UI hands down sanctions to SAEs

By M.L. GARLAND
Senior Staff Writer

The University of Idaho withdrew its recognition of the University of Idaho chapter of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity last week after supporting sanctions imposed by the Greek organization governing boards over allegations of hazing.

UI Student Advisory Services and the National SAE Fraternity conducted investigations concerning allegations of sleep deprivation, mental and verbal abuse, and sexual abuse of the 19-member pledge class.

Sanctions were issued by the UI Interfraternity Council Nov. 15 after SAE chapter officials refused to discuss the allegations at a meeting with Dean of Student Advisory Services Bruce Pitman, Greek Advisor Linda Wilson, IFC and Panhelenaic Council presidents and alumni representatives the day before.

"The investigations confirmed the hazing charges and we found some evidence of minor physical abuse, which occurred during the chapter's pledge class activities," Pitman said in a press release issued Nov. 20.

SAE nationals have imposed an alumni commission status on the chapter, which is included in the university sanctions, according to both SAE President Robert Alexander and Pitman in an interview Monday. The chapter's national representative was unavailable to comment at this time.

"The Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity's nationals initial reaction is to create an alumni trusteeship which will last as long as two years," Pitman said.

University withdrawal of a fraternity's recognition, simply stated, means the UI SAE chapter will not be permitted to participate in rush for freshmen or use university facilities.

To apply for university reinstatement, the chapter must fulfill the first two of seven sanctions, which includes meeting several requirements.

The SAEs must create an alumni board of control and an active chapter alumni advisory board.

This board, designed by the SAE nationals and the university, will attend chapter meetings and work with local officials to place items ranging from pledge class education to social activities.

Control of the UI SAEs chapter, the actual house property and facilities, will be held by the alumni commission, Alexander said. In order for members to obtain the charter, they must meet all the requirements of the sanctions.

They will also sponsor campus wide programs and chapter awareness weeks dealing with hazing and other fraternity concerns such as alcohol awareness as a form of community service.

A nationally known speaker will be brought in on the topic of hazing, according to Pitman.

I hope we can assist the greek region in this process," Pitman said.

UI hosts college bowl

By DAVID JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The annual University of Idaho College Bowl tournament will be held Saturday in the Student Union Building.

The tournament, entitled "The Varsity Sport of the Mind," kicks off at 9:30 a.m., and begins with a brief orientation session.

The teams will be playing in a double-elimination format.

The College Bowl is an academic competition game in which teams of four players compete in answer questions from a wide range of subjects in timed matches. The winning team, in addition to being the university's varsity squad, will receive a plaque and a College Bowl championship t-shirt. The team placing second will receive a plaque.

Idaho's winning team will represent the university at the five-state regional tournament to be held in March at Oregon State University. The winner of the regional tournament will go to the national finals.

In addition to winning the regional championship, the University of Idaho College Bowl Team has traveled to several states for the national play-offs. In 1987, the university's team competed in a nationally televised championship match.

Judy Wallins, director of the Tutoring and Academic Assistance Center, said teams wanting to register for the tournament need to fill out a registration form at the TAAC and pay a $5 entry fee. The registration deadline is Thursday. Individuals wishing to be placed on a team can register at the TAAC for a $1 fee.

College Bowl tournament officials will include several faculty and staff members. A practice session will be held at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. on Tuesday. The tournament is open to any UI students who wish to participate. For more information, contact Wallins at the TAAC.

Plans are in the works to boost KUOI's wattage from 50 to 100 watts, according to station manager Brent Anyan.

"We're looking at increasing the wattage so people can have their souls revived by KUOI," Anyan said.

KUOI's 50-watt transmission can currently be received throughout most of the University of Idaho campus and some of Moscow. Doubling the wattage would "fill in some reception holes" that 50 watts cannot fill and would extend KUOI's reception area, he said.

"We already have a transmitter that can broadcast up to 100 watts," Anyan said. "All we have to do is turn on the dial." However, Anyan continued, it is more complicated than that. Before KUOI can boost its wattage it must get written permission from KIQV-TV in Spokane which transmits its signal to Moscow on a frequency close to KUOI's, he said.

"They worried we might interfere with their signal to Moscow, but we shouldn't be on our frequency," Anyan said.

Staying on its designated frequency leads to another matter. Anyan said KUOI must deal with before boosting its wattage — having its engineer log more hours at KUOI.

