Student fees increase by a couple bucks

BY CLAYTON HAILEY

Total

How much will students be required to pay in registration fees for the school year 1988-89? $524.

Despite the numerous attempts and proposals by the university administration, State Board of Education and the State legislature to raise student fees, the only fee increase the students will be forced to pay is $2.5 increase in Student Accident Insurance.

Student Accident Insurance covers accidents students encounter while school is in session. SAI is not liability insurance and furthermore a increase in student rates has been expected for some time.

"The increase is because of inflation," said University of Idaho Risk Management Officer, Carol Grupp. "Student Accident Insurance has been only $1.00 since I arrived in 1972."

Increasing total fees from $521.00 to $524.00 is the smallest fee increase students will be burdened with since 1978-79 school year.

The largest increase in student fees was for the fiscal year 1984-85 when fees sky rocketed from $490.00 to $545.00.

Nevertheless, ASUI President Brad Cuddy said that student fees have increased by 136 percent in the last 10 years, thus placing more of the burden of funding an education on the students of Idaho.

"It is getting harder and harder for students to bear the burden of funding their educations," said Cuddy. "The legislature is shifting the burden from the State of Idaho to the students in a state where tuition for a college education is illegal."

Despite the increases in student fees, Cuddy is not certain that the students are getting more for their money. It all comes down to state legislature funding of higher education.

Senate saves LRC, allocates $1,500

BY DAWN BOBBY

The ASUI Senate appropriated $1,500 to emergency funds for the Learning Resource Center, whose tutoring program would have collapsed this week from lack of funds.

According to Sen. Tina Kagi, Judy Wallin, LRC director, called the program would have collapsed this week from lack of funds.

Kagi said (LRC) had unusual numbers of students coming in last week, after George Dafoe, SUB senior accountant, informed her that her budget was depleted.

Kagi said (LRC) had unusual numbers of students coming in last week, after George Dafoe, SUB senior accountant, informed her that her budget was depleted.

Kagi said (LRC) had unusual numbers of students coming in last week, after George Dafoe, SUB senior accountant, informed her that her budget was depleted.

Tutoring has actually seen an increase in the last few weeks.

"This isn't a lack of good financial management," Kagi said.

Kagi said Wallin had three options: 1) continue full services until today and then cut the program until next year, 2) give service only to students with less than a 2.0 GPA, and get $1,500 from the senate, or 3) continue full services until the end of finals week, and get $2,400 from the senate.

Kagi said Wallin blamed Dafoe for the cut, saying that he didn't warn her about the lack of funds until early this week, when she had no other recourse but to turn to the senate.

"I'd like it recorded in the minutes that I really detest people who don't stay within their budgets," Kagi said.

Sen. Craig McCurry voted yes on the bill, which was handwritten and not numbered until it was added to the agenda that evening, but debated against it.

"I'd like it recorded in the minutes that I really detest people who don't stay within their budgets," McCurry said later in Communications.

In other business, John Burns, Murdoc's general manager and co-owner, asked the senate for endorsement of an expansion which would allow minors to come in and dance, but not drink.

Plans include an upstairs bar, where legal-age patrons could buy drinks if they got a blacklight stamp at the door. Minors could come in and dance in the expanded downstairs area.

Burns asked if the senate could get some information on dance alternatives for minors in Moscow. Burns said Moscow City Police had told him minors were resorting to noisy residential parties which disrupted local neighborhoods, and though they had never actually said they endorsed his ideas, he thought they agreed that they could be a welcome alternative.

Burns also said Murdoc's would need little construction to make the new bar and dance area, and the State Liquor Board had already approved having minors in a building where liquor is served.

But a Murdoc's enlargement wouldn't take place if students weren't interested, Burns said.

"I'm dealing with a declining market," Burns said.

"I'm not asking for an endorsement of Murdoc's," he said. "I'm asking for an endorsement of the idea."

Also in Communications, the Senate approved Beth Howard as Argonaut editor for next semester, shortly before adjournment, after current editor Clayton Hailey asked for immediate action on the editor appointment bill.

The senate voted 10-1 in favor of Howard's appointment, with Sen. Robert Watson voting no.

Hailey said that Howard needed this time to advertise for a new editorial staff, so that she wouldn't have to hire within current staff only, as he had been forced to do last semester.
Radio forum addresses date rape

BY JILL CHRISTINE BECK

"In conjunction with National Victim's Rights Week, the ASU is sponsoring Date Rape Awareness Week, which began Monday. Special presentations and films were offered to help make students more aware of the problem of date rape. Advocates from Alternatives to Violence of the Palouse were available to speak at living groups Monday and today. Also part of the awareness week were a short film and presentation Monday and a forum on Victim's Rights by Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman Wednesday." Also in conjunction with the Date Rape Awareness Week, Betty Thomas, from the University of Idaho Women's Center spoke Wednesday evening on "Calling Moscow," a KUID talk show.

According to Thomas, rape by acquaintance is often more difficult to deal with than rape by a stranger.

"The emotional impact that's caused by an acquaintance rape is much more severe," Thomas said during Wednesday's talk show.

According to Thomas, date rape victims often blame themselves, feeling perhaps that they brought the rape on themselves through their own actions or by the way they were dressed, etc.

When raped by a stranger, the victim is often just able to know that there was nothing she could have done to prevent the rape.

According to Thomas, rape occurs partly because of socialization.

"Men see sex as something women need to be talked into," Thomas said.

Betty Thomas of the UI Women's Center fielded questions about date rape Wednesday night as hosts called into KUID's radio talk show, "Calling On Moscow."

(ARGONAUT/Brian Duffy)

"Men grow up hearing that women mean yes, even when they say no," she said. "They believe that the woman really wants them to keep trying."

These beliefs are reinforced through movies and books and other means.

Thomas said rape victims should seek the help of professionals in dealing with the emotional aspects of the crime.

International Week winds down

BY JULIE HARTWELL

Earl Kellogg, Executive Director of the Consortium for the International Development spoke Monday night to mark the beginning of the University of Idaho's first International Week.

The topic of his speech, "University International Dimension: Necessary or Just Interesting?" explored the role of land grant universities in realizing and addressing current international trends.

"I would like to congratulate the International Trade and Development Office and President Richard Gibb on the successful implementation of an International Week at the UI," Kellogg began. "It is an ideal time to enhance the understanding of the world."

"I was given a reading list a few days ago and I've read five. It's the first time I've ever done that."

"I'm not a world traveler but I'm learning from these books."

