a new role

By MATT LAWSON
Sports Editor

When looking for a leader most people visualize a verbal, take charge kind of person. Vandal tight end Scott Dahlquist is the exception to the rule. The senior from Hyndam, Wash., likes to lead by keeping the team relaxed and helping the younger players gain confidence.

"As far as being a leader, I am not really a rah-rah guy. I guess I just try to keep the team loose," Dahlquist said. "I am more team oriented."

Vandal head coach John L. Smith agrees that not every leader has to fill the stereotypical mold. "There is a thing from time to time to have all type of personalities," Smith said. "He's (Dahlquist) more of the type of guy that keeps people loose. He's more of a happy-go-lucky, jake with the guys type of leader."

Dahlquist's background is "It didn't start as a leader or I thought that he would be the normal type of leader."

After graduating from high school in 1986, Dahlquist went to the Air Force Academy Prep School for one year and was heading toward the Air Force Academy.

"The only reason I was at the academy was that I wanted to fly," Dahlquist said. "But it really wasn't worth it just to fly."

Dahlquist decided not to progress to the academy the day before he was supposed to start his academy career.

"I did pretty well there (at the academy) and I liked it," Dahlquist said. "But I just wasn't ready to go into the academy."

After his late decision, Dahl- quist put himself in a difficult situation as far as getting a schola- rship at another university. "I was kind of up in the air because it was late in July," Dahl- quist said. "But coach Gilbertson (former Idaho head coach Keith Gilbertson) called me up and offered me a half-scholarship and I took it."

In high school, football was actually not the Idaho tight end's favorite sport. "In high school basketball was my favorite sport," Dahlquist said. "But I knew if I wanted to get a college scholarship I had to concentrate on football."

Dahlquist grabbed all-state honors his senior year in both basketball and football. He came to Idaho as an outside linebacker, but moved to tight end during spring football prac- tice in 1988. This move left Dahl- quist with a lot more responsibility at the multiple responsibility position of tight end. However, Dahlquist enjoyed the move to offense.

"It is kind of a fun position," Dahlquist said. "There is a lot demanded of you. You have to block a 260-pound defensive end on one play and then you have to run a pass pattern against a 180-pound defensive back on the next play."

Smith thinks Dahlquist has the athletic ability to overcome both obstacles. Please see DAHLQUIST page 15-

"He's got talent," Smith said. "He's big enough to block but he's not a slug-foot. He can get out and run a good pattern and he's got good hands." The Vandal running attack has taken on a new dimension this season and Dahlquist has played a major role in this positive addition.

"It's kind of weird what kind of gratification you can get from blocking," Dahlquist said. "I'm running backs appreciate it. It shows that they are a versatile athlete...."

Smith agrees that Dahlquist has helped a great deal with the emergence of the running attack.

"When he wants to be he can be devastating," Smith said. "He's our best blocker at tight end. He can be the best tight end in the league when he wants to be." Dahlquist is somewhat surp Dahlquist has caught 45 passes in his career, including 26 this year, for 616 yards and four touchdowns.

Dahlquist still has a positive outlook on the season, but when the season ends he will have no regrets on his career as a Vandal.

"What more can you ask for, really?" Dahlquist said. "I have a good feeling about playing here for three years — playing and contributing."

"Charlie is a great cover guy but I bet he makes the NFL. He'll be a 6-1,190 and his ability to make big plays is good enough." Dahlquist is a 6-4, 205-lb. receiver who has played in 31 games for NAU.

Dahlquist was named to the Mountain West Conference All-Star Game, which will be played on April 26. The game is being held at the Mountain West Conference headquarters in Las Vegas.

Dahlquist is a junior majoring in business administration.

This weekend event will include meetings, displays, livestock and dairy judging, and special attractions during the football game Saturday followed by a barbecue after the game.
The Agricultural Consulting Council, which advises agricultural students of academic extension programs, will be holding its annual meeting all day in the SUB ballroom. The meeting is open to invited alumni and guests, faculty of the College of Agriculture and administration.
Displays will be shown Friday and Saturday featuring research done by chemistry, home economics and the College of Agriculture students. The displays will be found around the College of Agriculture, the SUB Ballroom, the Administration Building, and the Vandal Lounge.
The Black and Tridge club will be holding two separate livestock and dairy judging contests Satuday. Livestock will be judged at 9 a.m., and dairy will be judged at 11 a.m. The club is expecting between 300 and 350 4-H and Future Farmers of America students from all over the state.