"KUOI needs an engineer up here more often than there is now," he said.

KUOI shares an engineer with the media center and the UI's sub-systems. Because transmitter problems can occur at anytime, Anyan said it would be much more comfortable with KUOI's daily operations if an engineer was around more often.

Boosting the wattage would also enable more students who live off campus to pick up KUOI's signal.

"This is the first place I've been with a true campus radio station and I can't even pick it up because I live more than three blocks away," UI student Bob Holt said.

Holt has heard of talkshows on KUOI, but said he cannot participate in them because he cannot pick up KUOI's signal.

"I'd like to hear KUOI and what they're saying so I could either agree or disagree with it," Holt said.

But Holt may have to wait awhile. Anyan said, while the extra wattage would not cost any more than preventing another 50-watt light bulb, the engineer's salary would have to be worked into KUOI's budget which comes out next July.

"Right now it's in the 'let's go for it' stage," Anyan said.

The congressional papers of Sen. James A. McClure (D-Idaho), which will probably measure about 1,500 cubic feet, have a permanent home at the University of Idaho Library.

McClure announced earlier this year he wouldn't be a candidate for re-election, so he's donating all of his personal papers and correspondence gathered during his nearly 25 years in Congress to the UI Library.

These files will provide scholars and students an opportunity for an in-depth exploration of state and national issues during several controversial decades of American history," said Terry Abraham, head of special collections and archives, where the McClure papers will be housed.

"We are very pleased to receive them. They enhance our other holdings of congressional and regional records remarkably," Abraham said.

He said the UI Library has already received nearly 1,000 cubic feet of McClure's papers, and will probably get about another 500 cubic feet. The records include line-item memos, certificates, photographs and copies of bills introduced by McClure, among other items.

Abraham said the bulk of the material will be opened for research after UI archivists have processed and cataloged it. But he noted it will be an extremely involved, time consuming process.

"We'll announce the availability of the material when it's appropriate to do so, but it certainly won't be in the immediate future," Abraham said.

McClure a 1950 graduate of the UI College of Law, was first elected to Congress in 1964. He was elected to the US. Senate in 1972, where he is completing his third and last term.

Also housed in the collection are personal papers of state representatives and senators, judges, doctors, lawyers and journalists along with records of mining and lumbering corporations and companies, hospitals, orphanages and professional organizations.

History department selects candidates

By BETH HOWARD Contributing Writer

The University of Idaho History Department’s hiring process is narrowing down as the first lecture by a candidate vying for a position in the department was held Monday afternoon.

Candidate Rebecca McKay addressed the general topic “Industrial Revolution in Europe and Its Implications for World History” in her lecture, which highlighted the technological advances and handiwork that ensued such a revolution.

The lecture, sponsored by the UI History Department, the History Club and Phi Alpha Theta, the history honors society, was the first of two such lectures designed to allow the candidates to exhibit their speaking abilities and professional knowledge in a lecture format.

According to Professor Kent Hackman, history department chairperson, the department will review the candidates following their respective visits to campus and either make a decision at that time or request applications for the position. Hackman hopes to have the position filled in time for next fall semester.

This semester’s retirement of Professor Robert Cooper, who presently teaches the classics, required the department to begin the search for another associate.

According to Euler, the department took this opportunity to do a little shifting around, moving the classics such as Greek and Roman history to the language department.

Hackman said the department is looking for a candidate with a background in late-European history.

Adoption sign of love, speaker says

By KERRI FLOOD Contributing Writer

“During the process of adoption, you are not abandoning your child, you’re providing for him or her,” Donna Euler, counselor from the Lutheran Social Services of Washington and Idaho Undecided Parent Program said.

Euler, talking at the University of Idaho Woman’s Center, said Tuesday afternoon that North Idaho had the highest Caucasian teenage pregnancy rate in the northwest last year. Statistic say that four out of 10 girls will become pregnant before they are 20.

According to Euler, adoptions have changed a lot. She said birth parents can now choose their child’s adopted parents; something they couldn’t do in the past.

“Choosing the family is extremely important and is usually both exciting and emotionally difficult,” Euler said. “This process reaffirms that the adoption is really going to happen.”

Euler said the Lutheran Social Services Program is based on the belief that the birth-mothers should have the opportunity to choose the family for their baby.