Kellogg said the university is fortunate to have so many things going on at one time. He said he would like to see a program in place to encourage students to participate in international activities outside of the UI, which would aid in helping students to gain the international experience they need to be successful.

"And it costs a lot of money to do the travel," he said. "The comfort of this room is looking at the International Week catalog and seeing what is going on."

excellent idea; I know it will change over the years, and I know it will become tradition.

He explained that the trend to internationalize is irreversible, and good land grant universities will immediately address international issues in the programs and opportunities they offer students and faculty.

Kelling expressed concern that with the growing power of the United States internationally, people may not be well enough educated to protect this growing involvement.

"University" means "universal," our limits are the universe," Kelling said. "To practice excellence and scholarship in our universities, each student must have a command of the international scene.

Kelling offered some guidelines that universities could use to develop their own solution to the question "What should universities do?":

- Administrations should demonstrate a knowledge, interest, and commitment to the university's international dimension.
- There should be a unit to focus on various facets of the international dimension, such as support to faculty, promoting visibility of the programs, informing the faculty of opportunities, and actually implementing the programs.
- International programs should be integrated into individual departments and colleges rather than being separate and available only to those interested. It must be a part of every student's experience.
- There should be recognition, incentives, and rewards for being involved in international programs.
- Faculty with international abilities and interests should be nurtured.

- Consistent partial monetary support for international programs is necessary.

Kellogg concluded his address by stating that integrating the international dimension into our universities is one of the most important and challenging obstacles we will face. He stressed that what will be essential is that everyone involved demonstrates leadership and innovative thinking and action.

"If universities are to be an important contribution to preparing people for what is ahead, recognizing the international dimension is necessary," he said.

Kellogg's address was followed by reactions from a panel of speakers from the university and the community. The panel included Kenton Bird, The Idahoan; Norma Dobler, former Idaho State Senator; George Alvarez, Idaho State Board of Education; and William Saud, dean of UI College of Engineering.

One of the questions from the panel was whether the language requirements for university students should be increased. Kelling said the language learning is not solely the responsibility of the universities. He said it is also a responsibility of the K-12 level of schooling, and the exchange and work opportunities abroad.

The panel also addressed the question whether curriculum that seems irrelevant to international students on campus should be modified.

College is really the easy life. take it from someone who should know!

"Good morning. It's 11 AM. Good Shite. This is R. Keating live and alive wrapping up 16 continuous semesters of fun. Add frolic in college education. You know, it's been real... you know it's been fun, but has it really been real fun? Now that I am preparing to graduate from college for the third time in the last 8 years. I've been perpetually pondering the perennial perplexity of "What does it all mean?" After spending my time on books and "nihilism," what did I really have to show for it all? My time was spent thinking. I'm sure this is spent and it means nothing for this student. Why do we pay so much to attend college? What is the purpose of a college degree? If it's not useful, why do we continue to pay for it? The only reason we continue to pay for it is because we believe that it will provide us with a better future. But is this true? Is the money we spend on college really worth it? I think not. I believe that college is a waste of time and money. It is a place where we are forced to learn things that we don't want to learn. We are forced to take classes that we don't have any interest in. We are forced to attend lectures that we don't understand. We are forced to read books that we don't want to read. It is a place where we are forced to do things that we don't want to do. It is a place where we are forced to work for things that we don't want to work for. It is a place where we are forced to sacrifice our own interests for the interests of others. It is a place where we are forced to conform to the standards of others. It is a place where we are forced to be part of a system that we don't believe in. It is a place where we are forced to be part of a system that is not fair. It is a place where we are forced to be part of a system that is not just. It is a place where we are forced to be part of a system that is not equal. It is a place where we are forced to be part of a system that is not democratic.

Libel or manipulation: calling Cisek's bluff

Ever hear of the boy who cried wolf? People stopped believing him. The man who cried libel faces a similar threat to his credibility.

Ed Cisek, chief fiscal officer for the State Board of Education, has taken a new approach to eliminating bad publicity. He intimidates student reporters.

Last month, we wrote an editorial questioning the board's motives in issuing a notice of intent to raise student fees, especially after Cisek had said the board did not intend to impose a fee on students.

We referred to Cisek as "naughty little Edinburgh" and suggested that either the board changed its mind easily or Cisek was playing loose with the truth.

Apparently we touched a raw nerve.

In response to our criticism, Cisek sent us a letter citing various Supreme Court cases and subtly suggesting we may be in for a libel suit if we didn't print an apology. He never directly accused us of libel, but the implication was clear.

There's a reason. Cisek was not libelled. First, the editorial was not written with reckless disregard to the truth. Additionally, the precedents set by New York Times vs. Sullivan and Associated Press vs. Walker mean that public figures and officials are subject to criticism in the media.

"Everyone has a right to comment on matters of public interest and concern, provided they do so fairly and without an intent to defame. In other words, libelous statements are not libellous, however severe in their terms, unless they are written maliciously" (Hooper vs. Dunkirk Printing Company).

We do have to give Cisek credit, though. His timing is impeccable.

At the same day we received the letter from Cisek asking about libel, he gave a presentation at a State Board meeting about student fees.

What a surprise!

And of course, we were supposed to be so frightened that we wouldn't dare print anything about Cisek's escapade at the meeting.

The ploy didn't work.

Two stories we have printed this week, as well as this editorial.

Furthermore, as a state board official, suing the Associated Student Government of the University of Idaho via the Argonaut would be analogous to the president of a company suing his own company.

Ed Cisek is not a stupid man. We don't doubt that he is aware of this fact, as well as the previously cited libel laws.

It is unfortunate that a state official finds it necessary to participate in such intimidating practices. Perhaps if Cisek doesn't wish to be criticized by a student newspaper, he should refrain from pursuing student fee increases.

But if he can't do that, there are more professional means of covering one's tracks, if one feels the need to do so.

Finally, we would appeal to the state board to examine the use of strong-arm tactics and to eliminate inappropriate bullying.

On the other hand, some would say that intimidation is the sincerest form of flattery.

Thank you for returning my watch

Editor:
Several weeks ago on a Friday night, I lost my watch at one of the downtown bars. Waking up the following morning, I was devastated to find that my watch was gone. I made no headway after polling the places I had visited. My final hope was placing ads in the Idahoan and the Argonaut. After one week of preparing myself to never see my watch again I received a phone call. Janell Blomdahl from the Gamma Phi Beta house claimed she had the watch I was looking for. Indeed it was. I would like to publicly thank Janell for being an honest, decent human in a race full of fast paced, self-centered people. Many people would have just kept this watch. It is unique, new and expensive. Janell took my words "sentimental value" to heart. It is really great to know there are people in this world that are able to think of others needs before their own. Thanks again Janell.