Introductions will be made shortly before the football game on Saturday. The donors of the steers for the Steer-of-the-Year fund-raiser will be named. The fund-raiser consists of feeding the steers for a certain amount of time and then selling them. The funds brought in from the sales will go into scholarships for the College of Agriculture and athletics.
For fun, frisbees will be thrown into the crowd during the last quarter of the football game.
The Agricultural Student Affairs Council will be holding a barbecue at the Agricultural Engineering Laboratory after the football game until 6 p.m. The barbecue is the Ag SAC’s main money maker. They are expecting 600-700 guests. Tickets will be sold as the door for $4, and everyone is welcome.

Theme set for MLK Day

BY DINA NISHEK
Senior Staff Writer
"The View From The Mountains Edens and Realities" is the theme for the Martin Luther King—Idaho Human Rights Day celebration in Boise for the university and the Moscow commu-ity.
The theme was inspired by a King speech on the high ideals society should aim for in regard to human relations, and the reality of how close society is to realizing these goals according to Walter Husdon, a commemoration committee member.
The committee is composed of students, faculty and community members in an ad-hoc manner to tackle the organizational needs of the celebration.
Funds for the activities planned by the committee come from the ASUI and the university.
"We are hoping that ASUI productions will pool some of their lecture funds with ours for a big-names speaker," Bruce Wolllburg, a committee member said.
Wollenburg said ASUI Productions has been contacting booking agencies to get a known name speaker for the keynote speech.
The committee is considering Cesar Chavez, a native American speaker. Farmer was part of the early civil rights movement and the founder of the Congress of Racial Equality.
"He has not been booked yet, but he is our number one choice right now," Wollenberg said.

Cesar Chavez, a native American speaker, and Nat Harnett are being considered as the keynote speaker. Rastine work-eds as a producer with NBC news and interviewed Martin Luther King Jr.

Much of the plans hinge on the security of a keynote speaker, but numerous events on campus around the weekend, will include poster and library displays, a candlelight march, a reenactment and keynote speaker, a dance, films and distorsion panels are being prepared.

The celebration officially begins with a march on the University of Idaho campus on Jan. 21.

"Tentatively, there will be an interfaith religious service with the Cavalry Baptist Choir, then an introduction and a brief speech."

Greeks treat local children

By KALISTA BARCLAY
Staff Writer

Four Greek houses joined the children of Moscow, Troy and Pullman for Halloween festivities this past week. More than 70 children and parents were joined by the members of Delta Tau Delta at Robinson Lake Park Saturday. The children were from local elementary schools. The members of Delta Tau Delta assisted in pumpkin carving, distributing candy and tractor-pulled hayrides.

According to Jeff Jacquith of Delta Tau Delta, the house was approached by Dan Markus, park ranger at Robinson Lake Park about the idea to help with the kids.

“We just kind of jumped on it,” Jacquith said.

Tuesday, members of Sigma Chi, Phi Gamma Delta and Kappa Gamma sorority joined forces to treat children from Friends Unlimited to Halloween traditions. Friends Unlimited is a local Big Brother/Big Sister organization sponsored by the United Way. Twelve to 20 children began by trick-or-treating at the Kappa house followed by a walk next door to be thrilled by a haunted house put on by the Phi Iota house. The evening ended with pumpkin carving with the members of Sigma Chi. The pumpkins were donated by local grocery stores.

“This has become a traditional, annual event for the three houses involved, and the children look forward to it eagerly as well,” Brian Houshian of Sigma Chi said.

Sponsors provided everything from ice cream to pizza for the decorations.

“Mom and I stuff (of the residence hall) gave us all the aluminum cans they collected for a week so we could recycle them and use the money to buy decorations and candy,” Clark said.

The event started as an area project that is generally a community service of some sort. The Theophylus Tower is considered an accepted area for projects. “We opened up the basement to other halls so they could get in their program as well,” Clark said.

Dennis Crow, chairman of the basement, it became obvious that there were many different attitudes as to how a haunted house should be approached. Some kids took great joy in raking right in, while others had to be persuaded. Then there were those children who could not attend either their dad’s hand and weren’t going through that tunnel regardless of what was involved.

Even though they may have waited at one point, just about every kid had a smile on his face when he left the tower at the end of the evening.

speech by the keynote speaker,” Patty Crow, UI student and a coordinator of the committee, said.