“If you can tell us what you want in a family in terms of lifestyle, education, religion, interests and so on, we will give you three couples to start with for you to consider,” Jennifer Schaffner, maternity counselor for North Idaho, said.

Also, Schaffner said they provide the birth-mothers with a one-page description of the potential adopted parents. The information is taken from a home study with identifying information left out.

She said they screen their couples carefully. Couples must join a five week course in order to care for adopted children. They also have to pass criminal records, fingerprints and get five references as well as a doctor’s recommendation. They also look into financial as well as family and emotional stability.

The Unplanned Pregnancy Program does not push adoption.

“We are aimed at laying out all the options and provide support for their decisions. We just want our young girls to know there are loving couples who would give their child a good home,” Euler said.

The Maternity Counseling Program began approximately 10 years ago to assist women who face an unplanned pregnancy. The program is available to help women, men and families look at their options and provide support for their decisions. Counseling is private, confidential and without charge.

“We emphasize decision making, not the counselor’s, but yours,” Euler said.

She said pregnant teens will be facing alternatives, which will affect their entire future.

“Unless marriage is an option, the choices really come down to either parenting the child or relinquishing for adoption,” Schaffner said.

“Remember that if you are planning to give the baby up for adoption, that during the process this decision was made out of love, not rejection,” Euler said.
Drug war worthless, drug car trying to save face

When the White House declared a war on drugs they didn’t mention it in a war you expect casualties, and they have them. Mark one up for the drug dealers. They are the ones who took off the big guy with threats and stress.

Mark Milam

If you are confused, let me fill you in. This drug car has resigned his position on the go. Like the Columbia drug lords the Bush administration has allowed the drug dealers to keep the war machine in the air, which seems to look like we are going to have a real war. A war of hate and death instead of a war of the same old freedom and the enjoyment of the life you have.

I will not miss drug car Ben nett who was tons of tax money and time reaping cocaine addicts and casual marijuana smokers. Instead of stopping a war of drugs coming into the country, the man led authorities to create worse conditions inside America. Addiction has risen as users turn to harder drugs to satisfy their needs. Drugs are harder to score leading to more crime, more abuse and more problems. And by day dealers shoot each other, and innocent people, to death. Blood runs red on the streets surrounding our campuses. In Washington D.C. leads the nation in murders. Thanks - Why?

As I have pointed out before, I do not support the drug policy described by the administration. However, it does not strike out at the real problems, which are addiction and the victims of drug use. Instead of helping some young people who are facing inner-city children about crack, those guys would rather gear-up, load-up, knock down doors and make dramatic television style busts.

What happens then? Usually the individuals charged wait in overcrowded jails, waste tax dollars and get released - back into the streets, either selling drugs or selling them. What a way to fight a war. I think Bennett realized he was falling short on the goals and promises made to the people, so he decided to fade into the sunset, as all good heroes do. Except I think our ex-drug car might be jumping out of D.C. before he is either forced out or bashed a complete loser.

What ever made someone think a former education secreta ry of Reagan’s would make a good drug fighter must also have been on drugs since he doesn’t seem to care. He decided an ex-governor would be better fit to carry on the worthless cause.

As I am telling it to the White House think the old Florida governor, Bob Martinez, would be a good drug car! How is that? Here is a man who wasted the last year’s term in his office chasing the perf. 2 Live Crew, out of Florida and towards hell and the courtroom. In the end Martinez and Broward County police have the rap attack, the band went free, and Bob lost.

Yet in a sense he may have won. The White House is expected to announce Martinez as the top choice for the drug crusader spot. This seems like a bad move, putting a career politician into such an important spot only damages our nation’s drug program more. Even more Martinez has shown he makes moves only to benefit himself, and because of that he lost the latest election.

Now he gets a job that offers him more spotlight and assumed authority. What a bad choice in Florida by the boys got away with their dirty words. With the hopes of the voters now get away with their daily fix?

Only time will tell, but my wis dom in these matters leads me to believe that if we fail to fight drugs then we sunk our own sail. Maybe it is time to start a campaign of standing against drug dealers and instead of sinking a bunch of cheap, lousy politicians and lawmakers.

actions, I would like to address all of the points her elected re presentatives had. I also considered when they voted 10-1 to grant the BSA request for separate status.