Thank you to all who participated

Editor:
Please let me use space in your Letters columns to thank the candidates for the Janell Wicks Memorial Gifts who submitted their excellent resumes for committee consideration. There were seven members to that discerning committee who came for the yearly dessert and consideration to my home. We perused over your records and the choices were difficult to make! If I were able, I'd reward you every one. A special number were clustered at the top, Brian Long and Chandra Zenner who won, but also Kimberly Hangler and John Vanderpool, Norman Semanko and Kelly Kast. I was sorely torn in the decision.

Just know I'm grateful that the University of Idaho has such great students as you all are. You'll go forth to make your lives fulfill the fine promise which your early work and warm hearts have made possible. (P.S.) Thanks to the selection committee also!

"Right now, the amount spent on higher education is constant," said Cuddy. "But when the legislature fails to make adequate appropriations for higher education, students pick up the difference."

"So, basically we are not necessarily buying a better education, just paying more of the cost."

Although the last drive to increase student fees by the State Board of Education was during the Gino White administration (Fall 1985-Spring 1986), students were prepared to defend future student fee increases. ASUI officials and concerned students spent time this semester calling constituents, legislators and supporters of higher education as well as making numerous trips to state board meetings and legislative hearings.

Furthermore, the ASUI operated through the efforts of ASUI legislative lobbyist, Jeff Friel. Among the proposals and attempts were:

* Senate Bill #1313 which allowed the State Board of Education to guarantee bond payments for major capital improvements on university campuses with student fees did not guarantee that fees paid on each campus stayed on each campus.
* Proposed $50 matriculation fee (institutional maintenance fee) increase by the State Board of Education.
* Proposed facility fee by the State Board of Education.
* Senate Bill #1313 died on the House floor after nine lives in the Senate. Friel was instrumental in defeating SB #1313 for the benefit of students state-wide. Friel said that if SB #1313 passed students would risk a possible $148.00 student fee increase per academic year.

The proposed matriculation fee increase and the facility fee both failed at the March State Board meeting in Lewiston for lack of a second when the motion was brought to the floor by board finance chairman, George Alvarez.

Scholarships in Alaska offered

In the Atlin, British Columbia area.

Of the 10 grants given, Miller said five can be given to UI students interested in going on July 1-Aug. 24 trip. Students interested in obtaining a grant should turn in five copies of their proposal to Miller by May 2.

It is required that students going on the expedition register for summer school in order to receive credits for their research.

The grants pay for transportation to and from the Atlin, food and the money required to keep the program functioning. Students are required to bring their own personal equipment.

Not a single Idaho student is applied for a grant, but his office has been flooded with applications from students from Purdue and Washington State University.

"Our students should take advantage of this because it's the only program of this kind in the world," Miller said.

He said the experience is fun, but professional as well.

Tired of boring summer jobs? Five University of Idaho undergraduate students have the opportunity to receive a $2,000 grant to conduct an icefield research project this summer in Alaska.

According to Maynard Miller, former dean of the UI College of Mines and Earth Resources, the National Science Foundation is providing 10 summer grants, each worth $2,000, to conduct glacial research on the Juneau icefield and in the Atlin, British Columbia area.

Bright Lights: a flawed gem

WHAT does a filmmaker do with the coy-but-elegant material found in Jay McInerney's novel Bright Lights, Big City? The course not to follow, it seems, would be the one forged by director James Bridges, Michael J. Fox and McInerney himself. The production switched directors, was gouged with re-writes and was the height of initial disagreements between McInerney (who adapted his material to the screen) and Family Ties star Fox.

Given the high number of misses, Bright Lights had all the earmarks of disaster. The surprise is that the film succeeds as often as it does. There is a small, solid gem underneath the rough edges. Bright Lights, Big City's biggest mistake was its showing of a variegated performance by Fox. His popularity is certainly no surprise. His success in films has merely built off Fox's ability to deliver small-screen lines in a manner to be picked up by an adoring teen-age audience. And when Fox has done work at the material he was in back to the Future was merely Family Ties with special effects. Teen Wolf wasn't anything worth mentioning. Light of Day supplied a picture for Fox, which could be described as best as unconvincing and Secret of My Success merely typed Top Gun with Walt Disney and was more lightweight than the other two films combined. Fox does fine with funny material but Bright Lights, Big City needed him to back up that humor with unlikable traits and a fully realized character.

Fox rises admirably to the occasion. As Jamie Conway, Fox exudes his talent for glib one-liners to the ability to create a convincingly portrait of a self-destructive cripple.

In fact, all the performances are rock solid. Kellie Shandland (Stand By Me, Lost Boys) again turns in a charmingly, Anne Wiaz (Hannah and Her Sisters) adds a poignant maternal grace to the proceedings and Faye Cates (Fast Times at Ridgemont High) is only given a handful of lines. For that, she's perfect.

For the most part, McInerney's script is revealing without resorting to heavy-handed characterization. And, wonder of wonders, it provides humor without insulting anyone's intelligence.

On the bad side, McInerney (understandably) is too enamored of his own material. At times, a scene which gains its power from the written word has been unsuccessfully, too-literally translated to the screen.

And, towards the end of the film, McInerney loses his grip on the symbolism and forces Fox to come to black-and-white realizations which simply aren't as convincing as the idiosyncratic situations in the rest of the film. These flaws might've been prevented from sticking out by a more innovative director but Bridges apparently spent all his time squeezing good performances out of his actors and little time on considering how to make his film look more interesting.

Although Bridges does create convincing, intriguing settings discs and magazine offices are detailed well - he does not seem to trust the material enough to take chances with a scene in a way that says, Woody Allen does.

One example is a fantastic monologue delivered by Fox in which it would've been more telling to concentrate on aspects of Fox's face and actions. Heck, even John Hughes trusts his young actors to hold the audience for long stretches at a time (see Breakfast Club). But during this fantastic piece of acting, Bridges thought it necessary to cut to the person listening to Fox (in case we forgot she was there), causing not only a disturbingly choppy rhythm but also a simplistic atmosphere of soap-opera conversation.

Dream sequences are not dreamy enough, the romance not passionate enough. Too bad, because it is a distillation of the characters of Bright Lights, Big City. When McInerney's talent in both novel and script was to present a small tale of self-examination, Bridges' direction allows the audience to remain passive at moments when, too, should be driven to explore Conway's way.