The committee hopes professors will incorporate human rights discussions into their lectures and in-class activities the Tuesday after the holiday. That evening there will be a candle-light march from Friends Square to the SUB, then the keynote address. Crow hopes to have a multi-cultural music concert that will include the UI Jazz Choir and Band.

Thursday’s plans tentatively include a cultural evening with native American story teller Dayton Edmonds from Newarchie, Wash.

“We are also looking into having various or multicultural readings and artistic displays, too,” Crow said.

Crow emphasized the goal of broadening people’s cultural horizons through the celebrations.

“We would like to have some racially provoking skits or readings,” Crow said.

She hopes to involve the theater department and work some skits into the week’s events.

Other activities the group is working on include a musical to be broadcast and readings on KUID-FM and an international music dance.

“They basically said get off the case or don’t come back,” Charney said. “They forced me into a choice and I chose.”

Charney sent the firm a letter this week stating he would not drop the case and therefore would not be associated with the firm anymore.

“I have decided not to dump my client merely because he is unpopular,” Charney said. “The firm gave me a lot of training this summer and now they have provided me with a lesson in legal ethics.”

“It’s not fair for them to dictate my academic career. I’m not an employee. I am a third year law student getting an education,” he said. “I see myself as being wrongfully terminated, but I’m not interested in retaliating against them.”

Charney said he could turn the firm in to the Idaho State Bar Association or pursue legal action, but he is not interested in damaging the firm’s reputation.

CHARNEY said the sensitivity surrounding the Creech marriage case stems from the intense public dislike for the man and the feeling that allowing the marriage would be “codifying” the criminal.

“The is real unpopular and people just don’t want to see this killer get married,” Charney said.

But Charney said Creech’s constitutional rights are being infringed by the prison board that will not allow the marriage and Charney feels the court will agree with him.

“Eventually the case is a winner, I’m convinced of that,” Charney said. According to Charney, even if he wasn’t convinced the case is a winner, the opportunity to battle Idaho’s solicitor general, Lynn Thomas, if the case goes to trial is a terrific opportunity for any law student.

“This is an opportunity that doesn’t present itself to just any one,” he said. “I feel confident. He doesn’t intimidate me.”

The next action on the case will be Nov. 7, when Charney will be arguing against the state’s motion to dismiss the marriage case.

As for Charney’s future, he said his options are to either begin the search for another job or make plans to continue his education next fall. He said he would like to pursue an advanced degree in litigation at Emory Law School at Atlanta.

Chlamydia dangerous, hard to detect

Have you ever waited a long time to see the Nurse Practitioner at Student Health? Undoubtedly, the answer is yes. Well, it could be that some coupling is being done with a patient who has chlamydia. Believe me, chlamydia is not a beautiful flower; it is a sexually transmitted disease (STD) akin to the "Silent Disease." It is rapidly becoming a major public health menace.

Chlamydia is sinister because it often goes undetected for months or even years. You may have a new partner, or be happily married and cannot comprehend where this disgraceful problem came from. Its symptoms are often mild and/or not apparent at all. It is rapidly becoming a major public health menace. Rarely fatal, chlamydia can have some devastating effects if untreated. It is the nation's most prevalent STD.

World-wide, there are approximately 500,000 diagnosed with chlamydia and 2 million affected by the blindness from it. Over half the 500,000 males affected with genital infection in the testicles) have it due to chlamydia in the United States. More than 200,000 women are hospitalized each year for pelvic infection (PID) and another 1 million are treated as outpatients.

Diana Kottkey
Family Nurse Practitioner

There are over 11,000 women becoming sterile per year and 3,600 per year have tubal pregnancies. There are 155,000 infants born to women with chlamydia each year. Over 70,000 develop conjunctivitis (infection in the mucous around the eyes), 30,000 get pneumonia. There is great risk of spontaneous abortion and stillbirth in women with chlamydia.

Three million Americans have chlamydia or its consequences each year at a cost of over $1 billion. This is an epidemic.

What are the signs and symptoms of chlamydia?
1. No symptoms at all
2. 15-60 percent of men have no symptoms
3. 10 percent of men have no symptoms
4. Males
   a. Inflammation and discharge of the urethra
   b. Burning with urination
   c. Inflammation of the testicles (can cause sterility)
  5. Rectal/proctitis (anal inflammation in homosexuals)
  6. Females
   a. Discharge from the vagina
   b. Abnormal vaginal bleeding
   c. Abdominal pain and pelvic inflammatory disease (can cause sterility)
   d. Infants-Newborns
   e. Eye infection
   f. Pneumonia

Sexual partners are unwittingly infected. How can we stop the spread of this frightening problem? The answer is simple:

- Use of condoms by men
- Use of diaphragms by women

Ask your health care provider to test you for chlamydia if you are sexually active. It's a small price to pay.