1. Concerning the “benefit of all” purpose of the ASU Constitu tions, the law school was denied funding in the spring of 1989 because there were travel funds included. The next line item budget requests included travel funding, including $80 per night mints for some communications types (see page 4 of the April 12, 1989 ASU budget and the budget). It was also stated that it was an open invitation to line item all other clubs and organizations on campus. Is there some problem with funding all the clubs and organizations on campus? Doesn’t funding all the campus organizations sound like something a student government should do with student fees? A third reason was eliminating the work that was given is that we would procrastinate in seeking our own funds. Why shouldn’t students singled out to seek outside funding for the benefit of all? The ASU senate of 1989 chose to ignore this directive that the ASU existed for the benefit of all, not the law students.

2. Ms. Tina Come lately raised the objection that several senators expressed weeks ago. Senators Renner, McCoy, Anderson, Helfman, D’Allessio and Nogles (all undergraduate students) spoke to me personally about the dangerous precedent of allowing a group to leave the ASU, expressing the concern that any disgruntled or merely greedy group might do the same. Maybe, but your elected representatives considered the following factors when they identified the Student Bar Association as worthy of separate status. If there are any other groups that fit this set of criteria, then there might be a problem; but upon reflection I don’t believe there is a single other group like ours on campus, nor will there for at least 10 years. I submit that any group in the futures that can publish a journal on their own and get credit approval for their extracurricular activities deserves to have their petition granted.

a. The Student Bar Association (SBA) has 100 percent membership of the law students.
Zinser made correct choice

Editor: President Zinser has revoked the call to Commencement. Perhaps she is wise.

Public prayer at atheist events started when the public was pre- dominant. President Zinser in both our forefathers arrived on this continent to practice religion as they pleased. I am an atheist, as are most of my friends. We pray. We do not expect other to pray with us, especially if they do not believe as we do. We do, however, expect to have our beliefs respected. I feel Ms. Beck's editorial flippancy shows her lack of respect for my beliefs.

My Lord has bade us, (that is, all Christians) to be like bread — to provide a shelter for society. Yeast does not demand, rule or legislate to make the rest of the bread grow into yeast. With the addition of more yeast, the bread must work hard to carry everything. Those who work harder to provide the goods and services for the society make the difference. The Lord, infinitely righteous on this earth, would not force anyone to work harder. He might, though, have to introduce the other actions as wrong.

Neither should we, as Christians, fight to reinstate public prayer at Commencement. We should, however, condemn the fact that it isn't an institution anymore, and work to make more Christians, more yeast for our bread as it were, so it will become an institution once again, not by gross leg- alism, but by choice, a concept our Lord died for.

I would like to thank Dr. Zinser, both during the "silent time" the ACLU is authorizing me, through their aggressive legal tactics of forcing Dr. Zinser to change her policy, and during the "noisy time," when I am still free to do as I wish, that more people, including Ms. Beck, will come to under- stand Christianity, not as a legis- lative guidance of life, but as a choice between right and wrong, good and evil, that people can make by knowing and inviting Christ into their hearts and lives. Dr. Zinser, I believe the deal you gave you a tough decision to make. I think you made the only one that would preserve harmony at our school. God go with you, Ma'am.

Sheikhs says thanks

Editor: I would like to express my appreciation to all the students who put forth an effort during my recent campaign. With your help I was able to obtain an ASUI senate position. I enjoyed cam- paigning and had the pleasure of meeting new people.

Although, I am thankful for everyone's help I'd like to espe- cially thank the following people: Mr. Saeq Zia, who helped me obtain signatures for my petition and who put up posters around campus; Mr. Arshad Javaid who was always offering his help and had plenty of enthusiasm; Nancy Shaffer and Kelly Tyron, who took care of my campaigning in Wallace Complex and repeatedly told me "not to worry" my family who bravely stood and distri- buted my pamphlets and who without I would not have won — special thanks to my brother who helped me so much that he de- veloped a serious case of the flu and is still recovering; thanks to Mike Gotch, Julie McCoy and Amy Anderson to whom I am grateful to ever have a question.

Again I would like to thank everyone who participated or put in a nice word to help me achieve the position I have now. The main point of my platform is to present the students and I hope they will come talk to me whenever they would like. I'm ready to start my job.

