Spring enrollment sees 4.2 per cent increase

Student enrollment of the University of Idaho showed a gain of 4.2 per cent over the previous semester. This represents the university in growth year after year, according to the official of the Idaho legislature.

A source of the Office of the Registrar, which compiled the figures, said the increase is due to the higher learning goal approximately 18 per cent increase in enrollment over the previous semester.

A report from the Office of the Registrar shows the university has an enrollment of 4,827 students, up from 4,573 students in the fall semester.

In terms of full time students, the University of Idaho has an enrollment of 1,957 students, up from 1,857 students in the fall semester.

Students attend the Idaho legislature pass new state constitution

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho legislature approved a new state constitution, which will be voted on in the November election.

Legislators approved the state constitution by a 51-0 vote in the Senate, and 57-0 vote in the House of Representatives.

Legislators will now vote on a final draft of the constitution, which will be submitted to voters in the November election.

The Constitution will include provisions for the state's three government branches, including the governor, lieutenant governor, and secretary of state.

The constitution will also include provisions for the state's two legislative branches, the Senate and House of Representatives.

The constitution will be submitted to voters in the November election, and if approved, it will become the state's new constitution.

Students announce candidacy for ASUI president, vice president

With more than 100 students already committed to the position of vice president, the University of Idaho's Associated Students have announced their candidacy for the position.

The candidates are: Richelle Bell, a junior from Boise; and John Duvall, a senior from Idaho Falls.

The candidates are currently enrolled at the university, and have already begun campaigning for the position.

The election will be held in late March, and the winner will be announced in early April.

E-Board to evaluate Bill of Rights

The E-Board of the University of Idaho will evaluate the Bill of Rights in order to determine if the university should support it or not.

The Bill of Rights is a document that lists the fundamental rights and freedoms of all citizens of the United States.

The E-Board will consider the Bill of Rights, and make a decision whether or not to support it.

Malcolm X's speech

Malcolm X's speech will be evaluated by the E-Board, and a decision will be made whether or not to support it.

Malcolm X was a civil rights activist and a central figure in the African American civil rights movement.

His speech was a powerful call to action, and it continues to be widely discussed today.

On-campus activities

On-campus activities include: a dance, a concert, and a movie screening.

The dance will be held on Friday, and the concert will be held on Saturday.

The movie screening will be held on Sunday.

Politics Over The State... By Glenn Miles

Dick Smith or Jack Murphy

"Which man will oppose Don Samuelson in the Republican primary? That’s the one about which most has been said.
This has been one of the principal political questions during the current legislative session..."

Moderate and progressive Republicans seem to agree in this: that only one man, Majority Leader Dick Smith in the Senate, is really a moderate who has made an issue of the difference between the relatively progressive position of Governor Jack Murphy and more conservative opinion held by the Legislature.

If Sen. Smith received the nomination, there would be no hope of a moderate candidate being nominated by either party in July.

The effects of state-wide primaries are seen in the Lincoln County seat. Republican Governor Jack Murphy defeated a Democrat in 1968 with a majority of the people’s vote.

Smith has been out campaigning over the state. Murphy has not. Jack Murphy seems to have more strength from the moderate wing of the party.

Historically the men who have the legislatures have supported prior to the primary have been defeated — Oren Mantle, Lawrence, Hal Houck, etc. — and in the primary they run for the 20th district congressional nomination with the expectation of winning the legislative primary over his political party.

It seems only when a candidate has a primary vote is he strong enough to win on his own base, and out of the strength of the legislators, it is able to succeed.

Jack Murphy

Eldon M. "Dick" Smith of Reedsburg is the senior member of the Senate and served two terms in the State Senate. He is certainly best known for his leadership as Chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

The Shill Point of View

The Shill What do you have to think of the people who were in control of Congress in the mid-term elections?

Nunes: I am confused if we do not think the Congress — we may say that, and I think that we are going to find, that the Democrat leaders — and I think that, when these four international issues are under consideration, there is a lot of good work, and if they do that, yes, and that’s why I think the leadership is important.

Dick Smith or Jack Murphy

The Shill: What do you think of student protests?

Nunes: It is not a simple answer to say whether or not the student protests are wrong or right. It is a complex issue, and I think that the public is willing to listen to some of the arguments that are being put forward.

Student Protests

The Shill: There are many different types of student protests. I wouldn’t want to make a blanket statement. Also, since I am not a student at Reed College, I think that any statement on my part would be difficult to make.

The Shill: You have expressed your views about the strength of the Washington legislature. What do you think about George Washington?

Smith: I think that George Washington was a great man, and I think that he was a very wise and careful leader.

The Shill: Do you think George Washington was a great man?

Smith: I think so.

The Shill: If you could have your own presidential campaign, what would you want to be known about George Washington?

Smith: I would want to be known as a leader who stands for liberty and justice for all people.

The Shill: Do you think you have a chance of winning the presidency?

Smith: I think that I have a good chance of winning the presidency.

The Shill: You have been mentioned as a possible contender for the presidency. What do you think about the race for the presidency?

Smith: I think that it is possible to win the presidency, but it is not easy. I think that it would require a lot of hard work and dedication.

The Shill: What specific programs in your plan do you plan to put the people first?

Smith: I think that the people should be the focus of any program. I believe that the government should be working for the people, not the other way around.

The Shill: You have mentioned some plans for the future of the nation. What do you think about the future of the nation?

Smith: I think that the future of the nation is bright. I believe that with hard work and dedication, we can make the future better for everyone.

Civil Rights

To the properly defined, Civil Rights are the inalienable rights extended to a man, exactly the same for every citizen. In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, rights and liberties were extended within the American constitutional order, and not to be ignored within the man, both within the US. federal system and from within the system. In this era, providing the support of the federal system and the power of the US. federal support for the states, is essentially the substance of the Natural Right to be extended within the man. The American system, in this era, is essentially the substance of the Natural Right to be extended within the man's substance. And while it might be argued that the American black man was not as well off as the white man, by any standards, and it was generally agreed that he was not, he was still the substance of the federal system and the power of the US. federal support for the states.

Civil Rights vs. Economic Rights

The Civil Rights provided within the American constitutional order are entirely different than the economic rights provided within the American constitutional order. The Civil Rights are the rights to be extended within the man, while the economic rights are the rights to be extended within the man. The Civil Rights are the inalienable rights extended to a man, exactly the same for every citizen, while the economic rights are the rights to be extended within the man, exactly the same for every citizen. Idaho student designs new zoo

By Art Myrick

Stam and the Pig Spartans? We've been planning the zoo for so long that we've decided to proceed with the project now, rather than wait until the next available year. L. Walters has proposed for the new zoo a site that is the most interesting area of land that we have. Walters has developed a plan for creating a zoo environment according to their needs, behaviors, and characteristics in such a manner that a large number of species can be kept together in harmony. The site that Walters selected is a natural zoo environment where the conditions experienced in their region.

Candidates warned of Commencement