Even with the inherent flatness, Bright Lights, Big City paints a well-acted, competently written story about an average person forced to face emptiness. Although good intentions can't count for everything, they do make the film a minor success.

Beadwork takes place among fine arts

THE Bead Goes On: Exhibitions in Contemporary Beadwork opened last week at the Prichard Gallery. It features 50 works and will run through May 1.

Bead Goes On exhibit captures life and essence of aged medium

BY DAVID PIECK

The University of Idaho Prichard Gallery exhibit The Bead Goes On: Expressions in Contemporary Beadwork, which demonstrates the evolution of beadwork from a "hippie" craft into the avant-garde arts, will remain on display through May 11.

Beads, valued for their supposed religious and magical properties, have been used by every culture in recorded history. Rosary beads are still well-known, and the word "bead" is derived from the Middle English bible, or prayer. Beads reached their peak of popularity by the early 1900s with mass production and large numbers of print-ed patterns in ladies' journals. They declined during the two World Wars, but experienced resurgence in the 1960s.

The Bead Goes On features the progressive beadwork of 30 artists from the late 1970s to the present. The 50 works are anything but boring. Bead artists have been influenced by techniques from throughout the world, as well as other arts such as weaving, painting, sculpture and papermaking. Many of the artists have devoted their lives to beadwork, while for others it is an exploratory medium.

Approaches to modern beadwork are bold and exciting, with originality replacing the repetitive patterns of the craft of the past. Subject matter includes ordinary objects such as a tissue box, a bowling pin and a steam iron, covered with colorful beads that change them into magical, visually charged works of art.

Sherry Hart's "Tribute to Helen" is an actual iron that has been covered with beads all the way down to the plug. On the face of the iron is the image of a steaming coffee cup beneath a singular all-seeing eye, similar to the one on the back of the dollar bill. Hart's work shows definite planning, whether conscious or unconscious, that evokes imaginative life into her subject matter.

"Trinity," by Martin Kilner. Lucia Anonelli and Laura Poppence resembles a sort of necklace that might be worn by a high priest in North Africa or India. Three beaded strands on the left and right sides flow from one and merge in symmetry at a central point with three vertical ovals. Below the ovals, beaded strings flow. "Trinity" is a very elegant piece.

"Although long regarded as a 'country cousin' to other, finer arts, contemporary beadwork can now lay claim to the avant-garde influences that have swept the arts in the past 20 years," said Johanna Hays, UI director of galleries.

The Prichard Gallery, located at 114 S. Main St. in downtown Moscow, is open Monday through Thursday, 11 a.m.-7 p.m.; Friday 11 a.m.-9 p.m.; Saturday 11 a.m.-9 p.m.; and Sunday 1 p.m.-7 p.m.
Renataissance Fair to entertain Moscow

BY KIRK LAUGHLIN

The 15th annual Moscow Renaissance Fair will not only be the setting for a wide variety of music dancing, it also has become the subject of a Utah-produced television program.

The 1988 Fair, continuing in the tradition that they are held "around the first weekend of May," according to Bill London, chairman of the event's publicity committee, will be held April 30 and May 1 in Moscow's East City Park.

The Fair gives people "the chance to celebrate the end of a Palouse winter," said London.

According to London, the tradition of having a springtime celebration extends back to at least 1902, when the "Maypole dance" held on the UI campus.

Although the first fair was sponsored, in part, by the UI, London claims that now the event is completely autonomous and not-for-profit.

The Renaissance Fair is unique in that it provides a place for artists to show and sell their wares, said London.

Music and dancing will also be performed, free of charge. The Kingspins will play on Saturday along with the Washington-Izahoe Chorale, Hal Logan's Motown Sextet, Philippine dancers, jazz artists to show and sell their wares, said London.

The event also has a student's art show, a children's area, and a "Food Court" with many local foods from the area, London said.

An "Art of Renaissance" sale also will be held.

The Fair, which is open to the public, is free and will be held from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

Storyteller updates folk tales

BY DAVID PIEKIR
STAFF WRITER

Folk storyteller Michael "Badhair" Williams performed for children and gave a workshop for University of Idaho children's literature students April 20.

Williams, a native of Zirconia, North Carolina, told traditional stories from the Appalachians with subjects ranging from witches, kings and giants to everyday happenings.

Included among many of his stories was one about brothers who built a house for their parents, which fell apart when they were cleaning it.

"A lot of these folk stories are 1,500 to 2,000 years old," Williams said. "I got them from Ireland, Scotland, England, Wales and Africa, among many other places.

"It was a book of folk tales, and that's my real pay," Williams said.

Williams has spent the last 11 weeks telling stories on the "Bestsellers" program over the Moscow's Community Radio.

He has flown about half of his stories, ending his show April 15. He will perform at the Moscow Community Radio April 23.

"I get tired of living a 9-foot life by foot existence. I have to change story foundations," Williams said.

"Folk tales are a foundation. They are important to know where you've come from. We are really tribal people. Our roots are in the villages and towns, but Americans have lost that heritage. We are all over on separate ships, but we're all in the same boat now. We need to get back to who we are on these ships, to the stories they told.

"In the course of his travels across the United States, Canada and England, Williams has increased his personal library of folk stories and personal experiences. In Alabama, he played all that he had taken, crashed on days after his arrived and a 400-pound man had to be taken out of a lake with a witch. On another occasion, he was speeding between jobs at 70 m.p.h. when he came around a turn and saw 200 police cars lined up along the side of the road. Because he was traveling for an escaped convict, Williams did not get a ticket.

"Once, a librarian told me about a boy who had never used the library. He checked out his first book. The book was "Folk Tales."

"It was a book of folk tales. That's my real pay," Williams said.

Ogbeide leaps off

Vandal track team

Michael Lewis

University of Idaho sprinter and jump record-holding long jumper, George Ogbeide, after soaring his Sky Conference record of 7.18 (3.0 feet) in the long jump at the University of Texas El-Paso national on Sunday, has decided to quit the Vandal track team.

According to Ogbeide, he informed Mike Keller of his decision last Sunday after the return from the UTEP meet with a letter to the coach.

"The move to Keller, Ogbeide said, "I'm doing this for the best benefit of the team and myself. I feel I've grown to you and your staff, so I get rid of myself before it's too late. I hope this will bring back feeling to both of us, because it's in the best interests of all concerned."

Ogbeide refused to comment further on the reasons surrounding his decision.