The SBA has had a constitu- tional governing body in place for the last 10 years, complete with a stringent honor code deve- loped by a cooperative effort from the students and faculty.

c. The SBA has used the funds it receives from the ASUI to support credit generating activi- ties for those in our student body.

d. Board of Student Advocates are activities that give us practical training and out of classroom cre- dit. Further, they are critical activities to keep our students competitive in the job market.

They have gained national recog- nition in that the Idaho Law Review sits on the board of direc- tors of the National Association of Law Reviews, and individuals in Most Court competitions have won regional awards.

d. The final factor that makes us unique, and keeps the total power to grant or deny a group the right to leave the ASUI in the hands of the senate, is this, we were denied funding. If the ASUI Senate carefully considered all the budget requests, and does not arbitrarily deny funding to any deserving group, no other group will ever be able to leave the fold. Ms. Kagi says what we call the law the parade of horribles argument. That is "Golly gee, if we let three percent of the stu- dents and funds out of our control, the other 97 percent will crumble and be dismantled." If the ASUI is that doddering, perhaps it is time to dismantle it and see what might develop.

4. Referring to the April 12, 1989 meeting, representation has not helped us with the ASUI senate; we were destroyed. I personally have found my tenure in the senate fulfilling, challenging and informative. I have met some great people, and enjoyed myself, but I do not have the time required to do the job as well as it deserves to be done. Law stu- dents, unlike undergraduate students, cannot put their legal education, on hold to do public service. Only in extraordinary cases do stu- dents spend more than three years in law school.

The above explains the reasons that the ASUI senate was willing to honor our request. Below is a nanner reply concerning my "self-centered and ultimately destructive" agenda. My own agenda in coming into the senate centers on the funding of the School of Communication. In 1989, the ASUI senate bailed out the Argonaut to the tune of $100,000, after they had gotten about $75,000 the previous year. This is the same Communications budget Mr. Kagi reportedly referred to as her own "private slush fund." The School of Com- munication, the Argonaut, KUCI and the Gem of the Mountains get 25 percent of the budget. They have highly paid positions, travel to conferences, and their educa- tion is given a practical extension by virtue of the ASUI subsidy. The only organization threatened with "crumbling" is the great god communications. Has anyone outside the School of Communi- cation complained about the ASUI decision? I believe the people who have complained are merely trying to keep their strong-hold on the budget, and the benefits they get from it.

We have tried to find alterna- tive sources of funding and have failed. There is no way to bend future representative bodies, what is needed is the Senate itself must act irresponsibly, and in response we are trying to pre- pare a program, not take any- thing from the ASUI. Look at it this way, if you find a law dom- inated by the Senate, you'll be rid of us once and for all.

—Jane Windsor

Editor's note: The School of Commu- nication does not receive any fund- ing from the ASUI. The ASUI- funded departments — the Argo- naut, KUCI and the Gem of the Mountains — are not related to the School of Communication.

PREGNANCY

The very first baby in Idaho was born to a young mother in the early 1900s, when she was only 17 years old. She was a student at the University of Idaho, and had to drop out of school to raise the child. In the years since, the number of pregnant students has increased, and the University has taken steps to support them. The University offers counseling services, financial aid, and other resources to help pregnant students succeed academically. The University also has a policy that allows pregnant students to finish their degree and continue on as a family member. The University supports the idea that pregnant students can achieve their goals and have positive outcomes for themselves and their families. The image of a young mother holding a baby represents the support and resources that the University offers to pregnant students. The University is committed to providing a safe and supportive environment for all students, regardless of their pregnancy status.
We're looking for hard-working, self-motivated people to be Account Representatives for the Argonaut.

Idaho Basketball
Women take tourney

By TOM BITHELL
Staff Writer

The Lady Vandals opened the 1990-91 basketball season in style Thanksgiving weekend with two wins and a first place in the Mark IV-Ebasco Toyota Classic in Memorial Gym.

The University of Idaho women defeated the University of Portland, 76-70 Friday night and then Portland State University, 71-68 the following night to win their sixth classic title. In the Friday's first round game Idaho jumped out to a 42-29 point lead at the half, controlling the game behind the solid ball handling of guard Sherry Peterson. Opponents players handled the half very well, UI coach Laurie Turner said. "At times they were clearly two turnovers and that's a record for us."

In the second-half the Pios from Portland fought back, getting 10 Idaho turnovers and outscoring the Lady Vandals 42-34. It wasn't enough, though. The Lady Vandals were able to preserve their season's first win.

