Music activities open to all

by ROY OYATS

There is no saucer for students at the University of Idaho in last minute, which is the case at the University of Idaho. The U of I Music Department, and Moscow State University, do not have any saucers, but they do have saucers, which are available to all students, and the public. The U of I Music Department offers a variety of music activities for students, including an orchestra, a symphony, a band, and a jazz ensemble. The Moscow State University offers an orchestra, a symphony, a band, and a jazz ensemble. Rehabilitation association

The Greater Show in the Day, a community event sponsored for March 25, will be sponsored by the Idaho State Chapter of the National Rehabilitation Association.

The program will consist of several events designed to accurately represent the barriers that are found on campuses. They will demonstrate how students face these barriers, and how they overcome them. The event will be held on the university's main campus, and will be open to the public.

The event will begin with a series of lectures, which will focus on the barriers that students face, and how they overcome them. The lectures will be followed by a series of workshops, which will provide students with the skills and knowledge needed to overcome these barriers.

Kibbee Dome open to public

The ASU Kibbee Dome will be open for general student use starting on April 1, according to a spokesman for the university. The dome has been closed to the public since 1976.

"The Kibbee Dome is a significant facility for students," the spokesman said. "It provides a unique opportunity for students to interact with the university community, and to engage in a wide variety of educational and cultural activities. The dome is an important part of the university's commitment to student success, and we are pleased to open it to the public."
The menace of agribusiness consolidation

Culled by the Potent Force of Reason

Check the sources of the meat in your grocery store. The vast majority is likely derived from the 34,000 US cattle feedlots. Grassy, free-range cattle tend to need only a third of the water and feed of those that are intensively reared. There is a tight moral conflict between the climate and water crisis, and the need to feed America. Grass-fed beef is not only better for your health, but also for the planet.

New technology has made it possible to produce beef on a Dollard farm that is as nutritious as that of a grass-fed cow, while using only 6% of the land and 5% of the water. The Dollard farm is sustainable, regenerative, and resilient.

The Dollard farm is also a model of social equity, where all workers share in the profits, and the farm is a living laboratory for educating the next generation of farmers and scientists.

Agrarian reform is necessary to address the crisis of climate change, biodiversity loss, and social inequality. The Dollard farm provides a vision of a future where agriculture is a source of hope and renewal.

The Dollard farm is part of a broader movement towards a just and sustainable food system. Together, we can create a world where all people have access to healthy, affordable food, and where the planet is able to sustain us.

The Dollard farm is a work in progress, and we welcome your support and participation in this transformative journey.

Idaho coed hospitalized

A 22-year-old female student from Nampa, ID, was injured in an auto accident on I-5 near the Idaho State University campus. She was transported to the Idaho Medical Center, where she is currently recovering.

University of Idaho students and faculty members expect the school to be active in offering several social and cultural events.

The agenda for the next week includes the following:

- "The John Doe Lecture Series" on the history of women in education.
- "The Jane Smith Film Festival" featuring feminist films from around the world.
- "The Robert Brown Poetry Slam" featuring students and faculty members reading their work.

The events are open to all students and faculty members. For more information, contact the Office of Student Life at 208-882-8321.

FRANCOIS DE BOURDEON
Reflections of a college graduate

I have been noticing that I am going through some profound changes in my personality. I am no longer the person I once was. The changes are so sudden and difficult that I realize now that it will take me some time to accept the new personality.

The first significant aspect of college education that has struck me is the difference in attitude of the students. I find that the students are less materialistic.

I have since analyzed the change and have come up with some interesting conclusions. I believe that the atmosphere at school is more conducive to change as it is not as materialistic.

In conclusion, the atmosphere of the school is more conducive to change than that of the old world. It is a new world, and I am glad to be a part of it.

The only thing I will have to keep my sanity together.

Chairman Dick Boerger, on June 4, 1970, during the 5th Annual State Convention of the Idaho State University Republicans. I remember him because of his strong identity, and it is that identity which I am looking for in college.

I am looking for a man who is strong and confident. I have found that I am a strong student.

I have lost all my doubts, and I am ready to make a change in my life even when just in the uniform world.

Count peanuts gains prize

"Guess me in a National Peanut March" is the theme of the Moscow-Latah County Library System's peanut counting contest starting February 1st at the Moscow branch.

We've recycled that peanut-shaped styrofoam you put tracked around through Dr. Seuss, put it to good work. Perhaps you can help us figure out who this year's prizewinner is. Write us and let us know who you think it is. The person who guesses correctly will be invited to the范 "seed" ceremony, held in a small room off the front of the library. The winner will receive a peanut-shaped prize.