He did say, however, that he will not be able to return to the premier of the season, and that he is unsure what immediate plans are, he will return to his home in June to compete in that season's Olympic Trials.

From what I understand, he will not think about returning to the team and he will return to his home in June to compete in that season's Olympic Trials.

He said that during a small meeting prior to the UTEP meet, Ogbeide argued with Keller regarding the athletes' freedom to choose the best teams for the 4x100 relay team, as well as the practice plan that he was being allotted for the long jump.

"He and Keller have some differences," Ogbeide said. "I just couldn't figure out what the exact differences were. But I think he has legitimate reasons (for leaving)."

Ogbeide finished fourth in the long jump at the NCAA Indoor Championships last winter, and both Kent and Fletcher at Sky Conference long jump champion.

The Vandal will begin in the University of Idaho Swim Center and will involve a bicycle transition in the rear of the building.

Top doubles team lives for tennis

Skosh Berwald

Eremd del Degan

By Laurie Disteldorf

They will be playing tennis until the day they die.

At least that is what doubles partners Skosh Berwald and Eremd del Degan said.

In the top position for the Vandal of doubles, the duo is 12-2. Berwald's doubles injury was the reason for their 7-6, 9-4, 6-7 loss against Whitman in the beginning of the season.

In spite of Berwald's injury, he and del Degan continued to play.

"I could hardly hit the ball and I couldn't lift my shoulder up over my head at all," Berwald said.

Their second loss was to Lee Gualay and Dave Tibbets of Boise State during the BSU Invitational.

We were on a 10-game winning streak and were so used to rolling right over people that we ran into a situation where we got a little flustered," top seed del Degan said of their loss.

"We should have won that match. We are better than them, there is no doubt about that," Berwald said. "It just wasn't our day."

"Del Degan attributes his speed to his past as a soccer player. "I played soccer before I ever played tennis, and that's what I developed my footwork," he said.

The senior from Calgary, Alberta, didn't start playing tennis until he turned 12 years old. He used to fool around playing tennis with his brother until he was persuaded to join a club and then he took off from there.

Berwald, on the other hand, started hitting the nets when he was six and started getting serious when he was in the 6th grade.

Though no one in his family had played tennis seriously, it was his..."

Men host Big Sky North Division Playoffs

The University of Idaho men's tennis team hosted Eastern Washington University 9-0 on Eastern's home court Tuesday bringing their season record to 8-3. The lady's team also got their revenge against Washington State University by winning 3-4 earlier in the week.

Cathy Shenander defeated Kelle Radcliffe in the No. 1 position; but her sister Kitty lost at No. 2 to Nancy Lejour.

The two teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the singles. The top-seeded doubles team of Shanander and Shenander took the No. 1 match making them 17-0.

"It was a very close match," head coach Dave Scott said. "It was four-all, we had one more doubles match to play and our No. 2 doubles team (Eliza Lovers and Jody Farrell) came together and pulled off the match for us." On Friday, the University of Montana, Montana State University, Eastern Washington University, Boise State University and the UI will compete in the Big Sky North Division Tennis Playoffs in Moscow. If it continues to rain, the tournament will be moved to the Lewis and Clark Tennis Center in Lewiston.

The University of Idaho Baseball Club is hosting a five-team tournament at Guy Wicks Field and the Moscow High School Field this weekend to wrap up their 1988 baseball season.

The Idaho club will compete in a round robin tournament against Boise State, Montana State, University of Montana and Eastern Montana. The winner will be chosen on the best overall record and will receive a trophy. "Montana and Montana State are pretty tough," said Idaho team captain Tim Bardiick. "We lost to BSU (6-2 earlier in the season), so they're also tough." Idaho will play Eastern Montana on Saturday at 11:30 a.m. at Guy Wicks Field. Boise State Saturday at 7 p.m. at Moscow High School Field, Montana State Sunday at 1 p.m. on Guy Wicks Field and will wrap up the games against the University of Idaho at 3:30 p.m. on the same field.

"Competition should be real good," Bardiick said. "It should be fun for the fans to watch." "We'd like to compete in the first tournament we've ever had," he said. "We encourage fans to attend the Boise State game in particular, but says he hopes fans will support the Vandals squad in all four of their games.

parents' interest in the game that get Berwald played.
Playing on his high school coach, Dave Scott, Berwald won regional twice, and the took second in state his senior year.
As a doubles team, the two seniors have only been playing together for one year. However Del Degan has played for the Vandals during two years, and Berwald for four.
"I'm the team and he's the finesse of the game," Berwald said. "He's got more accuracy. He sets up the shots and doesn't dirty work and I bang them away," he said.

"It's a confidence thing for me at the serve because when I serve, I know that nothing is going to get by him," del Degan commented.
"It's fun playing with Skosh because he gets really intense on the court," del Degan said.
"You get down a little bit and he gets you right back up spirits. He plays so intensely that it feels like we are in a war with our opponents," he said.
Del Degan will remain at the UI to study computer science and hopes to help next year's tennis team as an assistant.
Berwald graduated this month with a bachelor's degree in art and minor in art and plans to teach tennis in Germany or Italy for a year after he graduates.

Dorms to get storage for firearms this fall

BY BRIAN HOLLOWAY
STAFF WRITER

Students who own firearms will have storage rooms to keep them in when they return to the residence halls next fall according to Bruce Pitman, Dean of Student Services.

Pitman said he and Housing Office officials decided to set storage rooms built for students to keep their guns in rather than banning them from the residence halls completely, as has been done in the past.

“We want to preserve the opportunities for hunters to go hunting and at the same time we’re trying to greatly reduce the risk that is present with our current unregulated system,” Pitman said.

Until the decision to create storage facilities was made, the University of Idaho was the only university in the northwest which allowed students to keep guns in their residence hall rooms.

Students will be able to get their guns through a member of the residence hall staff, who is on duty.

THE ARGONAUT

It's a homer....

STEER YOUR WAY TO A NEW CAR DEAL

imagine yourself behind the wheel of your new car... the velvety touch of the upholstery... that new car smell... the sweet hum of the engine... the feel of the wheel as you take those precision turns. You're in control, riding on top of the world. You've got freedom... freedom to cruise... freedom to take that trip to the land of sunshine and sandy beaches.

How can you make this dream become reality? With a little planning and know-how, you can develop a strategy for buying the car of your dreams at a price you can afford.

Use Your Research Skills
When you plan your budget for your new car, remember to consider not only the purchase price, but also operating, maintenance, and insurance costs.