Identical scores followed in the second and third quarters. Idaho won with a career high 29 points and nine rebounds. Smith scored an assist of 10 if 11 from the field.

Please see WOMEN page 8-

BSU team took rivalry too far

That rivalry between Idaho and Boise State produced another outstanding game this year which the Vandals held off the Broncos for their ninth consecutive win, 21-14.

Boise State played a great game and their coaches and players had nothing to be ashamed of in the loss.

Unfortunately my respect for the Broncos quickly disappeared while celebrating the Vandals victory that night in Boise.

With a game of such magnitude it is easy to understand why the Boise State players had difficulty dealing with the frustrating loss. However, I had more difficulty dealing with the actions of the Bronco players after the game.

I realize there is always tension between fans and players, but the behavior of the Bronco players was both inexcusable and embarrassing to anyone connected with Boise State University. Fights occur after the game every year and this year was no exception.

The Vandals fans have always been known for their vocal celebration in Boise and some of their actions are not always justified. They might in some cases even deserve some of the trouble they get into. But I don't feel wearing clothing, sig- naling a Vandals fan's support for Idaho, is justification for being assaulted.

I saw several incidents where Boise State players would ask people what school they supported and would respond with violence when Idaho fans professed their support for the Vandals.

One Idaho fan was hit without provocation and without warning because he was wearing an Idaho hat. He had six stitches placed under his eye that night.

This fan was not alone. Another Idaho fan was punched and later slapped by a Boise State player because of a shirt he was wearing. The shirt was far from positive toward Boise State, but the Idaho fan didn't think that's an excuse for a player to hit him.

I could relate several more incidents from that night and I am sure there are other situations that have not come to my attention but I think I have made my point.

When Boise State players' girlfriends admitted to me that the Idaho girls were out of control, they eliminated any chance of bias I might have being a student at the University of Idaho.

The Idaho-Boise State rivalry is one of the best in the country and it is sad that the rivalry cannot be left on the field. I enjoyed watch- ing the two teams play but I didn't enjoy the unnecessary vio- lence that followed the game.

If the people causing trouble were just students or Boise fans, I wouldn't have had a problem with fights because I realize they exist.

But Boise State players need to realize they represent more than themselves when they exhibit this attitude. The players also represent Boise State University and the people who support the Boise State team.

I think Boise State players need to find the nearest dictionary and study the words maturity and class.

Obviously they lacked both on the Friday night.

In the future, before the Boise State players humiliate themselves and the people they represent, they might take time to think and direct their energies toward beating Idaho instead of beating up Idaho fans.

I-AA Playoffs

Vandals drop Bears

By VANDERSON GATEWOOD

Staff Writer

The 13th ranked Idaho Vandals had off a furious rally by sixth ranked Southwest Missouri State and held on for a 43-35 win in the first round of the I-AA playoffs in Springfield, MO.

It was the Vandals first playoff win since 1988 when they advanced to the semifinals. Last year the Vandals were defeated in the first round by Eastern Illinois 88-86.

"We wanted to come out and prove we could win in the play-offs," head coach John L. Smith said. "The players' attitude was great and we were really anxious to play." Once again the Vandals were led by their two offensive machines: Kasey Dunn and Devon Pearson. Dunn, who is the national leader in receptions, had a career high 13 catches for 241 yards. Pearson, the nation's leading rusher, had 27 carries for 169 yards and three touchdowns. Vandals quarterback Steve Nolan completed 24-41 passes for 465 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions.

"Kasey getting open really took the pressure off me," Nolan said. "He didn't just catch the easy balls, he caught all of them. There's no better guy to get the ball to."

and after a Roger Cecil fumble recovery, Pearce scored on a 14-yard draw play giving the Vandals their first of four 11-point leads putting them up 14-3. The final one put the Vandals up 25-24 with 2:26 left in the third quarter.

Southwest Missouri used an effective option attack to move the ball on the Vandals all day long. Running back Eric Jenkins and Smith combined for nearly 200 yards rushing. This was the same attack Southwest Texas used to gain 460 yards on the ground against the Vandals early in the year.

"We don’t see the option attack too often and it gives us a lot of problems," Smith said. "Their execution was outstanding and they didn’t turn the ball over. The Bears rallied in the fourth quarter behind a 7-yard Rodney McCooen touchdown run and a 46-yard field goal to tie the score at 35. Idaho kicker Thayse Doyle then put the game away with a 29-yard field goal and then a 50-yarder."

