Sorority squeal loses voice, past

By Roger E. Jones
Of the Argonaut

For the first time in many years "Squeal Day" the selection of sorority pledge classes -- was not held in its traditional manner.

At 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, the traditional time and place, on the Administration Building lawn, the traditional location, nothing happened.

No groups of college or non-college, no opening of envelopes, no screams of joy, no hugs, no tears, and of course no squeals. The Administration lawn lay empty.

The annual event, which has marked the ending of sorority rush and kicked off fraternity rush, has been changed. Instead of the large, exciting event which was given university-wide attention, the Panhellenic Council decided to, drampen it down to a sheltered affair.

The female rushers experienced their squeal in the confines of Theophilus Tower, where they had been spending their nights during rush.

At 4 p.m. the girls who were waiting in their rooms at the time, received their envelopes with the name of the sorority inside which had chosen them for membership.

Screams of joy were heard clearly from outside the 11 story building. The girls then went, by elevator or stairway, to the floor assigned to their new sorority. There select few representatives from each sorority anxiously waited.

Soon afterwards, the doors to the tower were opened with teams of girls coming out and happy groups, some of them wearing new pledge shirts, some still hanging in red of having it all over. Delight and relief dominated the emotions on the new pledges faces, but a few tears were seen.

According to Panhellenic Adviser Dianne Millhun, the change was made "to save the girls' feelings." Negative feelings abound among many sorority women about the old "Squeal Day.

Representatives of the council no longer considered it necessary to put the girls on public display. Rush is felt to be a very critical and emotional time in a girl's college life, and to

Station flips to FM band
Old KRPL is new KZFN? Old Coke is new...

By Carolyn Beasley
Of the Argonaut

The radio station that used to be KRPL is now a country station with the same call letters, whereas the former country station is the old KRPL, with new call letters/KZFN. But actually it's a new channel with a similar format (almost as difficult to understand as the new Coke).

KRPL management applied for more power about four years ago and finally received the go-ahead last year according to the Tom Neal, general station manager. The attenna is now located beside the KUID TV radio stations on to of Paradise Hill. And it has boosted the new FM station from 180 watts to 60,000, 60 times that of its predecessor, he said.

Although the new station will continue to play top-40 hits, that won't be the limit of what's played. "We are now a contempora-ry station," Chief Announcer Steve Shannon explained. The station now plays a potpourri of music. "We'll play a lot of new things others don't touch as well as the older," he said. Meanwhile KRPL AM will switch to a contemporary country music format with more news coverage. This will include coverage of both the university and high school football games, Neal said.

The reason for the change, according to Shannon, is to be able to include both universities as an audience. "We have an ad- vantage over other stations," he explained, "because we can respond to the audience on a local level.

When KRPL was an A.M. sta- tion it was number one, Shannon said, but the distance between one and two was decreas- ing.

"Music sounds better on FM," he explained. When the station decided to make the flip- flop, it didn't want to do it in a "whimsy way," Shannon said.

The change-over, according to Shannon, occurred only after piles of paper work was filed. So this gave them time to work out calls and to form a new image, he said.

"I know that with the per- sonalities here and the way we set up our station, we have a winning station," Shannon said.

While KRPL can be found at 1400 AM, the new KZ-FM is located at 106.1, right across from the a.m. station, Neal said. "We went about this more from the viewpoint that Idaho needs a more powerful radio sta- tion, rather than that we need more money," Neal said.

tax to five cents on the dollar. Such tax increase could be ex- pected to raise revenues by ap- proximately $60 million. But 25 percent of that ($15 million) would go to cities and counties, another $7 million for "budget adjustments," and $20 million for state MCO and that leaves only approximately $18 million to be divided amongst all the state agencies. Higher education share would be some- where around two and a half million dollars.

The two main budget re-quests areas of the universities in this FY 1987 budgets deal with "facultly salary equity" and "economic development" as it related to job creation. With the timber and mining industries faulting in the state, the pro-grams offered should be mer- ced on their capabilities of generating jobs, said Robert Montgomery, a board-member.

Governor John Evans also made his concerns known at the board's budget hearing through a letter to Biaine Bilyeu.
New KUID manager: will he teach?

By Bryan Clark

Although the new KUID-TV station manager will begin work today, it is unclear whether his duties will include teaching. The job description for the position of station manager, KUID, lists teaching “at least one course per semester” as a requirement of the establishment - an elected governing board.

The ad hoc committee was appointed this summer by ASUI President Jane Freund, who was the chair. It included representatives from the Argonaut, the Photo Bureau, KUID-FM, the Gem of the Moutains, and ReproGraphics. ASUI Vice-President Mike Trail also served, but did not attend the meeting last week when the final proposal was agreed upon.

Freund, expressing satisfaction with the results, said she would prepare a legislative package to implement the recommendations. Some bills may be presented to the ASUI Senate this Wednesday, at its first meeting of the fall.

“A lot of these changes are not uncontroversial,” Freund said. “These changes are ones that we have needed for some time. This would help us up a lot.”

ASUI Comm may reorganize

Some college courses are more exciting than others.

How many college courses teach you how to shoot the rapids? Or rappel a cliff? Or find your way out of a forest with nothing but a map and compass to guide you?

At least one does — Army ROTC.

And you could find yourself doing any one of a number of exciting adventure training activities like these in the Army ROTC program.

Activities that develop your stamina. And your self-confidence.

But adventure training isn’t the only way you develop. You’ll also learn the basics of leadership and management by attending ROTC classes, along with the subjects in your major.

And you’ll be excited about two other benefits Army ROTC offers. Financial assistance. Up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of Army ROTC. And the opportunity to graduate with both a degree and a commission in today’s Army — including the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

Next summer too late for action

This issue of the Idaho Argonaut contains a great many stories going the goings-on of the ASUI student government over the past year. An unfortunate event in our reporter’s writing was the mechanization used to conduct summer voting, the process, or lack of it. Under the ASUI Constitution the president is the “official representative and spokesperson” for the students. The president assumes the power and authority of the president in her or his absence. The rules and regulations require them to maintain physical residence in Moscow for the entire summer, and they are compensated at the same rate as during the rest of the year.

Senators retain their powers over the summer, but are not required to be in Moscow, nor are they given compensation from the ASUI when they are here. This summer, the senators who were in Moscow were around the ASUI offices very little.

The ASUI rules and rega state the vice-president “may, in times of emergency or vacation, secure a vote by telephone or letter...” That’s all they say on this crucial matter, which is many ways surprising, since they are otherwise so long and dry as a trip across southern Idaho.

At the end of the spring semester, under duress from the UI financial administration, a hasty and disorganized package of ASUI budget bills was presented to senators who were primarily thinking about the end of school and getting out of town.

This started off a trail of vetoes and internal political struggles within the student government on how to conduct summer voting: from informing the senators in to learning the details, and some process of holding informed debate.

It is clear there is no method to their summer madness. It is also clear the time to fill this process void is now, while the elected officials who were involved are still in office. Because if the problem is not taken care by the people who lived through the past, the student leaders will quite possibly have no idea it existed.

Gentel can be hard on you

Even prior to the irrational break-up of the once-superv
American telephone system, General Telephone’s record of customer service was infamous.

While malignancy is a term most often associated with cancer, it is not an inappropriate adjective to use when referring to the local GTE marketing department. At least twice a week, we wait, watching, not sure the ASUI communications departments are located.

We are not alone in our suffering of lengthy waits and then finding it is some system part the promised day. But when we got ours, we got it. It was both deadline day, and by either coincidence or design (although the latter is a more likely answer), on Tuesday it was also the day the UI “Mini-Directory” was completed. Our new numbers were not listed, because we didn’t have them until.

Since the 1985 Blue Key Campus Directory will not be out for a while, we are listing for your information and convenience — and for ours — how we can be reached.

You say ‘Hello’, I say ‘Good-bye’

Lewis Day

The boxes are all loaded in the truck, the le-tones attached all over. The keys have all been returned to the proper authorities. The Argonaut desk has been emptied of personal belongings. All the cartoons have come down on the bulletin board, along with the Micro film schedule. It’s time to have one last go at the keyboard.

A swan song is probably not what most people project to act as their last issue of a university newspaper, but then the Argonaut never has been a typical student newspaper. And I probably haven’t been the quintessential newspaper writer/editortexture. So this is my last for today, and final goodbye.

I came to the University of Idaho in the fall of 1980, fresh from a summer spent cleaning roofs in post-Mt. St. Helens Spokane. Moscow and the UI were just what was needed for some one who just couldn’t seem to get the “college thing” going.

When I rolled into town for the first time since 1973, I was amazed at the changes. David’s was gone. There were two malls and there was that giant Budweiser can half-buried behind Memorial Gym. I made a pact with myself to stay in Moscow until some kind of degree was mine.

That pact has been fulfilled — much to the surprise of a great many people. The degree, by the time it was within sight, was important not for what it was, but for what it represented. No one in my immediate family had ever been graduated from high school, much less college; sticking things out had never been too important to me — running away had always been so much easier; I lost several family members early on in my career here. Getting through a bachelor’s degree came to represent more than just coursework and education — it became a challenge to do something with my life. And something has been done, many somethings.

That the universe and community afford ed me the opportunity to grow as a person — while studying history, writing, and various languages (with varying degrees of success) — is something which I can never begin to repay.

That license for growth and change is also something wonderfully unique about this place.

It is peculiar and special that Moscow and the community have grown into a community which is murturing, tolerant and protective; it is an environment for growth. There is real magic in Moscow, and it is centered in the word community. The university and town have attracted some truly special people. There are really no tangible reasons for the combinations to exist here, but they do, and the people here make education at UI more than books, papers and exams. It is the difference between living and merely existing.

These wonderful folks are scattered throughout the campus and town, and finding them is an experience in serendipity. The discovery is sometimes immediate — as with a professor who cares less for grades than for imparting the love of a subject; sometimes it takes time to find these human diamonds — no matter how long the wait, the process changes you before you know it. It is the most enriching part of the education this community has to offer. And no credit is offered.

A swan song should probably be filled with kudos and acknowledgments of those who have been helpful and special in the past, but I have thanked people in the past (in person and print). What I have to say in imparting is by way of advice from someone who’s been around the block more than a few times.

New students — get to know the people who man the place. Go spend some time getting to know yourself too. Instead of racing through 20 credits a semester, take 14 (or even 12) credits. Go see Palouse Falls and Kamikaze Flute.

Not-sorwful students — slow down a bit, and make sure your priorities are ordered before you go out into the “real world.” As short-lived and transitory as this existence can be, it is the most important of your life.

Perks, staffers and local folk (I know you’re out there) — take time to have a cup of coffee or a glass of beer with a student or two. Most of us, like most of you, are pretty shy, and need for someone to make the first move (and, after all, rank hath its privileges). I guarantee you won’t be disappointed.

That’s about it for my swan song. It really is goodbye and thank you.

ASUI President Jane Freund sees solving a $61,000 operating loss, working with the Idaho Legislature and the State Board of Education, and arranging the student government into a more business-like organization as her major challenges in the coming semester. Marine gets first woman C.O.

By Bryan Clark

Of the Argus

As Marine Col. Janice Scott assumed command of the University of Idaho Naval ROTC unit last week, she became the first female commander in the country. Regulations permitting women C.O.s were passed only two years ago.

Scott replaces Navy Capt. James Davis, whose three-year tour of duty at the UI is completed. Davis is retiring from the navy after 27 years of service.

Women served as "executive officers" — second-in-command — units and as commanding officer of the NROTC units and as commanding officer of the ROTC units of other services. Since the Department of the Navy administers both the Navy and Marine Corps, officers of either service may command one of the 86 NROTC units.

"When the position of commanding officer of the UI NROTC unit was offered, I readily accepted," said Scott. She said she enjoys teaching very much and "it will be a challenge to work with the men and women who will be the future of the Armed Forces and instill them with a sense of pride in their service."