Check out the track record of any vehicle that looks promising by reading automotive and consumer magazines. Research specifications, standard equipment, options, fuel economy, safety records, and pricing. Then, flip to the used-car section in your newspaper for a preview of how your "picks" might fare in the future.

Armed with a list of four or five cars to consider, visit dealerships in the area to view and drive those cars.

Get Behind the Wheel
Be sure to take your test drive during good weather and in full daylight. Avoid the temptation to turn up the volume on your favorite radio station. Instead, tune in to the car's vibrations.
and sounds. Listen for the steadiness of the engine's sounds and cabin noise. Open the windows to hear any unusual sounds while braking and turning.

Drive on different surface pavements to check the car's handling and smoothness of ride (suspension system, braking, and steering). Make sure you're comfortable behind the wheel. Can you reach hand and foot controls without stretching? Is your head too close to the roof or windshield? Is your vision obscured by the dashboard or headrests? Can you sit comfortably without hunching forward or cramping your legs? (Check the back seats too.)

When you return the car, assess the dealership by asking these questions:
- Is the dealership conveniently located?
- Are the service areas kept clean and orderly?
- Are loaner cars available if your car is out of service for several days?

Weigh the Options
When you're ready to make a deal, you'll be faced with a range of options—from performance and safety options to luxury, appearance, and entertainment options. If you can't afford them all, what should you sacrifice?

What you should not sacrifice are the performance and safety features. These features—a more powerful engine, better steering and braking, safety gear, and internally wired security systems—are hard to add at a later date. They can save your life—and help you reduce your insurance costs.

You can always add upgrades, such as deluxe wheel covers and a better stereo, later. When you purchase extras, your main concern should be your ability to finance the total package.

Negotiate for the Best Deal
How much negotiating power do you have? Usually, you can negotiate between 10 percent and 20 percent off the sticker price. But a lot depends on timing. Pick your time carefully. Month-ends are often slow sales times, and dealers will be more open to negotiating. According to Auto Week magazine, any time you read that dealer inventories exceed 30 to 60 days, you're in a good bargaining position.

Here are some negotiating tips to follow:
- Don't talk about financing until the price is settled. Your means of payment can influence the price you pay.
- Be prepared to wait for the car you really want. Chances are the dealer can swap with another local dealer who has your choice on his lot.
- Consider selling your old car yourself. You'll get a higher price than if you trade it in.
- Understand that markups on foreign and luxury cars are higher than those on domestic compacts or subcompacts.
- Inspect the car carefully before you close the deal. If anything is wrong, point it out to the dealer before you sign the contract.

Shopping for a loan is just as important as shopping for your car. Talk to at least three financing sources, including the dealer, a bank, a savings and loan, and a credit union. Compare the Annual Percentage Rate (APR) and the lengths of the loans.

Interest on car payments is figured differently from the simple interest compounded on your savings accounts or student loans. Obviously, the shorter the term and the lower the rate, the less you will pay overall. But, you can lower your monthly payments by increasing the term, or reduce your total payout by accepting higher monthly charges.

Unless you are an accounting major, have your lender prepare a chart, such as the one below, that clearly shows your options.

Buying a new car is a major investment. When you've taken the time and effort to ensure getting a good deal, you can be proud of both your car and your buying savvy.

- Hold on to your credit receipts; carry them in your wallet, or keep a running list of the month's charges in your checkbook. Remind yourself that some of the money in your account is already spoken for, and you'll be less likely to spend it before the charge bills come through.
- Limit your initial short-term debt (retail accounts, installment loans—everything but a mortgage) to no more than 15 percent of your take-home pay. For most of us, credit debts above that level spell T-R-O-U-B-L-E.

In the Beginning...

Building a Credit History
Start small.
Building a credit history takes time and patience—but, contrary to some popular money myths, it's relatively easy to get first-time credit.
Some ways to jump-start your credit-ability:
- Open savings and checking accounts. They allow you to show you can handle money responsibly and they will score points on credit applications.
- Open one or two charge accounts at local department stores and pay your bills on time. You can use the stores as credit references after about three months.
- Use your car or the money in your savings account as collateral for a small loan. You are developing a good credit history by paying the loan off according to the terms of the contract.
- If you don't have assets to use as collateral, ask a parent or adult friend (somebody with a good credit rating) to cosign your loan application.
- Apply for a gasoline credit card. Like retail cards, they're relatively easy to get.
- Once you've built a credit rating, keep it clean! It's important to make payments on time. Don't commit yourself to monthly payments you can't afford.

And if you get into trouble? Bite the bullet: Call or write your creditors if you're sending a "short" payment this month. (It's better to send partial payments to all creditors than to pay some and not others.)

"There's no question that people would rather discuss their sex lives than their financial situation when they're in a bind," one credit expert told The Wall Street Journal. "But it gives you an enormous edge if you contact your creditors before they have to pressure you."

In Control:
Be a Credit to Yourself!
Going out into the "real world" is something to celebrate. But the opportunities and privileges of adult life also include responsibilities.
Coping with adult credit means coping with yourself: learning how to tell wants from needs, sidestepping emotional spending, finding ways to separate who you are from what you own. You are the key to your own credit success. Can you keep credit spending to no more than 15 percent of your take-home income? Will you be able to resist overspending when your friends start buying original artwork and imported cheeses?

Credit. It can provide immediate comforts and ease your way to a comfortable future. And it's yours just for the asking.

Handle with care!

Why it's easy for students to get a Citibank credit card.

As a student, you've obviously been through a lot—lengthy lectures, grueling exams, numerous papers. And Citibank thinks you deserve credit for all that. That's why we've made it easy for you to apply for credit.

You don't even need your parents to co-sign. (What other bank makes it that easy?) All you need is a photocopy of your validated student ID with current enrollment sticker. The only other thing is to choose one of our cards, Citibank MasterCard® or Visa® card. Either one will give you a head start establishing credit. And because we'd like a long-term relationship with you, we'll review your account periodically so we can increase your credit line.

What's more, as a Citibank cardmember, you can get cash 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. From the largest network of automatic teller machines across the country.

So just follow the simple steps outlined below. And remember, even though most banks are looking for reasons to say no to you, Citibank wants to say yes.

☐ Tear off the application. (Use the perforations, they make life easier) ☐ Fill it in.
☐ Photocopy (both sides) of your validated student ID with current enrollment sticker.
☐ Put everything in an envelope.

Dorms to get storage for firearms this fall

You may have a higher credit rating than you think. More and more lenders are running credit applications through computer "credit scoring" programs that may actually give you points for being under 25—or living at home with your parents! How do you score on the table below?