"Those were just huge kicks by Thayse to put the game away," Smith said.

Next week the Vandals travel to Statesboro, GA for their quarterfinal matchup against third-ranked Georgia Southern. Georgia Southern defeated the Citadel last week 21-13 to advance to the quarterfinals for the sixth straight year. Georgia Southern is the defending national champions.
Eugene ballet company to perform at Beasley

The snow has not yet begun to fall, but dancers everywhere are rehearsing for a magical Christmas fantasy called "The Nutcracker.

This year, Tchaikovsky’s famous holiday ballet will be performed in our area by the Eugene Ballet from Oregon on Saturday at the Lewisston High School auditorium and Sunday at the Beasley Performing Arts Coliseum in Pullman with both performances at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets for the Pullman performances are on sale at the Beasley in Pullman and Cavenagh’s Value Inn in Moscow. Lewiston performance tickets are available at all Owl Drug stores in Lewiston and Clarkston, University Pharmacy and Corner Drug in Moscow and Pullman. Reduced ticket prices for students and children are available for both performances.

"The Nutcracker" tells the story of a Christmas dream. When a wooden nutcracker comes to life and takes the heroine, Clara, and the audience on a colorful and dramatic journey. A battle with giant mice, skaters amid whirling snowflakes, dancers from Russia, China, Spain and Arabia, waltzing flowers and the Sugarplum Fairy are all part of the adventure. The magic also includes an enchanted Christmas tree and dancing bonbons.

In addition to the professional Eugene Ballet, local dancers from the Festival Dance Academies in Moscow, Pullman and Lewiston will be seen as bonbosses, party children, flowers and baby mice. The cast total is 50 dancers.

The Eugene Ballet Company, founded in 1978, has received critical acclaim in Dance Magazine, San Francisco Chronicle, the Boston Herald and Ballet Review. The company has toured extensively throughout the Northwest and California, and was chosen to perform in Florence as part of the Arts America Touring Roster. Artistic Director Teii Pimble was born in England and studied at the Royal Academy of Dance in London and the Elmshurst School of Ballet and Dramatic Arts. As a professional dancer she has performed with four European ballet companies, dancing leading roles in classical and contemporary ballets.

"The Nutcracker" performances are being sponsored by Festival Dance and Performing Arts Association with the assistance of Idaho Community on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.
Ideas offered for holiday mischief

By TRENT YOUNG • Staff Writer

Does the thought of spending the holidays at home give you the bends? Do you get incredibly ill if someone even mentions reheated, leftover, de-magnetized and low in fat, flavor and taste turkey products sealed into little vacuum baggies over a millennia ago? Are you tired of visiting obscure relatives who think Hic Hau and The Duke of Hazard are modern spiritual miracles, and who wait daily for their letter from Ed McMahon to appear to give their day some flavor? Well, here are some ideas to spice up this year's time with the folks:

One: Rent a lot of videos, especially those you know your Aunt Rheena and her twelve "pure," yet agnostic children won't dare watch, lest they risk eternal bell. A few choice reminders about video, however, are not to rent anything with Beete Midler, animated animals, Dukes of Hazard, Jane Fonda, stars from the '70s or heartwarming “people come together films” with hand-sapped actors, since these might inspire nauseating relations to join you. Try to shoot for low-budget, sex and drug filled movies that should make anyone not raised by wolves ill.

Two: Try to go as much as possible, even if it means sitting at the park in your car, alone and listening to old tapes. If you say you’ve got other plans, the chances you’ll be forced to visit your one-eyed cousin who makes candles and lives with a goat will decrease greatly. Three: Invent an illness that only strikes when your family is home. Don’t go for anything like whooping cough or a ruptured spleen — those will just get you bed rest. If you can pull this off, you’ll be free to do what you want without having to stay home for fascinating family matters, like the annual Scrabble championship. (Note: Never try this trick if your parents are Christian Scientists.)

Four: Have Vietnam flashbacks, I know, I know. Probably none of us have even stepped foot on Asian soil, but if you play this role right, no one will suspect you weren’t involved in a war, or that you really don’t need your wheelchair.