Scott attributed her becoming the first female C.O. to past education and luck. She said "in addition to my academic credentials, I was simply in the right place at the right time." She had applied for the job as executive officer of the NROTC unit at the University of Washington in 1983 and, although she did not receive the appointment, Scott said that that helped her get aboard at the UI.

Scott, a Washington native, has a B.A. in French and M.A. degrees in comparative literature, human relations, and health facility management. In addition to her background in the humanities, she has had training in Systems Engineering, Army Intelligence and aerial reconnaissance.

She has also served as an instructor and company commander at the women's officer school in Virginia.

Scott did not look at the Marine Corps when she was initially interested in the Armed Services. Poor eyesight made Navy duty impossible and it was then she found the Marines accepted women to be officers, through Officer Candidate School. At that time women were not allowed to be members of ROTC units, or the Naval Academy. Imposed by the army of programs that the Corps offered, she entered the Marines.

Even though women have been allowed to be in ROTC units since 1983, only 4% of the academic academies for several years now, Scott is still one of only 200 women officers in the Marine Corps.

Col. Scott does not plan any drastic changes at the Navy unit in the near future, and will simply observe the function of the command for a few months before making any alterations. "The unit appears to be performing quite well and I can't think of any changes that should be made."

Scott said she doesn't think her being a woman will affect the basic philosophy of the command. She also said, however, "While I don't think we should tend toward androgyny, my personality will affect the unit, just as any other new commanding officer."

As the new commanding officer, Scott will stress fields of endeavor for students of high priority for the Navy. Among these are the Navy's nuclear power program, aviation service, and, of course, the Marine Corps option.

Scott plans to learn as much as she can from the man she is replacing, Capt. James Davis, before he leaves next month.

Scott advises women for the Corps, look at the NROTC. "I think about entering the military service. "Decide what you want out of the Armed Forces, look at all the branches of the military and find the one that will give you what you desire."

Vandals begin "Road to Tacoma"

By Greg Kimler
The Argonaut

1. Big Sky media poll...
2. Big Sky coaches poll...
3. Street and magazine head coach drool, right.

"Pre-season polls are all over-rated, you can't really put much stock in them at all." Vandals head coach Dennis Erickson said of his silver and gold squad's pre-season picks. "Teams who are picked high in this type of conference can finish dead last."

But the Vandals head man appears more assured of his 1985 edition of Erickson's Air Express.

"We'll be competitive for the championship this year," Erickson said. "In this league you need a solid defense, I feel this year's defense may be our best, we have good overall speed and depth.

Along with an improved defensive team, Idaho will once again have one of the top offensive shows in Division I-AA ball.

The Vandal style of offensive show has produced over eight million yards of offense in just the last five years since Erickson took over the Idaho helm. 10,709 through the airways and 4,906 on the ground.

At the controls of Erickson's Air Express for the second year is junior Scott Linehan. Linehan suffered a serious shoulder injury, the Vandals averaged over 39 points per game.

I completed 60% of this passers of 318 (2nd in BSC) for 2,407 yards and 17 touchdowns with 10 interceptions.

"Another conference that is loaded with quarterbacks," Erickson said. "The same goes for the Valley. Scott Linehan is as good as any of them."

In fact, this year's receiving end of Linehan's aerials will also be improved with the return of Scott Auier and Eric Varberg.

The defense also saw linebacker Chad Mckinney (54) finished 1.3 in conference receiving in 1984.

"They're as good as any in this conference, they've proven it over the years," said one of his two top receivers. "And they're not satisfied, they're working all out for their jobs."

The two will have ample time to open the Idaho offensive line returns with only 2nd team guard Lance Thibodeaux (lating), Davin Dave Thibodeaux, Mark Caldwell, guards Joe for "Another year," said Erickson. And All Big Performer Matt Watson all return to keep the Express in motion.

"Once again, I feel our offensive line is as strong as you can get, and the running back field, the kick off, we feel we have that," Erickson said. "And we've started for us the last couple of years, Joe's now a senior."

The main cause of concern offensively is the defensive staff has been at the running back spot. Gone from last year's backfield are last year's Big Sky fifth and sixth yard rushers Tucker, Martin Benard, and Mike Shiff.

The place we have to be better is at the tailback and fullback spots," Erickson said. "We need some people to come through for us all over.

So far, no one has stepped forward to step into the starting backfield for the Vandals.

"Steve Burris has been hampered by injury a little and Fred (Lloyd) is coming off of an tiny, we know how to adapt," Erickson said. "Tom Bundy has looked as good as the two freshmen (Greg Dial and Todd Holtzee).

Another question for the UI braintrust is at the kicker spot. Gone are Tim McQuillen and his UI career high 224 points. The McQuillen, we will miss more than anyone," Erickson said of his departed sidekickers. Lack of kickers was sometimes, like hitting the expressway, a 30 yard field goal. This spring without was devastating.

With one, Erickson's approval to fill Idaho's all-time punter shoes with freshmen Brad Decoto and Eimberling.

"The Vandal's are deep in the defensive line, we'll be competitive for the championship this year," Erickson said. "But we feel we're better, we've changed our alignment to a 5-2 set, which we originally used here but changed because of all the injuries we have had. We have the depth now," Erickson said.

Most evident of the depth is at the defensive line, a spot last year it was hard to keep up with all the different names.

Returner John Andrews, Mike Bailey, Dave Young and Daryn Young will be joined by Seniors, John and Joe. The Vandal's transfer from Southern Colorado this season.

"We're excited about Joe. We played Southern Colorado a few years ago and we watched films of him, he could transfer anywhere and play. We're happy to have him play for us," Erickson said.

Southern Colorado dropped their football program enabling Tid to be eligible this year.

Defensive line replacement Wunderland's services to UI defense is still up in the air for the whole season.

Erickson is equally happy about his backfield returners.

"The key is to Henssey, playing well and leadership wise. The last four games he played well for us including a win against Boise State. Mike Cox really matured for us last year in his rookie year."

Flanking the two in the middle will be outside backers Dave Parker, Nolan Harper, Tom and Troy Ballard.

The kick return area should be a Vandal highlight with Brant Bengen (1st kick-off return) and Yarbrr (1st punt return) displaying their moves.

"The Vandal's "Road to Tacoma" begins September 7 when they travel to Corvallis, Oregon to tangle with Pac-10 member Oregon State.

"To start with a Pac-10 team has it's good and bad points," Erickson said. "They are a larger school but the kids are excited and it's a real good gauge of how good we are."

"The next two weeks are important that we continue to improve," Erickson said. "The and staying healthy will be important.

Preview tournament.

The Wyoming tournament will feature teams from United States (2), Wyoming, Montana, Long Beach State and Idaho. The BYU competition will feature 16 collegiate squads.

"The Wyoming tournament will have some very good caliber of play," Bradetich said. "Both Wyoming and Nebraska were in the nation's Top Twenty last year."

When it comes to the MWAC Bradeich feels that the Wyoming is the favorite to defending conference and national champions, Portland State.

"Portland State has a very good program and coach," Bradetich said of last year's champ. "They return two All-American settlers and an All- American quarterback."

But the second year coach is optimistic of his team's chances in the MWAC war.

"I really feel that we have a good blend of the old and the new," Bradetich said. "The other teams in our conference can't really figure out what we have this year."

The Vandals will feature a fast pace offense and a quick defensive look during the 1985 campaign.

"The strength of our team is our leadership and our commitment to each other," Bradetich said. "Our number one goal is to believe in each other."

Bradeich will be joined this year on her staff by assistant Steve Heilmann and Frazer.

"Steve come to us from Colorado State and can communicate with individuals very well, he helped us out already and Steve will work with the backs. He has a real good idea of the game."

"We're very excited about this year," Bradetich concluded. "We're starting over from scratch this year, but all the signs say we can do it."

September 6, 7, with Gonzaga, Eastern Washington, Pullman, and Idaho (at home).

"It will be good for us because it will be our first test," Bradetich said. "We'll try using different combinations and defense to get a chance to play."

Following the Canyon of Champions, Bradetich's troops will travel to Laramie Wyoming for the Wyoming Invitational September 13, 14 and finish the round trip with a visit to Provo. Utah for the Brigham Young Idaho Argonaut, Monday, August 26, 1985 7

Entering her second year as head coach of the University of Idaho volleyball team, Pam Bradeich has her hands full but out for the match her initial year's marks, 20-14 overall and a 5-2 in the Mountain West Athletic Conference.

Along with those impressive numbers, the Vandals must go into this season without the services of departed seniors Jenny Fronhoffer, Jennifer Bean, Sandi Hulwe, Laub and Julie Holsinger.

"I don't feel that we could ever replace our four," Bradetich said. "But I think we can do very well this year if they gave us last year." "That should be an up to the.list of names to watch. Kelly Neely, Laura Burns (all seniors) and Neile Gan Gusti, (junior)." Bradetich said. "It's up to us to see the example of how we want it."

Beside these four and junior Melinda Van, the Vandals young squad as the remainder of the roster consists of seven freshmen and several newcomers are Sue Gillette, Sally Eyer, Robin Robuck, Darw Columbia, Josh Christensen, Terri Plum and Julie Hansen.

Another team that will likely be redshirt enabled the Vandals a second year next year.

Two or three of the freshmen will have to come in and help," Bradeich said. "They're not quite ready to jump into the experience. It just depends on how fast they mesh with our system hand Idaho."

"That's why I like early non-conference matches," Bradetich said. "We play in the Mountain West Classic and some very competitive schools. It should be a good experience for everybody.

Ah, a 'Scow Summer
Greg Kilmer

Well, it's over.
I just enjoyed another summer in Moscow. Closest thing to a vacation was having a Cape Codder or a Long Island ice tea at the Garden.
For all you Idaho summer virgins out there, let me fill you in on a typical Moscow day. Lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer.
First and foremost you have to be a survivalist: ya gotta make due with what ya got, especially for a sport's enthusiast.
I realize that we're out there where the deer and the antelope do whatever they do, but day after day of Skip Carey bitching and moaning about the Braves and Dave Niehaus lie to us about how exciting the Mariners are, it drove me nuts.
I know it's nice of Teddy Turner and the folks of KSTW to bring us America's pastime but give me the NW and those Cobbles, even with half their club on the DL, they're a lot better. Gotta love W/Addison (Rowland's mail-in) and beautiful Wrigley Field.
Driven from the tube, one must wonder how many times the craziest ever.
Every year I see that bastard damned clamds clammed around and some real friendly folk.
Nothing better than hitting the couch with a Corona while you're sitting on the beach with the old. Thank Danny, for the good time and the vision.
It's tough keeping the chase lounge in line with the maximum rays with a cold one.
Well, it's common knowledge that you can't bronze in the dark so when the sun goes down, one moreskies. Shufflerock at the Club, Triux-busters at the Garden, pool at the Corner, Kick-Off at Bucking Pong or Plantation or freak-watching at Oysters, whatever suits your particular fancy.
When one can get away from a good out-of-town encounter (like writing exciting articles about Alumni cruise boats sinking and golf course terror), one must get the hell out of Dodge.
Contrary to common belief, there are a lot of hot spots way up here in the Panama.
And pretty cool too!
A great little trip to the Littleton area takes a little jaunt down to Boyer. Grab a rack of Schaffer, run down to Sunset and take a demo water ski out for a test drive for ski hitch-hiking, grab your mirrored sunglasses and you're ready.
Back a bunch, a Granite Dam burger at the marina's greasy spoon runs you just shy of a five spot. Too bad they shut down the Big Sky Drive-in, no better way to finish off a day at the river.
Another nice little trip is brought to you by those good folks at the Outdoor Program.
Whether you're into rafting, camping, rock climbing or just about anything dealing with the outdoors, these guys will set you right and give you some advice as to where and how to do it on your own.