If you have any questions to ask Nurse Fosberg, please leave them in the comment box at the Student Health Center.

Now is the time for flu immunization

Question: Nurse Fosberg,
Do I need a flu shot and what is the best time of the year to get it?

Response:
Well, sweetheart, as you know last winter we had the worst flu epidemic in recent times. And hon- ey, if you do catch the flu this season you should get the immunization in mid-October through November to give you optimum protection. Faculty, staff and students may get their flu shot Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for $6 at the Student Health Center.

I expect to see you then!
Nurse Fosberg

>PRAYER

Itm page 4

Both the U.S. Constitution and the State of Idaho Constitution, based upon these opinions, the Idaho ACLU decided to publicly challenge the UI commencement service in the media. It was only after we decided to challenge the policy that the UI administration indicated a sudden willingness to re-evaluate its prayer policy. Students at UI come from diverse cultures and creeds. We have numerous students who are of the Hindu, Buddhist, Hebrew or Moslem faiths. Many students are agnostic, atheist, humanist or simply atheistic toward urbanized religion. The implosion of prayer upon a captive audience at commencement is nothing less than cultural and religious chauvinism. It is time for us to respect each other's views and celebrate the richness of diversity.

I greatly appreciate the letter from Mr. Zinner and ask her for final

Such a contention is unfounded and ignores the seriousness of the act involved. Also, the author's apparent animosity towards the two women belittled any serious discussion of the real issues.

Third, Mr. Charney was sorely mistaken when he said that speaking in a Southern drawl added an air of ignorance to Ms. Wilens. Too many people in this country believe it or not Mr. Charney, all Southerners are not illiterate. Nor is the Terrill Burof T. Justice's character in the film "Cannibal Run." In my opinion, Southern students are vastly more educated than anyone who believes in such stereotypes can achieve. The UI/ASUI are very different than anyone who believes in such stereotypes can achieve. The UI/ASUI are very different than anyone who believes in such stereotypes can achieve.

The final conclusion of this article as a "Guest Opinion" by the newspaper is highly irresponsible. The failure of the author to understand his purpose in describing the controversy in such graphic, yet poorly written detail. The passage provided absolutely no insight into the problem and, in fact, added nothing to the story. In an article addressing student concerns this language merely detracted from the seriousness of the problem. Second, why did Mr. Charney, a third-year law student, contended that any pun-ishment handed out for "our hero's act of battery" is contin-gent on his choice of victims?

A's Iron page 6 down turn.

Meanwhile, Oakland has stayed on top, but Mr. Gatewood doesn't see this as a blow. Instead of informing us of the Series, he let his emotions get in the way. Not very responsible for a reporter.

I know Mr. Gatewood doesn't know anything about baseball because Oakland is a team. When both Hendersons', Canseco, McCarthy, and Eckersley went down for a few games, the team never skipped a beat. Players such as Wells, Gallego, Quirk, Lansford and Blankenship came to the forefront and made clutch plays and hits.

The comment on Ricky Henderson as the cocklest player in baseball is hard to swallow. The man plays hard every day and is regarded by most baseball enthusiasts and critics as the best lead-off hitter of all time. Yes, he does have a lot of flash, but also a lot of character. He simply produces and it does benefit the team.

It is too early to call the 'A's' a dynasty, but surely they're a great team. You cannot compare the 'A's' with the Denver Broncos because the 'A's have tossed the campaign. I'd rather be in Denver's shoes than Cleveland's.

Whewater happened to Los Angeles after their "lucky" year? To me, it wasn't luck, the Dodgers won on emotion, determination and course of course, Orel Hersheiser. He had a truly great year and, I respect that and what the team has accomplished.

I do congratulate the Cincinnati Reds for a job well done. Strong pitching will always silence hitting. No other team sport offers the same basic contact as football. The pitcher vs. the hitter, everything starts here no matter how you look at it. The Reds won this duel and captured the title. I think the biggest question now is what will the Reds be back for the 1991 World Series against the awesome 'A's.'

Mr. Gatewood should do the University of Idaho baseball team a favor by not writing anything about them. He should stick to Division II, college football because it's the only things he seems to know anything about.