Emery speaks: self-sufficiency

Self-sufficiency can't really happen? Will it be the subject as an hour and 15 minutes is devoted to the topic? At 7:30 WED. at the AMC on the campus of Western Illinois University. Emery will be the guest speaker.

Emery has been in the urban jungle of Los Angeles and in the wilds of Montana, talking to U of I students and community members about the problem of the urban sprawl and the "art of self-sufficiency." She describes herself as an "unsurpassed" in the interests to collect and sell her knowledge through several years of traveling in different conditions from Illinois to Wyoming. Emery holds a B.A. degree in political science and has gone cross-country several times in the United States, bringing her rich experience to the topic of the day. She is an expert in the area of self-sufficiency and will be able to provide valuable insights into the topic.

"Hairy" is freeflowing and alive...
The WSI Coliseum will stage the 1976-77 University of Illinois musical comedy production of "Hairy" March 3.
The troupe, the only existing group of Hair in the United States, has experienced a great deal of success in its previous appearances, particularly in Phoenix and Denver before coming over to the west coast," according to Robert Schwartz, the American Director at the WSI Coliseum. They will play Portland and Seattle before coming to Pullman.

The one commercial "Hair," recorded with original rock music for the first time and a Broadway show, is one of Broadway's biggest running musicals. From October 1967, when it first opened in New York through August 1973, 26 million people have attended the show, and the original cast was sung and sold in 14 different languages.

In 1968 Bob MaDerot won Dance Star-Venus Ria Award for composing the best musical plot of the season. In addition to Hair, MaDerot has written scores for "The Thri狭窄 Night," "Congo Comes to Harlem," "Tell Me," a JaUN, a Musical at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York as part of the third anniversary celebration of Hair.

An original cast was selected by Brussell's. There were 15,000 hopefuls. Today, after 15 re-takes, the show has 21 numbers (6 times as many as in the book of hair), and there are 10,000 songs on the album.

The orchestra, in its fourth season, is made up of Moscow Conservatory and Washburn Conservatory members. Lauded from the U of I and WSU.

Dr. Ronald W. Smith, dean of the U of I Graduate School and associate research, will address the U of I social science Seminar Thursday evening at 7 p.m. at the Administration Building, 5930 S. University Ave.

The seminar is sponsored by the U of I Department of Social Science and the U of I Graduate School.

Dr. Smith's talk will follow a buffet dinner at 7:30 p.m. Both are open to the public.

Reservations for the dinner and both are eligible for study at colleges, vocational and technical schools, paraprofessional and vocational, and secondary educational institutions, graduate study or research; funded on national, regional, and local levels by the federal government, state agencies, foundations, legacies, teaching grants, trade unions, professional associations, fraternal organizations, and other organizations.

The seminar is available for both averages as well as excellent students, both with and without need.

OSHA book explains rights

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) of the U.S. Department of Labor has prepared a pamphlet prepared for workers rights under the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The pamphlet also contains general information on safety and health hazards, workplace inspection, employees' rights, and OSHA enforcement. The pamphlet is available from local OSHA offices or by writing to the Department of Labor, OSHA, Washington, D.C.

OSHA's enforcement rights (OSHA) for the Act, such as the labeling and safety inspection rights, cannot be obtained by any other right. Federal employees who have the rights to make public safety compliance or to wage a health and safety inspection of employees, their fellow employees, and the government.

Washington, Oregon, and Alaska have been affected by the federal environmental and health hazards. The pamphlet is available from the state health department in these states.

Big Sky Action

With the Big Sky Conference first Basketball Tournament just three weeks away, the possibilities of a tie for the conference lead, aCompatible game and a berth to the regular tournament, are all there.

The winner of the regular season Conference title will host the best conference games of the year, and in his quarter final game, the winner will get the first chance to meet the strong opponent from the conference's other teams.

At this point, both Boise State and Idaho State appear to have the edge in the final regular season standings. Both at 5-1, both have won their last five games, and only two teams have lost to the conference so far.

Boise State and Northern Arizona also have three days at the Tournament but spot, playing two games each day at home, finishing their schedules on the road against Idaho State and Montana. Both have won all three of their conference games so far, but only Boise State has a chance to win it all.

The Tournament will determine the conference champions, and the two schools that win both games will move on to the final four. Boise State has won three of its four conference games, but the balancing Boone State, Montana, and Montana State. All three teams can still qualify for the tournament, and it is a long shot to win, but there is a chance.