'NEVADA-RENO...Bene is a big school. They don't have the Hawks, Corley or Kellogg. The Allright Plus-Here Coach Chris Ault is fretting over his defensive line. QB Eric Leaver is back, but linebacker and kicker Marty Zendejas should keep the Wolfpack in the hunt.
'4 Weber State...My darkhorse, head coach Mike Peterson takes this year's team to Chico State cat when talking about his coaching staff. He's had some offensive surpses this year but was unwilling to toss up what they were.'

This could be a good one

Of the Argonaut

(July 25) Ah, beautiful Sun Valley.
Idaho's answer to the big time.

Beautiful mountains, beautiful forests, beautiful skIing, and of course those beautiful people.

I got to play blueblood this past weekend when I attended the 5th Annual Big Sky Conference Kick-Off at McCall.
I'd lost a few winks waiting for this trip; I'd been excited for weeks.

Three days of sun, golf, barbeques, social hours and rubbing elbows with the hierarchy of Idaho sportswriters.
The Big Sky office pulled off a dandy of a weekend, and everything went right for me.

Despite getting edged out for a close-to-the-pin prize, I didn't play too badly in the golf tournament — bagged a couple birdies, and didn't lose a ball on Eikloos's par-72 Robert Trent Jones, Jr. Golf Course.

I even won a little bet that I know is a very expensive bottle of Western Airlines J F P Califor nica campaign, complete with easy opening plastic cap.

Not all we know didn't go down there for all this terrific fun. It was to sit through 12 hours of eight head coaches being as optimistic as they could.

All kidding aside, I learned quite a lot over the weekend. The Big Sky is the best Division I-A conference in the nation and one of only two competitive — check the record books.

One man knows, Dave Arnold of defending national champions Montana State said of the Big Sky that it's a war with anyone who says the Big Sky isn't the best I-A conference in the nation. It's tougher winning the Big Sky championship than the national crown.

It looks like it will be pretty much the same old thing this season as several teams have a shot at the top spot in the Big Sky.

Although the official count will not be released until August, three teams seemed to pop up most for pre-season favorites: Montana State, Nevada and Idaho.

Although my first ever Big Sky, the poll followed the flow of most of my jack-writer brethren, I had a special little twinge.

Here's in — finishing order.
1. Idaho... I know it's had luck to pick us first, but I truly believe this could be the best Vandals team I've seen (though I may have seen more than my share). After recovering from a mediocre season, Scott Lincham was as good if not better than anyone in guiding his team to four consecutive season ending victories. Throw in Scott Auker, Eric Varbera, a great offensive front and get this, a defense with depth. And I add that up to a visit to Tacoma for the I-A championship. There's a little feeling in our hearts that we kickers. We'll miss you, Tim McManus.
2. Montana... Should be another fun season for the Hiway Kids.
3. Nevada-MPV Kelley Bradley is back for his junior year along with a defense featuring former All-American defensive difference winner. Like Idaho, the defensive game is suspect with Sweezy, Anders Larsson, the leading candidate for the Calcy award. Least they went pretty much injury free last year but the odds could catch up with them this year.
4. Nevada-Reno... Reno is a big school. They don't have the Hawks, Corley or Kellogg. The Allright Coach Chris Ault is fretting over his defensive line. QB Eric Leaver is back, but linebacker and kicker Marty Zendejas should keep the Wolfpack in the hunt.
5. Weber State... My darkhorse, head coach Mike Peterson takes this year's team to Chico State cat when talking about his coaching staff. He's had some offensive surpses this year but was unwilling to toss up what they were. Vue.

Remember the job QB Dave Sturman did in coming off the bench last year in Idaho's homecoming loss to the Cats and the kid did the same thing against Montana State.

5. Idaho State...If they can keep QB Nery Harris out of jail, the Bengals could surprise some people, but don't hold your breath. Harris is listed at number four with two sophomores and a one-letter senior above him. RB Merrill Hoge and a year-better defense.

6. Boise State... Stop RB John Horne and a defense and you stop the Broncos.

QB Hazen Choeske is listed as number one going into fall, and this is coming off his grand performance of zero yards passing against Idaho. The guy can scramble, but he's in deep left field when it comes to pass.

Unlike past years, Boise has no big name on defense. Carl West to game one and no seems to be willing to fill the slot.

7. Montana...You cannot get away with running the ball against the Griz in Missoula. Montana in November. Even though they feature a giant offensive line, you need a QB alla Thomas Total and Isi Redd. Montana is as good as we are with frost bitten fingers. The Grizz didn't win a conference championship and it isn't going to get one this area around.

UI loses Murphy

The University of Idaho announced August 6, that Ray Murphy has resigned as Assistant Athletic Director for Development effective September 1. Murphy, who joined the Idaho athletic department in May of 1976 as National Vandal Booster Coordinator, has accepted a position with D.A. Davidson & Co. and plans to remain in the Moscow area.

"Being an athletic freak and hard-core Vandal makes it hard to leave," said Murphy. "I will greatly miss the association I have had with coaches, athletes and Vandal Boosters throughout my nine years."

A graduate of the University of Idaho, Murphy has been "Mr. Vandal Booster" for the last decade according to Athletic Director Bill Belknap. "Ray should be very proud of what he has accomplished," said Belknap. The improvement in the competitive quality of Vandal athletics can be largely attributed to his efforts. Literally hundreds of student-athletes have received financial aid through his Vandal Booster leadership and I'm sure that he will be equally successful in his new profession," Belknap said.

ISU slapped

With Idaho State on NCAA probation, the Big Sky Conference likely will have to go to a seven-team post season basketball tournament. Big Sky Commissioner Ron Stephenson says:

The tournament next March will be held on the campus of Nevada-Reno, winner of the league championship last season. And if Reno emerges with the best record next season, that will mean that the host team will have a first-round bye.

Big Sky presidents will meet in December to determine whether the Bengals can participate in the tournament. Under terms of an NCAA sanction imposed recently for basketball violations. ISU is prohibited from participating in post-season competition and from making TV appearances during the 1985-86 season.

Stephenson said it's his guess that the other institutions won't take the chance of not sending a representative to the NCAA tournament and thus will not permit ISU to participate in the tournament.

UI's Norris steps down

Roger Norris, the University of Idaho women's track and field coach for the past seven years, has resigned the position to accept a post in the College of Education at UI.

Official word from the athletic department on how the position will be filled will be announced this week.

Norris has been the head coach since 1977. He guided the Vandal women to second place finish in the AIAW National Championships in 1981 and won Mountain West Athletic Conference titles in cross country (1982) and outdoor track (1983).

He was named the MWAC coach of the year both seasons and was a finalist for the NCAA coach of the year in 1983. Norris received his doctorate degree in education at Idaho and was a graduate assistant for the Vandal men's track team prior to his appointment as the women's coach.

see who gets the honor. And a neighbor of ours might just have a big say in the way that contest comes out.

While the Vandals are finishing their season with the Broncos Boise State at home, MSU finishes up in Pullman, squaring off against a surprisingly good WSU squad.

I see the Bobcats lacking their wounded after tangling with the much larger "RPM" boys on the other side of the border. I never believed a Cougie fan but I'll be hoping for a good of fashioned ass-kicking.

MSU will play cripplled against the Vandals and we'll continue our march to the Tacoma Dome.

The WSU. And we'll see all you Vandals fans in Tacoma come December.

...to "allow the girls a little privacy" they held the final part in the tower.

By removing the spectators, and putting the the rushers in a secluded environment similar to what their rush was in, the organizers were able to "allow the rushers to see each other as much as possible so it can be for the girls and the rushers to decide." The girls had just been through a very formal structured party. "Rush is a mutual selection opportunity," said Susan Garrett,rush chairman of Gamma Phi Beta, explained. "Initially started on Saturday, Aug. 10, as the girls went to all nine sororities. They toured each house, and each sorority different theme, for a house tour before going to the next..."

The next day, the rushers visited only six houses. On Monday, the "Meal Day", they were down to three houses. All of the activity came together on Tuesday evening called "Preference Night". That evening, only two houses were visited, each holding two formal parties.

The girls went back to the dorm and filled out their final preference sheet while the sororities converged inside the houses and did the same.

These choices were sorted and picked by the Panhellenic Council through the night and into the morning. These were the selections realized by the tower on Wednesday morning.

For the girls themselves, the rush process was "very, very tiring" and contained "a lot of running around and dashing here and there..."

The girls were not allowed to converse with any outsiders including parents during Rush to ensure the decisions would be their own. A few girls were reportedly ill and at least two had to be taken to a doctor. One rusher said, "The experience was worth it, but I'd never want to do it again."

After it was over, of the 188 WA seniors who started Rush on Saturday, 17 found themselves on Wednesday without an invitation to a house. According to Bruce Pitman, Dean of Students, this number was about the same as past years.

...recommend to the president its senior staff, the depart- ment head position, who then usually sends the names to the senate for con-sideration.

However, the appointment process has sometimes been intensely debated, especially when the nominee has been a controversial figure. A former Argonaut editor, who was rejected once, then appeared and compared it to court interruptions.

"I think it may be tough sometimes, but it is about time it was done," Friedman said. "It is a step, but the changes would not only benefit the students, but would also make the ASU communications run more smoothly."

Other recommendations include:

- Changing the title of the Director of Reproductions to ASUI Communications Operations Manager, and to rewrite the job description to include duties already per-formed.

- Establish Advertising as a separate department. This would include the duties of shaped respons-ibilities to serve RUSH and the Communications Department, as well as sell for the Argonaut.

- Placing Advertising, the Photographic, and Reprography under the Operations Manager as "sup- port services."

- Merge the Student Media General account into Communications General, primarily an administratively change.

Leases: What you see is what you get

By Chona Davis
Of the Argonaut

With the semester just around the corner comes an influx of students in search of housing. Being aware of tenant’s rights can give a potential renter a better understanding of the importance of the lease he may decide to sign.

According to Bill Kirsch from the Legal Aid Clinic, the strongest protection a tenant can have is a written lease that tenants don’t realize how binding their leases are.

"Just because a landlord hands you a lease and you don’t negotiate that lease before you sign it," he said, "And get everything in writing.

The Legal Aid Clinic has compiled a list of rights and obligations for the landlord and tenant.

The landlord has these obligations:

- Must provide reasonable waterproofing and weather protection of the premises.
- Must maintain electrical, plumbing, heating, ventilation and sanitary facilities in good working condition.
- Must maintain the premises to meet up to the city’s building standards and ensure the safety of tenants. The landlord is violating the law if he doesn’t maintain the structure of the building that is a fire hazard.
- Must comply with the tenancy laws and any section of the Idaho code that applies to landlord/tenant relations.
- Must return all security deposits within 60 days.
- Security deposits are any monies given by the tenant to the landlord for any purpose other than to pay rent. The security deposit is usually applied towards any expenses incurred by a landlord for damages caused to his property during a tenancy, with the exception of "normal wear and tear."

"Normal wear and tear" is any damage that occurred during the use and intended use of the rental unit without the negligence, carelessness, mismanagement or dereliction of the tenant and its contents.

The landlord can deduct amounts from the security deposit to cover any damage to the property. The tenant must be given a signed statement and the amount and the cost. The refund or balance of the deposit must be given or sent to the tenant within 21 days unless otherwise agreed, but not later than 30 days.

Security deposits are not intended to be for payment of rent and cannot be kept by the landlord if the lease is ended due to the landlord wrongly refusing to make repairs. The landlord may sue the landlord in small claims court to recover his security deposit. If the landlord is sued for recovering security deposits, see an attorney.

Special statutes govern mobile homes. A lease must be provided if either party wishes. Parks rules must be included in the lease to be enforced and the lessee can be evicted or exit fee. New park rules need 60 days advance notice, and can be changed on four times a year. Tenants may give the landlord 30 days notice if they are not renewing the lease, and landlords, 90.

