After tense debate on budget, senate passes fee increase

By Mike Hefo

In the last minute meeting, supercharged with emotion and intrigue and emotion, the Idaho Senate debated and approved a bill to increase student fees by a total of $13 million.

The fee increase breaks down to $2.50 in tuition, $0.50 in the student activity fee, $0.25 in the student health fee, and $0.25 in the student recreation fee. The total increase will be $13 million.

The fee increase is the result of a budget deficit of $13 million as a result of a "no budget" protest last year. The Committee on Education and the Arts, the Senate, and the House of Representatives all agreed to the increase.

University relations

The university is not applicable to the type of public relations the university needs. We are not saying that copy is like it is and don’t know why it is.

The Black Student Union was started to express the Negro’s perspective. The students, Negro, in solution to the problem in the first place. We may differ, but not in spirit. The Negro Relations Board is started to express the Negro’s perspective, to show that the Negro doesn’t want to be a part of the program. We go to the final word, not without reason. It is the opinion of both that radicalism is never used, but that the board is needed to express the Negro’s perspective.

It’s not that Negro relations board is used, but the board is needed to express the Negro’s perspective. University relations is setting up a high school relations program, something along the lines of the program that the students have at the University of California. There are a number of universities that have a high school relations program. The board has been completed to 1,000 students.

The board is the backbone of the program, not the administration. The students have only been interested in students.

We found this old tryst in the attic of the other day. It’s one of those things that make you wonder how you ever managed to get where you are. We have to give full credit to our water; the naturally-perfected watering of University Washington. We certainly didn’t get where we are because of our hard-fisted advertising trays.

For Christ
We are the polluters our ecologists warn us about

The ASU senate voted to increase your fees by eleven dollars and twenty-four cents this morning. The motion was carried by a seven to five vote.

So what? So indeed. You should be aware of what is going on in this student government—particularly since you are footing the bill.

The fee increase is not particularly outstanding and there are some pretty good reasons why we need one, not the last of which is that the government to broke.

The question arises, "Why are they broke?"

The government administration is facing an immense financial crisis, which is causing them to tax the student body in order to keep the university running.

One of the main causes of this tax is the increase in the number of students attending ASU, which is putting a strain on the budget.

The government is trying to cope with this problem by increasing fees, which will help to defray some of the costs associated with running the university.

We are the polluters, according to our ecologists. We are the ones who buy and use these polluting products, and we are the ones who are ultimately responsible for the problem.

Our actions, as individuals, have a direct impact on the environment. We can make choices that will help to reduce pollution, or we can continue to contribute to the problem.

As consumers, we have the power to make choices that can have a positive impact on the environment. We can choose to purchase products that are environmentally friendly, or we can continue to use products that are harmful to the environment.

The question is, will we choose to take responsibility for our actions and work towards a more sustainable future, or will we continue to contribute to the problem?

The choice is ours.
Hoover won't surrender

By Mark Breen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Had circumstances been different, the Office of the Atty. Gen. of the US might have been under a new director by now. Hoover had been in charge of the FBI since 1924. He was a dynamic leader and a skilled administrator. The FBI had become a respected and feared agency, with a reputation for toughness and efficiency. Hoover was a hardworking and dedicated man, who was known for his ability to get results. He was a master at organizing and managing the resources of the bureau. He was also a skilled fundraiser, who was able to secure large amounts of money for the bureau's operations.

Hoover had been diagnosed with cancer in 1970, and he was in declining health. He had been undergoing chemotherapy treatments, but his health was declining rapidly. His administration had been marked by a series of scandals and controversies, including the Watergate affair, which had led to the resignation of President Nixon. Hoover had been a controversial figure, and he had been criticized for his handling of the civil rights movement, the Vietnam War, and other issues.

In the end, Hoover had been forced to resign his position, and the FBI had been taken over by a new director. The FBI had undergone a significant transformation, and it had become a more modern and efficient organization. The agency had continued to be a powerful and respected force, and it had played a key role in many of the nation's most significant cases.

The FBI had been a symbol of the times, and it had been a source of pride for many Americans. It had been a symbol of the nation's values, and it had been a source of protection for the American people. Hoover had been a dedicated and devoted public servant, who had served the country with distinction for many years. He had been a true American hero, and he would be remembered for his contributions to the FBI and to the nation.
Rally area not dead-life springs eternal

Arguments against the new rally area being nothing but a "dead-life" environment are based on the belief that it will not be used for rallies, but for other activities. However, the area has been designed to accommodate a variety of uses, including rallies, and the design team expects that it will become a vibrant hub of activity. They argue that the area's design is focused on creating a space that can be used for a wide range of events, and that its success will depend on how the community uses it. They also point out that the area's design includes features such as open spaces, greenery, and seating areas, which will make it an attractive place for people to gather. The team hopes that the area will become a place where people can come together to enjoy a variety of activities, and that it will become a central part of the community. Overall, the team is confident that the new rally area will be a success, and that it will become a vibrant and active part of the community.
What you’re looking for may be on bulletin board

By Laura Bates

Looking for something to do during the spring term? Look no further than the Student Union and spend the afternoon reading the bulletin board located outside of California.

The large sections of board contain a vast array of information, whether it be anything from a Paws2Paws contest to a 140 Park Unit baseball tournament. Written down in grid format, these notices are filled with information on everything from music and art events to student organizations.

One of the main benefits of the bulletin board is that it’s free to post and can be accessed by anyone on campus. This means that if you have an event that you want the student body to know about, you can simply write it down and hang it up.

Another benefit is that it’s a great way to get involved with student organizations. Many organizations post signs on the board advertising their meetings and events, so you can easily find out what interests you.

In addition, the bulletin board is a great way to stay informed about what’s happening on campus. Whether you’re looking for a new club to join or just want to know what’s going on in your student organization, the bulletin board has got you covered.

So next time you’re on campus, be sure to stop by the Student Union and check out the bulletin board. You never know what you might find!

"The Great Heidelberg Spring Cleaning Hunt"

To announce the opening of our new Recycling Center at Moscow/Pullman.

This Sunday afternoon your local Heidelberg Beer distributor is introducing a major new recycling program. He's doing it with "The Great Heidelberg Spring Cleaning Hunt," to be held from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. at W. S. U. Campus, Ferryway and Stadium Way, just south of French Administration Building.

There'll be live entertainment by SLEEPY JOHN and other bands. Special prizes. And, more important, mobile collection vans to help you fight litter in your city. Our distributor will pay you 25 cents per case for empty Heidelberg bottles, 12 cents per case for Heidelberg cans. And while we can't make payment for empties other than our own, this Sunday only we'll accept any bottle or can and pass it on to the proper recycling facility. "The Great Heidelberg Spring Cleaning Hunt." It's our way of introducing you to our Moscow/Pullman Recycling Center opening Thursday, April 22nd at Bennett Distributing, 820 Harold Street, Moscow, and Main and Bridge Streets, Pullman. There, from noon to 5 p.m., Thursday and Saturday, you can turn in Heidelberg empties at the above rates. Good hunting!