Free: Create a story about alien abduction and weep openly and often. Start by drawing long faces without mouths or ears on everything, then build-up to making mountains out of mashed potatoes. Fake periodic blackouts, especially during family sing-a-longs or slide shows, and tell concerned kin you believe you’re (Choose only one)

A. The genetic guinea pig for a series of space children with earthing DNA.

B. A brainwashed alien from another dimension.

C. Shirley MacLaine’s love child from an affair with one of her spirit guides that manifested itself in the form of a poop boy.

D. A dancer from the "Vog" video.

Six: This is the toughie — take your own death. If you’re a stiiff, then no one can expect your presence at potlucks or church outings. Best results come from people with access to corpses or movie special effects, but the old "Stick a bunch of Kentucky Fried Chicken in your car and then push it over a cliff and wait for an explosion" trick is also effective.

Henry and June asks viewers to think for themselves

Review By MARK MILAM
Staff Writer

It is refreshing to see, in a time of censorship and conservative attitudes, artists, who are not only willing to pursue their craft, but are also bold enough to take dramatic impressions to a new level. This is precisely what director Philip Kaufman accomplished in his film, Henry and June.

The film tells the story of Henry Miller and his relationship with both his wife and his French lover. Miller was a hard-drinking, realistic writer who wrote classics such as Tropic Of Cancer and shocked readers around the world with his vivid descriptions of an unnatural life.

When we first meet up with Miller and his companions they are in Paris. Here Miller meets his future lover, Anais Nin, who is also a writer and is married to an American. Miller is married to June, an exotic thrill-seeker who searches for her identity through her sexual awareness. June is brilliantly played by Uma Thurman, who captures the character's sex appeal, which was the one thing that made up for June's other limitations. She was not the greatest writer like Miller, nor was she as sophisticated as Anais. Yet her sexuality, according to Kaufman, was extremely captivating.

Fred Ward takes on the difficult role of transforming Miller into a screen personality. Miller was the typical, brazen, Yankee drinker who roamed the haunts of Europe. Through poverty, drugs, sex, admiration and inspiration, the man became the author, the person who could sink into his soul and reflect it to the world. Anais Nin is played by Maria DeMedeiros, who does a fair job of playing Miller's lover. I think they could have found another woman who had a stronger sex appeal and seemed more worldly. Kaufman's Nin comes off as an English school girl who has only heard about sex at summer camp. Yet the appeal between these two actors worked.

Nin and Miller became lovers, friends and supporters of each other throughout their respective careers. What the director tried to capture was the forces between this rugged American and seductive French woman. What enabled them to understand each other so well — so they were able to look into other and into society itself? Kaufman tries to make us understand that yet he falls short. We get a shallow portrait of the scenic background of Paris, romantic lovers and all the splendor of the city in the '30s.

While the film presented the visual senses it did little to stimulate my passions for the author, Henry Miller. Miller's works individually, and collectively, are a cornerstone of American literature. While the books faced censorship and repression, much like today's artist, they opened people's minds and challenged individuals to think for themselves and reexamine state views of life.

I was disappointed that this film failed to capture the intensity of the work, and humanity of Henry Miller. It is obvious that Philip Kaufman understands the forces behind the literary scene of Paris in the 30's because he portrays it so beautifully and freely. What I expected was the portrait of Miller, as the man and the artist. I did not get that, but then again it was not pitched as a movie just about the author. Too bad, two hours into the life of Miller would have been remarkable, given the depth of his life.

Philip Kaufman has proven his skill at getting into the lives and emotions of characters in previous films such as The Right Stuff and The Unbearable Lightness of Being. Maybe the director has found that his interest lies more in human sexuality, since this film has some of the most erotic scenes I have ever viewed without feeling the cheapness of a crude porn movie. This sexuality comes straight out at you as it was intended to, natural and free. This was Miller's view on sex, and apparently Kaufman's as well. Such daring attempts in cinema earned this film the first ever NC-17 rating. It was fortunate that this was not another fine effort that ended up in cuts on the editing floor.

My one word of advice is this, if sex on the screen bothers you then you should not go. As I have said it is not crude; it is an accurate view of people's lifestyles. It is as simple as that.

The first night I went and saw this film a few people walked out. What a shame people will not open their minds for just two hours; it is really not painful. I hope someday there will be a great film about Henry Miller and the life he lived. Or maybe a flick about William Burroughs' life; now that would really shake people up.