Tenants can be evicted for non-payment of rent upon three days notice to pay or move out. If the tenants refuse, the landlord must court within 12 days for enforcement.

For month-to-month rentals, only 30 days eviction notice is required, and rent can be increased 15 days notice.

The tenants, on the other hand, have some obligations of their own. A brief review of the students plus strong on the legislature and State Board of Education to get more funding for higher education.

Funding has been a problem with the colleges and universities for some time. We never sell the pot enough and far too particularly had since the one-percent initiative.

The challenge is going to be getting more funding. To avoid the legislature and the state board the higher education is a high priority in the Idaho. Freund.

She suggested that the Idaho Legislature should look changing the tax structure as a possibility of getting more revenues for education.

The ASUI lobbyist will be in to lobby and try to cover any back rent expenses.

"I consider my campus to be the University of Idaho," Freund promised, in order to allow him or her to prepare for the legislative session. "Otherwise it becomes a last-minute rush," Freund said.

To bring the ASUI system into sync so that my successor doesn’t have to spend a great deal of time learning the ropes, is another priority. She said, "I am trying to do, with a group of help of the development heads, is put together.taking books and job descriptions."

Freund is asking that an ad hoc committee be formed to change the intention of changing the Idaho College Corporation. Only changes she would like to see is giving the president the power to freeze ASUI accounts.

"One of the big problems with our financial system is that the ASUI does not have the power to freeze it’s on-campus accounts," Freund said.

As of now the only way to freeze an account is for the senate to remove all the funds from their account. Taking that a minimum of two weeks with two sessions and it is too long.

"I believe that the ASUI President should have the power to stop action."

Another change that Freund would like to see is to have a labor day account information.

Freund said that she personally "opposes both the closure of Lewis-Clark State College and the creation of a community college that have been brought up in hearings before a legislative ad hoc committee on higher education in Boise."

"As long as I have observed the legislature ‘I’ve never seen a fiscally sound tuition proposal that would benefit the students,’" she said, adding "Idaho is one of the last states not to charge tuition and I don’t think we should return to that if the government pays for it because everyone else is."

Think that LCSC and the University of Idaho serve two different purposes...different clientele, a small number of students. I think that the fact that the LCSC is only 30 miles apart should make it of big difference."

UI to receive $50,000 grant

By Bruce Smith
Of the Argonaut

The State of Idaho has received a $875,000 grant from the National Science Foundation that could potentially bring it closer to adding NSF funds.

NSF officials said the grant, won through its Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR), "will aid in developing a proposal for further NSF funding of basic research by scientists and engineers in Idaho.

Art Gittins, UI associate vice president for research and the Idaho NSF/EPSCoR project director, said the ultimate goal for Idaho research is to have the mechanisms in place to get a bigger share of NSF funds in the future.

Current figures reveal that Idaho has "very limited success in obtaining NSF funding, ranking 49th of 50 states in proportion of federal basic research monies."

In Fiscal Year 1984, the UI spent $629 million on research.

Of the Argonaut

If you find the idea of rush too overwhelming you may find Argonaut, A Girl's Guide to Sorority Success, an important source as long as Margaret Anne Rose is not taken too seriously. But a how-to book is not necessary to the rush experience. All one needs is a little common sense, adequate grades and the ability to be yourself.

In Rush, women are referred to as girls by Rose. I believe when a female enters college she is at a age that would classify her as a woman. In the following article I do not refer to women living in sororities as girls.

Rush is serious business to Rose and her book reflects these feelings. In her book, she gives step by step instructions on how to join the sorority of your choice.

As a how-to book, Rush is acceptable. It provides all the information that a rusher could possibly want to know. Everything from resumes and recommendations, hazing and pledge ship, to fraternity parties is covered.

Rose also includes statistics concerning rush at campuses throughout the United States. For example during fall 1984 the University of Indiana had 1,983 women register for rush while the University of Idaho there were a mere 191 women.

Other trivial information Rose provides is a way to discover which campuses put sorority living above academics. This is where Rush has definite problems. Rose begins her book with serious intentions of dispelling standard sorority stereotypes.

But with sections on how some sororities may put the house above academics she is reinforcing an evident problem that sorority women do not take academics seriously. Sororities do want top grades. Most women join a house to be around an academic influence by having friends that will hopefully arrive for excellence in academics.

Also, throughout Rush, Rose promotes the idea that the only wealthy women can go through rush. "You must dress appropriately. Proper attire does not mean expensive clothes. But wearing them won't hurt." Summer vacations you have taken to the French Rivieras, Morocco, Hawaii, and so on.

It would be nice to have a few of my sorority sisters hopping over to the French Rivieras for summer vacations and of course paying for my trip too.

Her suggestions simply are not reality and from Rush one gets the feeling that to be accepted in a sorority you must not be yourself. That is primarily what the purpose of rush is, to find out where you are, an individual, will fit in the best. Rose offers the reader information on how to change your attire, make-up and clothes.

The author simply takes her subject too seriously. Rush can be an important tool in a woman's life but must also be viewed with a good sense of humor. Going through rush with an intense expectation or at least it was for me, but at the same time it was humorous.

Many of these people singing songs which mean absolutely nothing to me! During rush I encountered enough food and water to save Alaska from famine and drought for years. By the time rush is over you feel as if the whole campus knows your major. It is hard to take it all too seriously.

She does not tell the reader about all these humorous situations nor is the reader told that rush must be looked at realistically. You will not die if you do not get into the society of your preference. Happiness can be found in the dorms. Another problem is that her experience comes mainly from one area of the country, the south. Rose gathered most of her expertise by serving as rush chairman for the Zeta Tau Alpha chapter at the University of Texas.

After graduating, Rose continues working, training sorority rush by giving seminars for prospective rushers.

This summer I spent two months in Mississippi and discovered that sorority living was completely different then Idaho.

It had a definite beatutiful atmosphere and really did not seem to be a serious event. There was no stress, no rush experience that I have encountered nor heard of through other women I know in the north.

Therefore, Rush does not completely apply to every sorority in the United States and can't be taken as an ultimate authority.

Now if the prospect of joining a sorority fills you with a sense of warmth then I would suggest buying Rush, but if the idea of sorority reminds you of a medieval torture chamber-stay clear. Rose is writing a how-to book. (Note: writer Erin Fanning is a member of Rappa Squares and will not be at the University of Idaho.)

Weekly event draws buyers, sellers to Friendship Square

The Farmer's Market is very much what the creators of Friendship Square and the pedestrian-oriented downtown Moscow business district had in mind when they tore the streets up, blocked "Fourth Street" and created "people spaces". This is something the malls never will be able to reproduce in all their sterile blandness. A sunny Saturday morning in downtown Moscow is a glorious event.

Movie review

Silverado shines with quality in the 1980's

By Mike Long
Of the Argonaut

In that gigantic cloud of filmic smoke the movie industry is turning out today, there is a silver lining the movie, "Silverado." It is not that difficult to see a modern movie twice.

I entered the theatre expecting only a decent modern-day western. What I got instead was a treat that rafted rates right up there with the Duke and my old western favorites of "That Old'fartin' and 'Shane'.

As a western, this movie had everything, great scenery (John Russell, shooting music (Bruce Broughton), shoot-outs. definite heroes and villains with a variety of heartons, beautiful horses and excellent riding, jail breaks and more. You name it and this movie will have it, including an excellent example of the old cliche, 'You never shoot a man in the back.'

In addition, writers Lawrence ("Big Chill") and Mark Kaadan put together a very well engineered plot that tends to be more involved then a good mystery, yet easy to understand and the excitement builds slowly but surely. For those who enjoy excellent foreshadowing, this is for you.

The movie has also been blessed with a talented set of actors and actresses who have a set of memorable characters. The movie open when Emmett (Scott Glenn) meeting Padden (Kevin Kline) and they're deciding to ride together.

Two more join them. Emmett's brother Jake (Kevin Costners) and Mal (Danny Glover), and after a series of events, they arrive safely in Silverado.

Okay, it's a good, decent piece of entertainment, I feel I had my money's worth. I can go home satisfied or can I? The movie continues and each one of our heroes runs into trouble in their new home.

Alone, they can't handle it, but together, they provide a stunning finish that is memorable. But even more talented then these four is actress Linda Hunt.

As Stella, the Midnight Star manager of a local bar, you can't help but admire this woman from the first time she walks into the scene. Though small in stature, don't underestimate either the character or the actress, and though mainly a background character, Hunt must be credited with an incredible amount of work.

If you remember, she was the supporting actress to Mel Gibbons in "A Year of Living Dangerously." Hunt was so impressive, that if for no other reason, you should see her in this latest performance.

I can guarantee that you would never regret going to see "Silverado," unless you are particularly sensitive to violence. The movie tends to be a bit more violent than those of the past, but you will not find it senselessly though. This violence may have earned it the PG-13 rating, but it is the way it is meant to be. The violence of the past may have caused you to make it harder then most movies. I recommend it at its best and is currently playing at the University and Micron. No reason to miss it.

KUOI WILL BROADCAST CLASS CLOSURES!

by Greg Meyer.
KUOI-Station Manager

Student stereo KUOI-FM 89.3 will once again broadcast the last day of class from the Kibble Dome during registration Tuesday, August 27th. The usual music programing will be periodically interrupted by registration hours to provide students with updates on class closures and other registration information. KUOI's registration day programing will go out over cable channel 8 as well as the station's assigned FM frequency of 89.3.

In addition, a table will be set up at registration and live interview will be conducted. With various members of the campus community, KUOI staffers will be on hand to give away free record albums, sell KUOI buttons and provide applications for students interested in working at the station. On registration day, students are encouraged to tune their FM receivers to 89.3 and watch their televisions to cable channel 8 for the latest music and registration information.

The staff at KUOI has had a busy summer rearranging the studio, working on equipment and developing new program ideas. We want to feature remote productions this year and our registration deadline is only the beginning. We will be providing the music and disc jockeys for the Chamber of Commerce Student Picnic at Ghormley Park on Sunday, August 25th. We hope to cover important meetings, seminars and events of all kinds throughout the semester. We also hope to sponsor films and concerts.

In addition, we have tentative agreement with the Athletic Department to provide live coverage of women's varsity volleyball and basketball... New and exciting developments are taking place at Student Stereo 89.3 and now is the time for students who are interested in getting involved with the station to contact us. We have several paid positions open on the staff including Chief Announcer (who must train disc jockeys), News Director. We are also looking for a Sports Director and a News Staff.

It is possible for students working in the News Department to earn academic credit for their work. There are also several work study positions available at the station. Although the positions did not appear in the work study packet that eligible students received, there are several jobs open including Data Entry Clerk (who will enter our record library into the ASUI Communications computer system), Assistant Engineer and Assistant Program Director. If you are eligible for work study and interested in radio, stop by the station and pick up an application or call the station manager at 885-6433.

Lastly, but not least, we need volunteer disc jockeys, the foundation upon which the station is built. This year, we are interested in people who have original programming ideas, not necessarily limited to music programming. CREATIVITY IS THE KEY TO A FRESH, NEW KUOI-FM SOUND! We are counting on the students to help provide some of these new ideas.

KUOI-FM's studio is located on the third floor of the Student Union Building. Everyone who wishes to do so is encouraged to visit us and see what we are doing. We are a non-commercial, 24-hour, alternative listening, in stereo at 89.3 FM.

ASUI to publish club and organization handbook

Because no complete listing of clubs and organizations on the University of Idaho campus is available, the ASUI will publish a handbook of these groups. The book will include a list of all ASUI registered clubs and programs for the purpose of the group and the name and number of members to contact for more information.

According to ASUI President Jane Freund, a clubs and organizations handbook is convenient for the students. "In the past, if a student had asked questions about clubs and organizations I've had to hand them our ASUI binder of information to examine," said Freund. A binder is also available that the handbook will provide a service to students, faculty and administrators. "I have had several members of the university community express a need for a listing of clubs and organizations."