Using this scoring table selects a cutoff point from a table like this, how likely applicants are to repay loans.

Is your PC plain vanilla while you long for a banana split? Have you begun to take another look at your hardworking, faithful, original equipment and wondered whether or not it’s time to add on and/or upgrade the system? Pitfalls abound. One person’s need for speed is another’s waste of money. In a quest for increased memory, do you simply need to add 64K’s worth of inexpensive memory, or must you part with megabucks for megabytes of memory expansion? Let’s face it—adding on takes a little thought.

First, you need to sit down and analyze your specific needs. Exactly how are you going to use your computer? Does word processing comprise more than 90 percent of what you do, or do you now need a color/graphics monitor to create dazzling graphics for art class, draw blueprints for your architecture course, or even tap into information resources other than those which the campus library can supply?

Memory: How Much Is Enough?

Most PCs come with between 64K and 640K of memory, which can be significantly increased without having to buy a whole new machine. If you want to soup up your computer’s existing memory, the fastest and least expensive way is to add an “expansion card.” Expansion cards often provide additional capabilities, including an extra serial or parallel port (socket) for attaching peripherals—such as modems, printers, and joysticks—to your system unit. Before purchasing expansion cards, however, check to see if your computer has empty slots.

The backbone of your computer is, of course, its system board (also known as the “mother board”); and the second way to boost your PC’s...

Students who own firearms will have storage rooms to keep them when they return to the residence halls next fall according to Vice President of Student Services.

Pitman said he and Housing officials decided to reserve storage rooms built for students who keep pets (used to keep them from the residence hall staff who is on duty)

"We want to preserve the opportunities for hunters to go hunting and at the same time we're trying to greatly reduce the risk that is present with our current unregulated system," Pitman said.

Until the decision to create storage facilities was made, the University of Idaho was the only university in the northwest which allowed students to keep guns in their residence halls rooms.

It's a hopper....

"Attaching a modem to your PC can cost as little as $100, and widen your academic and social horizons considerably—after all, some data bases are dating services!"

Personal Writers: The In-Between Machine

Well, if you think a typewriter is old fashioned, perhaps we should talk to you about a typewriter/word processor/character printer in one.

If you keep your fingers on any printer, you're on your way to a word processor.

Printers are typically designed to work into computer systems, but you can buy access to all the scientific, educational, and data bases available without your finger on your current system that is in use.

"Storage" is a term that is in use.

PC users can access the computer's memory at any time. Because many do.

"Smart" (read "expensive") microcomputer-based systems are gaining in popularity.

They're just too expensive. They're too slow, and they're not that easy to use.

If you're going to spend a lot to get a lot of fast, you'd better be sure you're getting something that meets your needs. The lasers have the advantage of producing higher-quality results more quickly.

"typing" is a term that is in use.

There are 20- to 40-megabyte hard disk systems and "hard cards" that can be inserted into the system unit, if space aldows. (A megabyte is approximately equal to a million characters worth of space.) This will give you more than 120 times the storage of an ordinary discoete, but this can pose increased demands in time and money for "backing up" (making second copies for safekeeping) of software and data. Most home PC users find that expanding their systems to include additional diskettes and a hard disk drive meets all their storage needs.

Dailies, Dots and Lasers: A Printer's Tale

Of course, your PC has a companion printer, probably a dot matrix one that forms characters by impressing clusters of dots on the paper. Clearly, the greater the number of pins to make the dots, the better-quality the result—and nine-pin printers are rapidly giving way to 24-pin printers. Dots matrix printers are relatively fast, and are able to print graphics—an important consideration.

Daisywheel printers are quiet and produce typewriter-quality characters but they're slow and expensive, considering their limitations (the most minimal graphics capabilities). With the advent of more advanced printer technology, they have been steadily losing popularity.

Laser printers, certainly the most flexible and highest-quality of all the printer manufacturers are also the most expensive. You might consider renting one for such state occasions as master's theses and resumes preparations.

As you can see, adding on to what you've got can provide the biggest challenge since you unpacked and plugged in that plain vanilla PC of yours. But if you need it and can afford it, go for the banana split with cherries on top!

"It's a homeroom....

 Punk PC support the addition of a second floppy diskette drive? In other words, is there an available slot in your system unit, or an available port for attaching an external one? A second floppy diskette drive provides greater flexibility and increased storage for your own data.

It's a home...

Summer vacation isn't far away and you're thinking about doing the Grand Tour of Europe this summer, or maybe backpacking in the sun on a white sandy beach. Unless your idea of a vacation is to travel first class all the way, there's usually a way to take a vacation and not spend a fortune.

First, decide where you want to go. There are hundreds of exciting, exotic, fascinating, and restful places to visit, and you have to choose the one that's right for you. Travel agents, guidebooks, and experienced travelers can be helpful in making your decision. Talk to someone whose tastes are similar to yours. Or check guidebooks and read up on places that catch your interest. Once you've found a place that sounds appealing, find out as much information as you can. Read up on the history, climate, culture, and attractions.

Travel agencies can be a useful tool in planning a vacation, but like any other business, they're there to make money. The best way to get the cheapest accommodations and airfares is to use your own resources as well as your travel agent's. Comparison shop as you would do with any other purchase. Tell the travel agent you want the lowest possible prices and work up from there, adding the amenities you want. You might not want to go economy class all the way, but at least you'll know what the rock bottom prices are and can decide which amenities are important to you.

Check into package deals that include airfare, accommodations, and meals. They can be a good savings depending upon where you want to travel. Pick up some guidebooks and find out the individual prices of rooms and meals, as well as airfares, and compare them with what the package charges. Remember that tips, transfers, taxes, and other costs are usually included in package trips. Count these expenses into your total cost.

Your personal style

If you're interested in a specific type of vacation—a biking tour or a week in the wilderness, for example—check with organizations such as the Sierra Club and International Youth Hostels. They, along with many other organizations and clubs, offer trips tailored to specific interests or sports. Decide if you want time to yourself or want to be with someone. Traveling alone can be a great opportunity for meeting people and being able to do exactly what you want. But there's also the possibility of getting along and not having someone to share your experiences with.

Cash, check or charge

Traveler's checks are the safest way to carry money because they can be replaced if stolen. If your vacation involves traveling to several countries, have your traveler's checks detached at the agent's.

er's checks issued in U.S. currency and then exchange money as you travel. If you're going to be in just one country, it's easier to have your traveler's checks in the native currency. Also, when you exchange money, the more money you cash, the better your exchange rate will be. It might be wise to pool your money with your traveling companions when you exchange currency to obtain a better rate. Take along $50 to $75 in the currency of the first country you visit if you're traveling out of the country.