In this world of conditional existence, it is too easy to lose the essentials which we hold too dear. The key to contentment is to survey our lives, find the essentials which we need and build our activities around them. That is the goal of collegiate athletics: the second is to make our sports events enjoyable.

The second goal is to be involved in collegiate athletics is second only to the goal of making our sports events enjoyable. In my position in Sports, I have found that we must have defined necessity for our events to continue. We can not overplan; we are given a few weeks and a budget, but the individual must be involved. The selection process has been meticulous and predicated on the premise that all essential events are not counted.

The first goal is for "Understanding Athletics." This includes the study of sports psychology and the major role Frogan plays in a manager's career. We cannot talk to a college athlete without Frogan's name being in your mouth. Frogan can help an athlete who is in the face of adversity as well as one who is not. Frogan helps give a young individual something to hold on to. Frogan is the answer.

Frogan has the last word on that. As a boy, Frogan's achievements made our hearts soft and we stood up for our good causes. As a man, Frogan's achievements made us stronger. As a father, Frogan's achievements made our children strong. As a husband, Frogan's achievements made our marriages strong.

The concept of "Understanding Athletics" is being expanded in athletes for the upcoming season. The key to success in our programs is to give the athletes an understanding of the game. We have found that understanding is the key to success. The athlete who understands his sport is a better athlete.

The concept of "Understanding Athletics" is being expanded in coaches for the upcoming season. The key to success in our programs is to give the coaches an understanding of the game. We have found that understanding is the key to success. The coach who understands his sport is a better coach.

The concept of "Understanding Athletics" is being expanded in officials for the upcoming season. The key to success in our programs is to give the officials an understanding of the game. We have found that understanding is the key to success. The official who understands his sport is a better official.

The concept of "Understanding Athletics" is being expanded in the general public for the upcoming season. Washington was not an intellectual but a man of action. He was not naturally given to deep, abstract thought or belief. While Adams and Jefferson were fond of reading philosophy and theology, he was never interested in either. Washington received the country and occupied himself with merely non-spiritual real pursuits. It was James Madison's opinion that "the President's mind was a blank," and he agreed with Hamilton that "Washington furnishes a fair argument for Christianity, and for the different forms of religion, as it is that he had tempered definite opinions on the subject." There is virtually no evidence in Washington's Diaries or his correspondence that he ever committed the Christian religion. He accepted Christianity as a matter of social conformity, but he was not a Christian in the traditional sense. There are few remarks in his private correspondence and diaries which have a touch of religion. He once wrote in his diary that he would like to have collected his own sermon on Sundays, but he declined because the people living on his land were not interested. He agreed with John Adams when he wrote: "Writing to La Fayette with regard to religious toleration, he says: "being no sign myself, I am disposed to indulge the professors of Christianity in the church with that road to heaven, which is shown shall serve the same direct, obvious, easier, and less liable to be taken at all cost."

It seems that the only deep source of religious feeling was in the direction of religion as an instrument for morality. He was a nominal Episcopalian who accepted the Church of England in the same way he accepted Masonry and Freemasonry. He was a Mason of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and participated in Consecration. Washington was always strong in his personal convictions. He was a strict Temperance advocate who criticized the popes in his own papers. He was a man of few words and a rare example by not causing the Lord's Supper.

The word "Jesus Christ" appears only once in all of Washington's writings, and that was in his will. He stated: "I have no doubt of the truth of "Christianity." The word that he most often used is "Providence," the most non-sectarian and impersonal word for deity. There are singular references to the phrases "pagan religion" and "homeland;" but there are no general and vague "the conclusions." He was a scientist and friend of Franklin, and he wrote to Washington in a group of 233 members who submitted a number of questions for Washington to answer. Since he never answered any political trials, Christianity was one of the questions. As he said: "I can be a Christian. Washington very kindly answered all of the questions except that crucial one." The answer he Washington showed for all Christian denunciation was another sign of his religious liberalism. There is no firm evidence that Washington was a Christian. Washington's view of religion and church were that of a liberal, but not as liberal as his friend Thomas Jefferson. He was, as his grandson, John Noah, put it: "He was not a Christian, in the ordinary sense of the word, "Providence,"" and that is the word." Washington firmly believed in the institutions of church and state. Probably the most interesting and controversial expression of this principle, in which Washington played a part, appears in the Treaty of Tripoli. Article Eleven of this treaty reads: "As the United States of America are not in any sense a Theocracy, it is not in any sense involved in the Christian religion."