Although Freund hopes to have the book ready for release in early September, the project has been delayed. 'Until the Senate Inauguration set

The ASUI Senate will say goodbye to the old Senate and welcome six members to their roles as they begin another chapter of work this Wednesday night. Senators John Driscoll, John Skolnick, Holli Crawford, Mike Coblentz and Greg Meyer have their farewell communications during their first Senate meeting of the semester scheduled for Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. in Chiefs Room, SUB. In addition, ASUI President Jane Freund will inaugurate Cherri Sabala, Holli Crawford, Mike Coblentz, Gino White, Chris Ferron and the Senate's new officers.

These seven students were victorious in last spring's ASUI elections. In addition to the inauguration, the ASUI Senate will hear from KUOI-Station Manager Greg Meyer. He will announce the Senate on the work done thus far and his future plans for the student-run radio station. The public is welcome to attend this meeting.

September 10th is the deadline for ASUI and University student positions.

It is a little-known fact that the United States Air Force constructed a Nike-Hercules missile base just north of Moscow in 1961.

In the inimitable style of the federal government, the facility was abandoned in 1968 and sold for scrap to a local farmer.

In 1973 a University of Idaho student rented the afore-mentioned abandoned missile base because he couldn't afford an apartment. His name was ...

Actually, living in an abandoned Nike-Hercules missile base isn't all that offbeat. Living anywhere off campus isn't.

I have enough room.

For a strange phenomenon, like nobody here.

Can't be done, halp!

In fact, I have enough room. You and strange phenomenon...

But the utilities are pretty rough.

We can keep pets.

Though!

We can keep pets.

For a day or so.

But we didn't mean to have to eat dogs.

Do we have to eat pools?

Well... how about milk, water?

Hmmm... Here's a potato chip. An old dead cirque...

And about in such flower beds.

'm'm, someone the thought of form polo doesn't such quote good.

Oh, good food?

You do me know in that cheers?

Don't push me off.

Willing to eat well.

To be continued.

UI. (July 8) Faculty members who do not have students out of key parking spaces on campus should feel pretty good about what they’ve been offered. They have a count, said Jane Freund, ASUI president.
Freund’s attitude about the new parking system is due to the fact that there are fewer parking regulations and that they don’t like this solution. It excludes part-time students held in the ‘priority ladder’ on this campus,” she said. “Now it has progressed here and it has become an issue of stu-

The Argonaut Arg prints on and on after summer issues
For the first time in its 88-year history, the Idaho Argonaut published during the summer season. This bold experiment was made possible by contributions of the ASUI student government and the ASUI publications department.
A result of the full semester program contains reprints from the summer paper. They were edited to shorter length, and for the types which escaped us the first time through. It contains the news of interest to users and the students.
Although the majority of the students are away from the University of Idaho over the summer, matters which concern them are printed here. We have tried to report these happenings with the same high standards as we have set for this issue, and the semesters to follow.
You valuation of the success of our efforts is welcome and necessary.
In early May, just before the end of school, the ASUI Senate was approached for permission to use unexpended Argonaut funds — if there were any — to publish seven issues of the paper. A proposal was presented with best estimates of time, costs, and content. The Senate was supportive of the project, and gave its consent contingent upon the funding being available.
Our first issue was published on Monday, June 10, Registration Day, and weekly thereafter. During this period we published fifteen issues, the last issue, issue 88, was published on August 16.

ASU leaves 85 budget year $65,000 in the red

By John Hecht
Oil the Argonaut

By late 1984, the books have closed on the 1984-85 ASU budget, and the report is flat: student government started the new fiscal year with a $65,000 deficit. Only the presence of three student government reserve funds, totaling almost $51,000, and accumulated over several years, kept the net loss from being higher.

Total expenditures came to $736,000, and money available to be spent from all sources was about $730,000. Out of 41 ASU budget accounts, 25 ended the year in the negative column. The ASU golf course lost $49,000. Seven inter-related Entertainment accounts showed almost a $36,000 deficit. The ASU arts budget areas in ASU publications lost $18,000. Lecture notes came up $7,000 short. ASU President Jane Freund said that almost all departments did not make their projected income. "This shows a definite need for tighter fiscal management, not only by the ASU," she said, "but also a need for better information from the Administration."

Freund said she and ASU Vice-president Mike Trail requested a month ago a management and financial audit of the golf course by the administration.

UI Financial Vice-president Dave McKinney says he has agreed to the audit, and it is now being scheduled by the UI Internal Auditor's office. He they have been waiting for the fiscal year to end and for the books to close.

Freund said the $65,000 loss will drop the student reserve accounts down to $57,000 for the coming year. What would have been a tight fiscal year could be either cash or a credit from the reserve fund. Freund of the reserve fund is estimated to be at least $41,000.

Freund noted the administration is considering financial aid and tuition increases for the coming year.

"We will have a special meeting to discuss this," Freund said. "This is student money."

McKinney said the refund, if received, would primarily be used for one-time capital improve- ment projects. He said that considering the financial problems could be either cash or a credit from the reserve fund. The ASU's share has been estimated to be at least $41,000.

McKinney said the UI administration wishes to wait until the money is in, and then consider special requests from various departments and programs.

"We will have a special re- budget committee," Freund said. "This is student money."

McKinney said the refund, if received, would primarily be used for one-time capital improve- ment projects. He said that considering the financial problems could be either cash or a credit from the reserve fund. The ASU's share has been estimated to be at least $41,000.

Fiscal problems continue to plague the state's universities, with the board of regents from 1984-85 ASU budget was loosened up last spring when the student government activi- ty fee was increased by $10 per student per semester. The increase brought in an estimated $134,000. Some of that money has been spent already, and the ASU Senate is considering addi- tional requests.

A potential one-time income source is a rebate of FICA (Social Security) deductions. The University of Idaho is waiting for final word from the Social Security administration on the matter. McKinney indicated this could happen in late August or September, but the refund could be either cash or a credit from the reserve fund. The ASU's share has been estimated to be at least $41,000.

ASUI departments submit $$$ wishlist

By Douglas Jones
June 27 The ASUI is slowly understanding one of the basic laws of economics — people have unlimited wants although we live in a world of finite resources.

On June 14, ASUI president Jane Freund and vice-president Mike Trail sent a memo to the student government department asking them to submit capital outlay "wish lists." The wish lists were requested because the ASUI has an estimated $80,900,000 left over from a $10 per student fee increase that they had asked for this last spring.

Capital outlays are "one time" expenditures for physical object needs such as computer terminals that last more than one year ($1,000 of the $134,000 which was created in April, when the Board of Regents approved a $10 per student fee increase, was distributed in a package of bills submitted to the ASUI Senate before it left town.

Although Freund and Trail say they would like to allocate $80,900,000 for capital outlay investments, the real amount may be around $60,70,000 due to two bills that Trail plans to submit to the Senate this week.

Eight department managers were asked to submit "wish lists" totaling $129,000 worth of equipment which will now have to compete for the $60,70,000 in funds.

The largest and most "critical" request for capital outlay funds came from the RUO-FM's Station Manager Greg Meyer.

Meyer claimed that "RUO is suffering from years of mismanagement, lack of equipment maintenance, and a general absence of progress." Meyer asked for $80,000 in equipment to "increase the quality of our broadcast signal," and "allow us to expand our programming so that we may broaden our horizons and serve more of the students, faculty and the entire community at large."

Some items considered as "critical" on Meyer's list include a 16 channel Yamaha mixer/console ($4,000), an IBM personal computer ($6,500), a line of student publications system ($3,000), a "beast" to "distribute" the record collection, and an "unlimited" number of "big" radios and remote coordination package ($6,200). Meyer also wants a $2,300 "FM-type" lawnmower to mow the baseball field.

ASUI has the power to call for votes on important issues during summer session by either mail or phone.

The Cheney, Wash. school's officials said they would not have considered an increase in tuition and the lengthy application process had it not been for the encouragement they received from BSC officials. Frederickson said the school is bitterly disappointed by the rejection, and is in the process of reevaluating its athletic programs.

Frederickson said the university is currently reassessing its athletic programs.

UM President Richard Gibb said he had no comment when asked about the vote. Gibb suggested contacting the BSC office in Boise.

Support for the proposed expansion of the BSC was not unanimous on the Cheney campus.

Panel seeks simplified higher ed system

June 20 A special legislative committee on higher education met in Boise last week and heard testimony concerning the change of Lewis-Clark State College to a community college, a constitutional amendment to allow tuition; a plan to divide the Idaho State Board of Education; and a proposal to put Idaho schools under a one-university chancellor system.

John Clute, Boise Cascade executive, vice-president, who headed the Idaho Task Force on Higher Education, had pointed comments about the Lewiston college.

"LSCS is really just an extended community college," he said, adding, "It should be funded like the other community colleges if we are trying to achieve some fairness in funding around the state."

Idaho's two community colleges, North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene and the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls, are supported for the most part by local property tax revenues.

Clute also said that Boise State University is currently funded more than an oxygengrown community college. "If you look at what they offer, it is not an urban university," he said.

The task force which Clute headed was responsible for promoting the 1964 legislative battle over in-state tuition, split board proposals, and a call to change LSCS to a community college, all of which were unsuccessful.

The eight-person committee is headed by Rep. Janet Hay (R-Nampa), a former president of the UI Board of Regents/State Board of Education. Seven members are Republicans. Two members, senators Laird Noh and Lynn Tommigah, are former ASU presidents.

Rep. James "Doc" Lucas (RMoscow), sat in on the hearings, although he was not on the committee. He expects "another war" over LSCS in the next legislative session.

Regent Robert Montgomery told the committee that the question of tuition needs to be dealt with this next legislative session.

"Right now, we are sort of Mickey-Mouseing around with things. I am terribly amazed we have not had a lawsuit filed against us on the way we are using some of these funds," Montgomery said. "We are charging students tuition now and calling it fees."

The Idaho Constitution requires that no tuition may be charged at the University of Idaho. The ASU has been involved in harsh legislative battles in the past, in an attempt to defeat the constitutional provision. In 1984 the measure was defeated, five votes short of the needed two-thirds majority to pass it on to the people.

Lucas said it is "beyond speculation" that an in-state tuition constitutional amendment will be back for a vote.

Deputy Attorney General Pat Kole spoke to the committee on the legality of splitting the State Board of Education into two advisory committees that will handle public school and higher education policy matters separately.

Kole said that although the Idaho constitution requires a State Board of Education to run both public schools and the higher education system, there appears to be no legal reason why the State Board of Education could not split into subcommittees which would handle public schools and higher education separately.

Kole also said there is no legal reason why Idaho could not have a "one-university" system, with all the state colleges and universities under one director or chancellor.

Such a system could have the UI as the lead institution, with branches at Boise, Pocatello, and Lewiston. The president of the UI could serve as chancellor, with vice-presidents at the other schools reporting to him.

Kole noted that Idaho State to Pocatello once operated this way, and was known as University of Idaho-Southern Branch.

Lucas said he is personally opposed to the chancellor system. He said it disregards political regionalism and places too much responsibility in the hands of one person. "Those people who advocate the chancellor system describe the chancellor as having all the qualities to sit on the right hand of the Lord," he said. "Then they picture how well the system would work under such a person. Suppose we don't get him?"

Mark Falconer, a legislative financial analyst, told the legislature that although higher education is receiving a smaller share of state funds, state support for education is almost at an all-time high.

Falconer said that the new state budget that will take effect on July 1, will allocate 74.6 percent of the state's general funds to education. That is second only to the 1984 budget when 74.7 percent was allocated to education. Higher education, however, will receive only about 15 percent of the money, down from a high of 18 percent in 1978.

During testimony by Ed Clark, the board's chief fiscal officer, Lucas stated that "A real bomb shell uncovers down there by the office of the State Board."