Credit cards are also a must for emergencies or for buying the unexpected purchase you can't pass up. Also, when you charge a purchase, you receive the exchange rate from the financial institution that issued the credit card. That rate is usually better than the one the store will give you.

Packing It Up

Most people pack more than they'll ever need for a trip. Try to keep luggage down to a minimum. Take along clothes that don't wrinkle or show stains and spots. The layered look is great for traveling because you can adjust to the changes in temperature during the day. And always take comfortable walking shoes along, as well as a rain poncho. It's also a good idea to have one nice outfit along just in case you want to splurge and have an evening out on the town.

Booking your trip

If you're booking through a discount travel package, make sure you get all the details and read the fine print. Get everything in writing, including the name of the hotel and airline, restrictions, refund policy, and a listing of all the features you are entitled to.

If you're not traveling on a tour, make a reservation for your first night's stay, especially if you're going to arrive late or have an overseas flight. Tourist information centers can help you find a room when you arrive if you haven't reserved one in advance. They usually charge a small service fee.

Colleges and universities sometimes rent rooms during the summer months for very reasonable rates, but call ahead for information.

If you're a member of International Youth Hostels, you can obtain a directory of hostels worldwide and stay there. Hostels are inexpensive and the accommodations are always clean, if spare.

Out Your Papers in Order

To get your first passport, apply in person at a U.S. passport agency, designated post office, or clerk of court. You will need to complete an application form and show proof of citizenship and identity. Use your birth certificate or naturalization papers for proof of citizenship, and driver's license or other photo ID for identity.

You will also need two front-view, 2-inch-by-2-inch photographs to accompany your application. They can be color or black and white photographs, but they should be identical and no more than six months old when you apply for your passport. The fee for an adult passport (18 years or older) is $42 and it is valid for 10 years. The fee for persons 17 years old and under is $27 and the passport is valid for five years.

Some countries also require visas. Contact a travel agency or the consulates or embassies of the countries you plan to visit to see if you'll need a visa. Visas can take longer to obtain than passports, so don't delay in applying for one. You will need to send in your passport and passport-style photos with your visa application. Check to see how many photos you will have to include.

Be prepared

The best way to travel is to be prepared. Find out as much as you can about the place you're visiting, take along some emergency cash, keep a list of your traveler's check numbers in your suitcase as well as on your person, and have a great time.

Rental Cars

Having a rental car at your disposal when you're on vacation can be a great convenience. Almost all rental car companies require a major credit card in your own name and that you be at least 18 years old in order to rent a car. Once you've determined that you qualify, start checking out prices.

Many discount rates are available. If you're a member of a motor club, you may qualify for a discount rate. Also, find out if one of your parent's companies receives a corporate rate from an employer or belongs to an organization that qualifies for a discount. But make sure that these discounts are the lowest rates available to you. Sometimes the car rental company offers a special rate that's lower.

Be sure to ask these questions: Is there a different rate if you change your plans mid-trip? Is it more economical to rent weekly or daily? Are there drop-off charges? What is the mileage allowance and what is the cost per mile after you have reached your allowance? Is there a refill charge if you return the car with less than a full tank of gasoline?

What about insurance? Your own car insurance policy may cover rental cars. Even if you're covered, you may want to consider taking the collision/damage waiver for additional protection. If you're planning to rent a car while traveling in Europe, you must have an International Driving Permit. These are available at American Automobile Association offices for a small fee.
Dorms to get storage for firearms this fall

BY BRIAN HOLLOWAY

Students who own firearms will have storage rooms to keep them in when they return to the residence halls next fall according to Bruce Pitman, Dean of Student Services.

Pitman said he and Housing Office officials decided to have storage rooms built for students to keep their guns in rather than banning them from the residence halls completely, as has been done at some colleges.

"We want to preserve the opportunities for hunters to go hunting and at the same time we're trying to greatly reduce the risk that is present with our current unregulated system," Pitman said.

Until the decision to create storage facilities was made, the University of Idaho was the only university in the northwest which allowed students to keep guns in their residence halls.

Students will be able to get their guns through a member of the residence hall staff, who is on duty.

WHO Wants to Know?

Q. My parents want to phone home while I'm away at school. What's the best way to keep telephone costs down?

A. Check with your long-distance company. There is a special plan that lets you call home and pay one predetermined hourly rate.

If you call on weekends and at night, many long-distance companies offer a flat hourly rate, no matter where you call. So you can call your girlfriend in New York, and your parents in New Jersey, and know that both calls cost only a set price.

It may also pay to comparison-shop. Look at your phone bills for the past several months to get an idea of your average bill. Then call the long-distance phone companies to compare rates. Most of them have toll-free 800 numbers.

If you make calls from a pay phone, you can save as much as $1.05 a call by charging calls to a personal telephone card number rather than calling collect. You can use any long-distance company's phone card to charge calls made over its network or over its competitors' networks.

A few new long-distance companies are offering a flat monthly rate to people who make a lot of long-distance calls. Beware of offers that allow you to make as many calls as you like for a set fee each month. These companies typically want you to pay one flat rate for all your calls per month. They may not deliver the service you paid for. Flat-rate companies buy phone lines from the largest phone companies, then resell the phone service to individuals. They don't wait to buy more phone lines than they may need, so if they underestimate customer usage, you're without phone service.

Q. I may need a loan to help meet my tuition bills. Where do I look for the money?

A. Make an appointment with a lender—a bank, savings and loan, or credit union—to talk about Guaranteed Student Loans. If you meet certain eligibility requirements, you may borrow up to $2,625 per academic year for the first two years and $4,000 annually for the remaining years. For a maximum loan of $17,250.

Graduate students are eligible for loans up to $7,500 annually, to a maximum loan of $34,750. Repayment generally begins six months after graduation. The minimum annual payment is $600.

Because these education loans are guaranteed by the federal government, lenders qualifying standards are usually less stringent than for other education loans. The federal government, however, guarantees loans for needy students only. If you are self-employed, you must meet certain income and asset tests.

If you are self-employed, you must meet certain income and asset tests.

PLUS (Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students) loans are federally funded and you do not have to prove financial need to receive one. The maximum PLUS loan is $4,000 a year and parents can get these loans through participating financial institutions. Repayment begins within 60 days after you take out a PLUS loan.