Falconer reported that if all state revenue and fees charged to students were taken into account the state of Idaho spends $4,360 per Full-Time Student Equivalent (FTSE). That ranks Idaho 31st in the nation, above Montana (35th) and Nevada (36th) but below Wyoming (8th), Utah (25th), Montana (22nd).

Dobratz will continue coaching women

June 20 Idaho Head Women's Basketball Coach Pat Dobratz said this week that she will remain in Moscow to coach next season.

Dobratz, Idaho's mentor for the past five seasons, was a finalist for the head women's basketball coaching job at the University of Washington.

However, former Cal State-Fullerton Coach Chris Gobrecht accepted the Seattle job last month, keeping Dobratz at Idaho. Van Derwerf, who was an assistant coach at Washington before being named the head coach on an interim basis during the 1979-80 season, said she has not applied for any other coaching positions. She said she has already signed a contract to stay at Idaho.

"I finished third, I guess," Dobratz said. "They said Tara Van Derwerf was the top choice, but she went to Stanford because of their next choice and then I was next."

Van Derwerf coached at Idaho for two years before moving to Ohio State and now Stanford. Gobrecht received the job despite having a losing record last season. One of Fullerton's losses was to Idaho, 79-72 in the Dull Classic in Fullman.

"They wanted a coach who had coached against some national competition," Dobratz said. "They believe that they have a quality program over there and they want to keep it going."

Even if I was offered the job, I'm not sure I would've accepted it," Dobratz said. "The money is not any better. The only thing I would have liked was to be in Seattle. But they (Washington) are losing three starters and I think we have better talent here at Idaho."

Dobratz has compiled an impressive 116-34 record at Idaho, including leading the club to its best mark ever, 28-2, and a post-season tournament berth last season.

Idaho will lose just one player to next season's team is not scheduled to play in Washington.
Regents discuss issues in May

By Lewis Day
Of the Argonaut

(June 20) The UI Board of Regents (aka State Board of Education) met in Boise May 16 to approve a new reciprocity agreement with the state of Washington, hear a report on the legislative committee studying the state education department, and discuss the relationship of the UI curriculum to courses offered at other Idaho colleges and universities.

The May meeting also saw a transition of leadership, as Robert Montgomery handed the president's gavel over to Diane Bilyeu. Bilyeu was elected president by unanimous consent at the Board's April meeting.

The Idaho-Washington Reciprocity Agreement approved by the regents is similar to the one which recently expired. The only substantial change is a decrease in the number of seats allotted to Lewis-Clark State College. For the 1986-87 school year LCSC will be allowed 15 seats, down five from the current year.

The regents heard testimony from its staff which indicated some concern with the distribution of academic majors of Idaho students in Washington. Of the 72 Idahoans who attended school in Washington in 1984-85, only 14 had declared majors in fields unavailable in Idaho.

Although the new reciprocity agreement may now be approved, the Board asked Washington to restore the five seats to Lewis-Clark State College.

State Rep. Janet Hay (R-Oak Creek) reported on the legislative committee which has been formed to study the post-organization of the board into separate units for public and higher education. The legislative committee has been formed from both chambers of the legislature. Hay serves as co-chair from the house. The senate co-chair is Terry Swerdfener (R-Cataldo).

Hay, a former regent, told the board her committee will conduct hearings to investigate possible changes in the state education system. Hay said the committee will be the first to study the system since the investigation by an Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry committee several years ago. According to Hay, higher education concerns which will be addressed by the committee include accreditation, the role of the executive director, establishment of one state university with branch campuses, and the establishment of a charter-based university system.

The regents were supportive of Hay's goals, and discussed ways of helping the committee.

According to Montgomery the board could have been more involved and less reactive in the problem, and action on the IACI recommendations. He added there is a strong possibility the board will face continued financial problems.

Sevall resigns as UI coach

(June 27) "It frightens me to think how close I came to making another stupid mistake. First, I had bored them unceremoniously. Now I was about to impose a welcome punishment. Two weeks out of that class would have been more pleasant than pain."

That was Eliot Wigginton's realization when he considered recommending his high-spirited high school students with suspension. His new idea was much more productive.

"The next day I walked into class and said, 'How would you like to throw away the text and start a magazine?' And that's how Foxfire began." Wigginton explained in his introductory comments of the first Foxfire Book.

The project got its Ramun Gap, Ga. students involved in every aspect of the publication, from collecting oral histories and other documents on community traditions to writing and publishing the stories. The success of the program has brought a whole new dimension to the teaching profession.

Wigginton, who has helped establish similar programs in other states, will participate in a conference at the University of Idaho called Planning an Interpreting Local Culture and Traditions. The two-day conference will be held all day Friday, June 26 and Saturday, June 27. This is Wigginton's first visit to Idaho and one of his students will accompany him. The conference will focus on methods which educators, historians, librarians, groups, and individuals can use to interpret their own local history.

Friday's session will include a panel discussion on organizing centennial and anniversary celebrations, while Saturday's schedule is broken down by Wigginton and another panel discussion with Wigginton participating on the value and uses of local culture and traditions.

Other participants in the conference will include Richard Hart, Director of the Institute of the North American West; Steve Sigurts, Folk Arts Coordinator for the Idaho Commission on the Arts; Keith Petersen and Lorraine-Meke of the Latah County-Historical Society; Rob Moore, editor of the Pacific Journal, and Idaho folklorist LaIa Boone.

Sponsored by the Latah County Historical Society in cooperation with the SIU summer session office, the conference is partially funded by a grant from the Association for the Humanities in Idaho. A variety of workshops and panel discussions about specific aspects of folk culture will be included in the two-day workshop. Mary Kline, vice president of the Latah County Historical Society, can be contacted at 892-1004 for further information.

Luckett honored

(Base 27) Kenny Luckett, University of Idaho student guard, was repaid for his late season. The all-league play by being tagged to be a member of the National Sports Festival's West squad. This year's Festival will be July 23 through August 1 in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Luckett leaves for the Bayou city July 22 for the West squad's preparation sessions. "I haven't talked to any coaches yet," Luckett said from his Portland home. "I just got a letter from them informing me on what's going to be going on." Luckett, a 6-foot-5 swingman started all 30 games for the Vandal's and averaged 8.0 points and 3.0 rebounds a game. "Yeah, it surprised me," Luckett said. "We really had planned on trying out for it but Coach Trumbo told me there weren't any tryouts. It was nice when I found out about it." With his selection, the Beaver Tech product becomes the first player selected from the Big Sky Conference since its beginning in 1964. "I was really excited for him," Idaho head coach Bill Trumbo said. "It puts him into a very elite group of ball players." "This will really enhance his play," Trumbo added. "It will be great experience for him playing against that caliber of ball player." "When I play in things like this, I really don't set any personal goals," Luckett said of his chances. "But if there is a chance to start or play a lot, I'll grab for it." The Festival is an activity of the United States Olympic Committee designed to provide a domestic Olympic style competition in non-Olympic years. It is also sanctioned by the American Basketball Association and USA. "It's the first step toward the 1988 Olympics," Trumbo said. "All the '84 basketball Olympians played in the Sports Festival. Bobby Knight, University of Indiana and 1984 Olympic head coach, is this year's chairman of the Festival Basketball Subcommittee and Lute Olson of Arizona is chairman of the West Section Subcommittee. Montana head coach Mike Montgomery is the Pacific member of the committee."

Gem's editor vanishes

Despite some major problems, the 1985 University of Idaho yearbook, Gem of the Mountains, will still be distributed this fall. Though the deadline for delivery to the printing company of all of the pages of this year's yearbook was May 29, none of the pages had been completed by that time. The original yearbook editor, Julie Reagan, ceased coming into the Gem office around the middle of May, and, says the newly appointed yearbook editor Jon Erickson, "We haven't seen her since." Erickson was originally going to be the editor of the 1986 yearbook. However, since Reagan was not to be found, ASU Vice President Mike Trail asked to finish up the work on the 1985 yearbook, too. Erickson, with the help of Gary Lundgren and Frank Hill, was able to complete all the pages and send them in by June 14th. Though Erickson is not sure whether the yearbook will arrive on campus by the originally scheduled distribution date (registration day), he said he is hopeful it will be sometime in September.

"We will get the book to students as fast as we can. The date we receive it is now out of our control, and we apologize to everyone for the inconvenience," concludes Erickson. Letters explaining the possible delay will be sent to all students who purchased a yearbook.

Idaho to make move to heat by wood

(Albany, 27) Starting next year, the University of Idaho campus will be heated primarily by wood. Last week, ASU President Bob Regents approved a wood fueled boiler proposed by UI's Physical Plant. "The goal of the boiler," said Tom Sawyer, Utilization/ HVAC, Heating, Ventilation and Air Conditioning Engineer, "is to lower a low carbon fuel. The new boiler will lower the campus using a half-a-million dollars of wood in a year. Also to be installed are two wood storage silos, a pump and convey system, and an electronic control system. Second Draft 8/29/85

Revisions in the ASUI communications departments may involve restructuring the "official" job description of Reprint Graphics Director John Pool and changes in the departments themselves. ASUI president John Freund has appointed a committee which is currently studying proposals for revisions in Pool's job description and for revisions in the number and role of departments.

Freund said that the reprints to graphics director's job has been so much since Pool took the job 10 years ago that it is outdated.

"We're not looking to expand John's job," Freund said. "Everyone knows what he does. It's just not written down. We want to change that while we have the time."

Pool, a nine-year staff member, said he and Freund have already agreed to change the job title to "operations manager." That title would place him in charge of purchasing and financial affairs for the department, which include the Argonaut, Gem of the Mountains, Advertising, the Photo Bureau, Reprographics, and KUOI-FM.

"That's what I do right now anyway," Pool said. "My description just says that I am the Reprint Graphics Director, but at one point or another in the past 10 years I have noticed that some things weren't getting done, so I started doing them."

Pool said some of his duties not listed on the job description include giving advice to students, overseeing the accounting work for the departments, and signing the purchase bids for the Argonaut and purchasing equipment.

"John is an invaluable resource to student communications," said John Hecht, Argonaut editor. "He is the one classified person who is here year-in-year-out. He knows what is going on better than the students."

Other than expanding the scope of Pool's duties, Freund's committee is looking at separating the Argonaut's advertising department from the newspaper, and making it the advertising department for all student communication departments.

"I think that is the best idea so far," Pool said. "We definitely need to give more independence to the advertising department."

Editorial functions of KUOI-FM, the Gem and the Argonaut, will continue to be the responsibility of the editor/managers. Pool expressed relief that he will not be responsible for editorial matters.

"I might tell them what I think they should do in a certain case, but that is just my opinion," Pool said. "It's their newspaper. They can do what they want."

Freund said she is placing all of the ideas she wants to think of in a "package." She will then send the package to each senator in July. Freund said the Senate should then be ready to vote on it at one of its first sessions in August.

"I think the motion will pass once it gets to the Senate," Freund said.

Residents spur action on porn. issue

By Carolyn Boosley
Of the Argonaut
June 28 The Moscow City Council has voted to require citizens who feel that obscene material is being sold, to initiate the complaint process themselves. The council adopted guidelines proposed by City Attorney Will Herrington.

The issue was prompted by complaints of several Moscow residents that allegedly pornographic material was being sold by a pool merchant in violation of Idaho code.

Herrington suggested that the complaining party present a copy of the material believed to be obscene, or otherwise in violation of the Idaho code, for review. An officer should provide the individuals in question with the regulations against "pornography." Also, the complainant should be required to sign a criminal complaint against the vendor, and must agree to testify at any hearing set.

State law says material considered obscene must appeal to the prurient interests, depict in a patently offensive way sexual conduct, and "as a whole, lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. Each element must be present for a crime to exist.

The Idaho statutes state obscene material is any matter which the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find to be offensive to his feelings on aspects of higher education.

Evans was on a one-day visit to Moscow to help the University of Idaho celebrate its annual Agricultural Field Day. During the conference Evans was asked whether he supported any of the higher education proposals currently being looked at by a special legislative committee, and said that his list are the most complete and effective in the area. These listings tell us the least likely to "protect the community for the 80 percent of children" to pursue higher education. Evans

Hustler ruled not obscene

(July 10) A conviction finding Hustler magazine obscene is not too likely to come about under the current standards set forth by the Idaho State laws, according to Mr. Marvin Wilson, Chief of Police.

Herrington was asked by the Moscow police department to evaluate a complaint about the magazine's alleged obscenity and violation of state laws. The complaint was filed by Moscow resident Doug Wilson, a self-styled spokesman for conservative and religious issues.

"The police department can have filed without asking me," Herrington said. However, for them to seek guidance as to whether a particular material is obscene, the police department is required to file a criminal complaint against the vendor, and must agree to testify at any hearing set.

A key to her success, Marquette said, is the wide acceptance of her housing list has gained among renter and landlords. A lot of the people who rent know about the service," she said. "People list with us because the service is free, we publish a lot of information, and I think they get better results (than by taking out newspaper ads).

Vetrus heads Arboretum project

By Bruce Smith
Of the Argonaut

July 11) Dean Vetrus loves trees. If there had been a 150-member civic group interested in the Arboretum's expansion, Vetrus said the group is mostly responsible for the annex.

"We're kind of a public relations group," he said. "We're an extension of the public. It's something that we all do on the side because we love to."

The project started in 1974 when former UI President Ernest Hartung appointed some people (later to become the Arboretum Associates) to begin a study of the feasibility of the project.

In 1976, a plan was recommended and the university approved the development. One year later, the current plan was determined, which also includes a botanical garden and an office for some arboretum personnel.

Money was the reason the annex did not begin construction until now. Vetrus said the group still does not have a "budget, using volunteers and donations to keep going."

"There have been a lot of local people interested," Vetrus said.

We have also had some students help us out, even in something like pulling weeds. I would think the people would enjoy helping because this place will always be here when they come back."

For example of some of the help Vetrus has been receiving is Gene Thompson, a Moscow resident and a member of the Associates, who created the dirt road by himself. Thompson owns the machinery needed to build the road.

The road will be used to access the area. It will later be filled with grass and trees when the road is no longer needed.

Vetrus said the annex will include many more trees, with separate sections for trees from Europe, Asia, eastern North America, and western North America.

"It will be virtually worldwide," Vetrus said. "But that's part of it."

A small sidewalk for bicycles and pedestrians is also in the planning stages. The highlight of the master plan, though, is the botanical gardens.

"The Soil Conservation Service put the plan together," Vetrus said. "I think it will be great. I can really see gobs of people using it, including students. Can't you?"

Vetrus said that this project is not the first to add trees to beautify the UI campus. In 1968 Vetrus led a group of tree planters to the UI Golf Course, creating small forests in bare areas used to be.

Student dies in car accident

July 29) Mark Vukasin, a UI student, was killed Thursday, July 19, in a traffic accident near his home in Havre, Montana. Vukasin, due to report for his senior year of college next month, was 18 years old.

Mike Keller, UI track and field coach, said Vukasin was attending the university on a full-ride scholarship. He came to the UI sports program as a high school state-champion discus thrower and was number one in the nation in that event in 1984. He was named as a first-team All-American by "Track and Field News" in 1984. He was a graduate of Havre High School.

Keller recalled that because he was so young, Vukasin red shirted his first year at the UI and would have competed for the university this year.

He added that Vukasin had great potential as a national competitor, especially in the discus throw. "We were looking forward to his doing very well in Big Sky and in national competition," Keller said.

Vukasin was the son of Bob and Ruth Vukasin of Havre. He majored in electrical engineering and Keller said he was a good student.

"He was happy-go-lucky — one of those kids that you like right away," Keller said.

Funeral services were held Saturday, July 20 at the St. Jude's Church in Havre.

A memorial scholarship earmarked for track and field athletes is being set up in Vukasin's name.

UI computers may be updated

By Bruce Smith

Of the Argonaut

(July 18) If you have been a little skeptical because the UI computers have seemed to take their time with your program, your wish that the University of Idaho do something about it may come true.

UI officials have said that demand for computer time has increased so rapidly since 1980 that they are asking the Board of Regents for a new computer, or an advanced older one to expand the university's computer capacity.

"We have so many users on the CMS (Central Computing Mainframe System) that it takes too long," said Bill Pyle, assistant director of computer services. "We have more and more on line systems in use and it gets too busy."

In late June, build financial Vice-President David McKinnon took a proposal to the Idaho Board of Education finance committee to expand the university's computer capacity. The full board will consider the proposal in September, and according to Edward Clock, the board's chief fiscal officer, will probably approve it.

If the board does agree to the proposal, the new addition could be in place by Thanksgiving, depending on when the new computer arrives. Pyle said that the only time the computer could be installed would be "at a good time."

That is, when most of the students would not be using it. "It would have to be during a vacation or something like that," Pyle said. "We couldn't do it when the students want to use it because there would be too much going on."

The computers currently used at the UI were supposedly to be used only until 1984, when the program was to be upgraded because of the expected increase in computer usage. Pyle said he believes the added computer could handle the load.

The UI currently has two main computers which are being accessed by both students and administrators. The two computers are a "Brown" 4341 CPU (Central Processing Unit) and a "Yellow" 4341-2 CPU.

According to a UI Computer Services report, there are three possible solutions that the UI is considering.

One is to replace the Brown CPU with a larger IBM 4381 and use the current Yellow CPU as a batch machine. This solution would cost $435,000, with an estimated annual operation cost of $3,800.

The second solution is the same as the first except the new Brown CPU would be used for both administrative and academic support, and the Yellow CPU would be dedicated to student use. This would cost $569,000, with an added annual cost of $30,000.

The third solution would be to add a third IBM CPU to the system and dedicate it to student use. This would cost $236,000, with an added annual cost of $41,000.

The first and second alternative would have a lifetime capacity of five years, while the third would be functional for only three.

Gibb sends his deans chair-hopping

Gittins

(June 18) An faculty dean Art Gittins has been named acting associate vice-president for research by UI President Richard Gibb.

Gittins will continue to serve as graduate school dean. He had planned to take sabbatical leave next year, but has agreed to serve while a search for a permanent associate vice-president can be completed.

The revised position title for Gittins will take effect with the beginning of the budget year on July 1. Gittins will take his planned sabbatical the following year.

Gibb said the new title will help increase the visibility of research at the UI, although it won't fully answer the concerns expressed last year by a faculty committee that lobbied for a vice-president for research position.

"It's a matter of visibility," Gittins said. "The new title will open more doors for our research that should somewhat improve our chances of getting more research money."

Hendee

(June 18) John C. Hendee has been appointed the new dean of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. He is currently assistant director of the USDA Forest Service Southeastern Forest Experiment Station in Asheville, NC.

President Richard Gibb, who announced Hendee's appointment last week said, "I have found Hendee to be a very, very impressive person and we think he will do an outstanding job both internally with the faculty and students in the college, and across the campus, as well as externally with business and industry representatives from timber, wildlife and range sciences."

Hendee, 48, has a Ph.D. in forestry economics from the University of Washington, a master's in forestry management from Oregon State, and a bachelor's degree from Michigan State.

Hendee has also been a private forestry consultant. He served 11 years with research work in the Pacific Northwest Experiment Stations in Seattle. He has two years of legislative work experience in Washington, D.C., and six in his current position.

Gentry

(June 18) The acting dean of the College of Education will fill the position permanently, UI President Richard Gibb has announced.

Dale Gentry, who has been at the UI since 1977, served as director of special education until he assumed the acting-dean position.

The slot became open when Thomas Bell became vice-president for academic affairs and research.

Gentry received a Ph.D. in special education from the University of Washington. His emphasis was on learning disabilities and emotional disturbances. He holds a bachelor's and masters from the UI in psychology.
Admin auditorium gets comfort overhaul

By Maegon Guido
Of the Argonaut

(3) No more complaining the next time you’re in the Admin auditorium. You should be able to hear performances and be comfortable in your seat. The auditorium, constructed in the 1930s, is going to be remodeled for the public’s convenience. According to Joanne Reese, Director of Facility Planning and project manager of the auditorium, remodeling work will begin as early as July 15. Opening bids for the construction took place yesterday.

“The auditorium is one of the nicest spaces on campus,” said Reese. “It hasn’t been used enough because of its problems.”

The problems include uncomfortable seats, poor acoustics, and poor visual accessibility. The solution to these problems will begin with the installation of padded seats with tablet arms to replace the old wooden ones. Reese said the chairs will be the property of the Center Service and will be available for surplus sale at $2 each.

The stage will also be extended out 10 to 12 feet from where it is now. “This will create better interaction between the performer and the audience,” commented Reese.

“We’re introducing acoustical and sound dimmers,” she said. Moveable sound shells will be placed on stage, and sound panels will be mounted on the side of the stage and on the ceiling to block out sound. Distribute it better, and help avoid reverberations and echoes.

The heating system will receive some work, so that the steam radiators along the windows of the auditorium won’t ‘puff’ during a performance, she said.

Visual problems will be solved by staggered seating and a revamping of the floor. “We’re reducing the floor with an angle to create steeper site lines,” commented Reese.

In addition, a reception room will be built between the corridor and the administration area. Above the reception area, according to Reese, there will be a sound reinforcement system and light control deck. The organ in the auditorium will also be restored. The refurbishing will cost down the capacity to approximately 500 from the original 700.

There will also be new ramps for the handicapped and devices for the hearing impaired, which the auditorium is now without. “The remodeling project got started by a committee, consisting of people from the performing arts areas and the College of Letters and Science. Funding was sought and approved by the Board of Regents in December,” Reese said.

“Very optimistic I’m going to have the project done in time for the beginning of the quarter.”

“This is a very exciting project,” said Reese, “and I think people are going to be pleased with the character of the hall.”

Idaho’s Storm named to AAUP Board

By Lewis Day
Of the Argonaut

(3) A UI professor who has been active in faculty rights issues has been elected to the governing board of the American Association of University Professors. Leo Storm, professor of English, and former department chairman, is elected to represent the western region in the AAUP National Council. The 40-member Council sets policy for the organization, which has over 62,000 members at colleges and universities across the US and Canada. It is the organization’s main governing board, and sets organizational policy. Storm will serve for three years.

His election to the board is somewhat ironic, because the UI is currently under AAUP censure. The UI has been under censure since 1981; the move was provoked by the firing of tenured professor Lois Pace. The AAUP has assisted in Pace’s suit against the UI. “I hope things are progressing” and “reinstatement of the censure,” Storm said. “A settlement or reinstatement of Pace is important,” he added.

The approval of the Board of Regents of a UI Faculty Council resolution on tenure, faculty rights, and policy could help take the UI off the censure list, Storm said.

Other issues of especial importance to faculty, Storm said, include the relationship between unionized and non-union faculty across the country, and the increased use of part-time instructors at colleges and universities. The second issue is particularly germane to the UI, according to the accreditation report by the Northwest Association of Colleges and Schools that cited the UI’s excessive use of part-timers as unsatisfactory. The third major issue, according to Strom, is the continued financial problems faced by many universities and colleges.

Storm came to the UI in 1969 and has taught at Seattle University, Western Washington University and the American University of Cairo.

Kahler nabbed as computer hacker

On Tuesday May 7, Patrick Kelley Kahler, a University of Idaho student, was arrested and had his dorm room to leave, and charged with tampering with a UI computer—an felony.

The charges stemmed from a new Idaho statute which was enacted last year. The law bans anyone from gaining unauthorized access to a computer system for the purposes of theft or fraud.

Kahler gained access to the Ribisi-ASU computer account and billed it for computer time he had used in March and not yet paid for. According to Storm, he is with the UI Computer Science Department. Kahler, who had billed a fellow student for$21 in the Ribisi-ASU account, Kahler eventually pleaded guilty to misdemeanor rather than felony charges. The charges were reversed because the amount of money Kahler billed to the account was less than the necessary$1500.

Magistrate Judge William Samuel had set Kahler under probation with a withheld judgment which means that if Kahler successfully completes the probation period the conviction will be erased from his record. Smith also ordered Kahler to pay the University of Idaho $800 in restitution costs. The restitution costs were high.
Hathaway takes on new job

(Ad) 25 As interest in videoed courses increases, Cecil Hathaway steps into his new position as Director of Engineering Outreach for the University of Idaho.

Professors can have their lectures taped specifically for the purpose of sending the tapes out to enrolled students in the program. The engineering college works closely with the College of Education and other departments such as physics, computer science, electrical engineering and mechanical engineering.

Don't be afraid to park, take stand

By Chris Doris

Off The Raft

Say No! The never-ending gall of the AF faculty is simply amazing. They have become hung up on their traditions. They forget that students give them their jobs; students and their parents are paying their wages. Still they have the nerve to demand exclusive parking privileges— even in student-oriented areas such as dormitory parking lots and the Student Health Center lot.

Twenty years ago this kind of blatant infringement of student rights would not have gotten off the drawing board. Student activism would have halted such a notion, but faculty now has observed "student apathy." In an attempt to take advantage of students' do-nothing attitude, they've passed regulations restricting student parking near their classes. And they fully expect the students to sit still for it.

The Faculty Council meeting this spring provided a clue to student resentment when about 50 enraged student spectators crashed the meeting. In an attempt to calm the crowd, the council postponed the issue for the next week(s) to allow the ABUI Senate to present its ideas.

The Senate's ideas were very clear. They felt the answer was not to give exclusive parking privileges to any one group, but to raise parking permit fees over a two-year period and let the laws of supply and demand rule. They also suggested the Parking Committee (comprised of students, faculty and staff) and the council's ad hoc parking committee (consisting of three faculty members who were displaced by the parking committee's solution) meet in a joint public session to compromise on the parking issue.

But the suggestions were ignored. Instead, the ad hoc committee went on with its own selfish plan, railroaded it through Faculty Council, and sent it to the administration for action.

A laughable attempt to appease students, the administration took part of the students' advice: they raised the parking fees. Still, faculty and staff were given exclusive parking rights of the nine core parking lots they had originally requested.

There has been a steady rise in the use of the program by industry, according to Chris Holden, assistant to the director of the division of instructional media. The UI is a member of the Association of Media Based Continuing Education for Engineers (AMCEE), she said. According to Hathaway, the AMCEE markets videos for universities and corporations.

The university was also one of 18 accepted by The National Technical University (NTU) which, according to Hathaway, is a spinoff of AMCEE. NTU provides the chance to earn a master's degree through the use of videoed tapes and satellite communications.

The reason for the increase in the use of the program by industry, according to Hathaway, is because engineers are often times called to do projects that will deter them from studying. This way they can hold on to the tapes and eventually get caught up, he said.

One of the attractions to this job is a smooth running organization with a lot of good people," he said. Eventually UI may get an "upgrade" to allow for a satellite system, explained Hathaway. "NTU courses may be beamed up through satellites and received by industries who have paid to take the course," he said.

Approximately $150,000 of the one-quarter million dollar budget, is from state and appropriated funds, according to Hathaway. The rest comes from sales.

A big client is Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) in Idaho Falls, he said. The Air Force has also started having people register for courses. Tapes are sent all over the place, according to Holden. But because of the time lag in mailing, it becomes difficult to keep records, she explained.

The Engineering Outreach Program has a staff of about eight, according to Hathaway. Although various universities have similar programs, UI is probably doing more in registration services for students.

Before being appointed to his current position, Hathaway was serving Lecturer in Transportation under Civil Engineering for almost 25 years.

First the bad news...

July 18 The leader gathered her tribe around.

"I have bad news and good news," she said. "First, the bad news. The harvest was a failure, and the game has vanished. We have nothing to eat but buffalo chips. However, the good news is that we have plenty of chips."

It's been that kind of week around the ASUI offices. Preliminary year-end financial figures point toward a potential ASUI budget shortfall of around $65,000. That's bad news.

This loss won't create the potential chaos it once might have because of the extra-large general reserve brought about from the new ASUI Activity Fee increase, which began this fall. That's good news.

Covering the loss from the general reserve affects the ASUI plan for massive and necessary capital purchases, especially for the golf course. Outdoor Programs, and KUOI-FM. Changes are drastically reduced for these department's get anything close to their needs. That's some bad news.

The story continues to describe the potential of a credit to the University of Idaho and a refund to UI students for mistaken FICA — Social Security — contributions. That's more good news.

If the good news continues, the University of Idaho administration will have additional money to spend on critical needs around the campus, and the ASUI will have money to address its critical needs.

A combination of very optimistic — if not unrealistic — income projections and lack of spending controls brought ASUI to the edge of a financial crisis. Only a fortuitous, one-time combination of events might make it possible to get through this fiscal year. But what about next year? And the ones after that?

The final budget figures will require close scrutiny by ASUI officials. Once the problem areas are identified, it will take the concerted and coordinated efforts of the ASUI and the UI financial vice president's staff to establish and enforce procedures and protections which will prevent reoccurrences of these problems. There were barely enough chips this time. But unless there is some planning ahead, the results of financial constipation will cause the ASUI to suffer some hungry winters.

UI enrollment up: gains expected

(June 20) Summer school enrollment at the University of Idaho is up, but by how much is unknown. The reason for this is that registration continues throughout the summer for shorter courses and workshops, according to Matt Teln. UI registrar.

Enrollment as of Monday morning reached 1,731. Enrollment on June 10 (Registration Day) was 589. and 1,143 pre-registered. Final figures will not be available until summer session closes August 2. A number of short courses and off-campus workshops are conducted throughout the summer.

At this same time last year, 1,727 students were enrolled in the summer session, including 220 in the Cougar d`Alene off-campus program.

More students are expected to register in special workshops and accelerated courses throughout the summer at the UI, pushing the total up around 2,500.

WSU officials last week had expressed concern that some WSU students might enroll in joint UI-WSU courses as UI students because the UI's summer fee is $85.25 per credit hour compared with $65 at WSU. Because of a reciprocal agreement, neither school charges out-of-state fees during summer school.

That fear failed to materialize as students were required to register for such cooperative programs through their "parent institution," Teln said.

If you are calling long distance from campus, collect or billing to your parents' telephone calling card, you are paying operator assisted rates. Operator assisted rates are approximately 2/3 higher than the direct dialed rate you would pay if you placed the call from your campus telephone and billed to your own student calling card.

file a claim for the tax monies and to distribute them. BSU Controller Daral VanKleek said that BSU has no plans at this time to end the withholding because of what he described as a "logistical nightmare." He described the task of finding out which full-time students were university employees and which university employees were full-time students as "very difficult," adding, "there is no adequate way to do it right now.")

VanKleek noted that BSU, "basically being a community college," would find it more difficult than the UI to track full-time student status, since "in the time that drop-add date has past, students who registered as full-time are part-time and some part-time students have become full-time."

Frances Otto, BSU payroll officer, said the ISU also has no plans to stop the withholdings because she understands that Idaho State had made these withholdings only to the extent that the university would not exempt anyone except foreign students.

Charles Severn, manager of the social services office in the Idaho Auditor's office, said that he has notified all the universities and colleges that they should "cease and desist" withholding from the students' wages. When informed by the Argonaut BSU and ISU were still withholding FICA from full-time students, Severn said, "If they are, they shouldn't be."

Severn said that the universities were "last year to last year and desist" the withholding and "go back, look, and determine if it is worth it to the university to file a claim for the funds."

LSCS, BSU, and ISU can only claim three years of refunds because of the statute of limitations. UI is receiving six years, but it will not be removed. "People want to know the rationale behind the program," complained Reece. "Every effort will be made to relocate the trees on campus."

Right now, the Steel lot is set back from the street and a thick wall of shrubs "screen" the lot, said Reece. If they said they will not use this lot because of the dense shrubbery for safety reasons, said Reece.

To provide a screen and yet to have the ease of anyone hiding in the bushes, a combination of three foot -diameter and deciduous trees will be planted, Reece said. "This will be a landscaping wall creating those feelings of insecurity that could also be paved and lights installed.

Red budget of the ASUI, the request of student government would be considered favorably. The golf course is budgeted for an income of $14,900, but the final figure has been ruled out. Expenditures were to be $15,000, but the total was $16,000.

Don Ballis, ASU golf course manager said that the income short fall was attributable to a "seven-month season," unlike that of the usual nine-month operation. "We lost the months of November and December," he said, "I think we did pretty good for seven months."

Over the previous three years, golf course income has averaged about $118,000. He also said the over expenditures were made on needed improvements to the golf course, which were "concerned with" by other persons in the university.

Neither Barry Bonilla, the professional coordinator of ASUI Productions (Entertainment), nor Dave Eser, student manager, were able to be reached for comment.

The Lecture Notes program income was projected to be $25,000, but took in $12,000. The notes were not available for as many classes as planned, and also "poor management" took its toll.

The Idaho Argonaut showed a loss of $4,600. However, that same figure includes almost $1,000 which has been projected as "profit" and built into the total ASUI budget at the beginning of the year. The Argonaut actually spent $6,100 less than it took in.

The decision to publish the summer Argonaut was made in order to avoid having to be cut off of the unreserved expense, and funded primarily from last year's monies.

Argonaut advertising manager, late payments and the spring advertisers are still coming in, but this income will be included in the current year, as will revenues from the summer Argonaut.

The Gem of the Mountains yearbook came up at $4,900 short, which was attributed to the failure to obtain national advertising. ReproGraphics was $5,000 down, and the Photo Bureau was $100 down primarily because of increased irregular Help expenses.

The Argonaut and the Gem were not charged for services provided by the Photo Bureau and ReproGraphics, which clouded actual cost and income figures for the departments. This year the newspaper and yearbook will be billed.

Fine money helps parking lots

By Maegan Guido
Of the Argonaut
July 25 The next time you must pay for that parking ticket on the UI campus, don't be mad, be glad. You caught a break. It is costing you less to park.

The money generated from parking permits for the 1986-87 fiscal year was about $75,000, according to Tom Moore, UI parking coordinator, and it's all going to improving two UI parking lots.

The two lots receiving work are numbered the Alumni Center lot, and number 46, the parking lot between the Steel House and the music building.

Physical Plant will act as project manager of the improvements. Joanne Reece, director of facility planning, said parking lot 45 will be expanded. Rather, work will be done on existing boundaries. "We will restructure the layout and increase the capacity from the parking spaces to 84 in total."

A new roadway will be widened from 18 to 24 feet, so that two cars can enter and exit at the same time safely.

Also new landscaping will be done, the lot will be paved and parking lot lights will be added.

Number 46, the Steel lot, will be expanded to double the capacity. It will be expanded out of the "curb closer to Black Street, changing the number of spaces from 70 to 140."

Because of the expansion, evergreen trees currently located midway through the lot will be removed. "People want to know the rationale behind the program," complained Reece. "Every effort will be made to relocate the trees on campus."

Right now, the Steel lot is set back from the street and a thick wall of shrubs "screen" the lot, said Reece. If they said they will not use this lot because of the dense shrubbery for safety reasons, said Reece.

To provide a screen and yet to have the ease of anyone hiding in the bushes, a combination of three foot -diameter and deciduous trees will be planted, Reece said. "This will be a landscaping wall creating those feelings of insecurity that could also be paved and lights installed.
