Draft and Veteran's requirements unaltered by charge reduction

The Veteran’s Administration charged Monday that the increase in the student fee for next year would cost students $148 per semester, depending on the number of credits they take. The charge to students would be $826 for full-time students, $248 for part-time students, and $28 for those who participate in a ROTC program.

The increase was the only change made to Veteran’s requirements. The new fee for full-time students is $216 less than the original $1,000 fee paid last semester. The fee for part-time students is $72 less than the previous $320 charge. The fee for those participating in a ROTC program is $40 less than the $68 charge for last semester.

Veteran’s requirements have not changed from the previous semester. Students must be enrolled in any program at the University of Idaho and must be a member of the U.S. military or a veteran to qualify for the benefits.

New jobs added as student fee increases

The increase in the student fee for next year will result in the creation of new jobs for students. The fee increase will result in the creation of five new jobs for students, three of which are full-time positions and two of which are part-time positions.

The increase in the student fee will result in additional revenue for the University of Idaho, which can be used to fund new positions for students. The additional revenue will also be used to fund new programs and services for students.

Turnkey housing proposed as answer to WSU problem

SEATTLE — Washington State University regents are studying a plan which adheres to the school's aim of providing mostly needed student housing, and it is at a good place.

Vice President L. L. Shellen and Warren Bishop have submitted a plan for "turnkey" housing under which the state would make the estimated cost of $1,200,000. It started the regents, the housing would be ready to the fall of this year, the vice president said.

Hahn to present flute program at music recital

Richard Hahn, assistant professor of music at the University of Idaho, will be the featured artist at the first in a series of recitals evening faculty recitals beginning Thursday, 5 p.m. in the Union of the Hospital.

Playing the flute, Hahn will present works by Mozart, Bach, Schubert, Vivaldi and Ravel. Accompanying him on the piano will be Joanne Clark, music department chairman.

Hahn, who will be a full-time faculty member next year, majored in music at the University of Iowa and has performed in various states.

The Master Student Association will meet in the 608 on at to welcome the new students, and the faculty will welcome the students to the University for the new year.

Approximately 20 Master students are on campus this year. They are from Idaho, Utah, Pennsylvania, Iran, Saudi Arabia and other countries.

integrated firms having architectural, engineering and contracting, construction, design, building and interior design offices as a single team.

With this approach package, the university officials say, the university will be able to take advantage of the services of one or two design offices, all of which can have been engaged previously. One of the most important advantages of this integrated approach is to have in one organization those services that are normally provided by separate firms.

Washington State University is in need of student housing. It is anticipated that the University of Idaho last fall has provided housing for about 3,000 students. This year, 500 of these students will be housed downtown.

Elwin Parker, president of WSU, said that WSU could be used more to serious housing difficulties. He said the university should take more action in the future. The university is planning to have more student housing to be built at the end of the school year, and with a further expansion of 1,000 students projected for fall term 1971, a critical situation is evident in the student housing crisis.

The second-annual Village project at WSU was selected as the year's top theme. The project has been expanded to include approximately 500 students. Most of these students will be required to participate in the second semester after the first of the year, and the new Graduate Student Residence Hall, with a capacity of 500, has been designed and planned for the fall of the school year.

"Even with the additional capacity, approximately 100 beds for simple students are necessary. And there is a need for additional special student housing to support the development of the related programs," the WSU officials reported.

"I DON'T BELIEVE I COULD DO IT!
"I was at a time when I couldn't learn the skill of reading dynamically. After the first week I was reading twice in one hour and starting to comprehend more.

By the third week I started getting worked after reading the "Dreaded A" in a 150 to 200 words. During the first week I really noticed the difference in my study ability. Before taking the course I had difficulty creating my mind's receptive responments. Now I can listen through 3 to 10 books per week (read aloud books in less than 8 weeks). I am able to complete any study in 1 1/2 to 2 weeks, read new material and save more knowledge about the subject. I am confident that my first year in college will be more enjoyable and I expect to have more free time for extra curricular activities.

This is the first year that 18-year-olds have been elected to full membership in the League. They can now, in addition to planning meetings and working for the League, attend meetings of the League and write letters, make speeches, and work for legislation endorsed by League members.

Campus members make up one of the three Moscow groups with membership ranging from three to about 20. The meetings are held every Thursday noon in the conference room of the new Women's Health Education Building. Those attending the meetings bring their own lunch. Coffee and tea are provided.

Students to study abroad

Beginning this academic year, University of Idaho students have the opportunity to spend a semester at one of six European centers under the auspices of the University's Student Exchange Program with the Northwest Research Associates (NRA). The motivation for establishing this program is to provide a means for students of the University of Idaho and their peers in comparable institutions to gain an understanding of other cultures and of the norms and values of individuals of different countries.

Over the past four years, students have spent the summer at Harvard University. This year, the program will be expanded to include two additional centers—Paris, France, and London, England. These locations offer excellent opportunities to gain a better appreciation of the social and cultural environments of these countries.

The program will consist of five to six weeks of study, followed by a two-week period during which students will tour France, Spain, Italy, and England. This will provide an opportunity for students to experience the rich cultural heritage of these countries.

The program will be open to students in their junior or senior year, with a preference given to those who have completed at least one year of language study. Students will be selected on the basis of their overall academic record, as well as their ability to benefit from the program.

Program fees will be determined by the sponsoring universities and will vary depending on the number of students enrolled. Students will be responsible for their own transportation and incidental expenses.

For more information, students should contact the Office of International Affairs at the University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.

"But now that the Missouri Police Department has announced that 75 percent of all home burglars look under the mattress or anywhere in the house, I am putting this 'stranglehold' warning out." Eaton said that the police will now be on the lookout for any unusual activity and will advise residents to be more vigilant.

Idaho falls after WSU

44-16 rally

The Washington State Cougars behind a second straight, came back from a third-quarter deficit to defeat the Idaho Vandals 6-16 at Joe Albi Stadium last Saturday.

The big story for the Cougars was the return of Levance Fields, who was sidelined by a knee injury. He was able to start the game and had a career-high 18 points.

The Cougars were off to a rough start, falling behind 16-6 to the Vandals by the end of the first quarter. But they managed to cut the lead to 16-13 at halftime.

In the second half, the Cougars were able to pull ahead, with Levance Fields scoring 10 points in the third quarter. They went on to win 44-16, improving their record to 5-1.

After the game, Levance Fields said, "I'm just glad to be back on the court. It's been a long time since I've been able to play." He had 18 points and 7 rebounds in the game.

The Idaho Vandals could not match the Cougars' performance, with Timmy Walker scoring only 9 points.

The victory was a significant win for the Cougars, who had been struggling in recent games. With this win, they are now 5-1 on the season and in second place in the Pacific-10 conference.
WSU girls living at Idaho deal with infrequent bus schedules

By Donna Marcum

Inconsistent bus schedules, infrequent bus service and a lack of prepared meals are among the problems facing the opportunities at Washington State University girls living in Whitman Hall in the Pullman area.

According to several business girls living in Whitman Hall, the main issue is the infrequent bus service. Because the buses only run at intervals of 15 minutes, the girls are faced with the problem of great wait times unless their classes coincide with the buses.

"They should have buses every hour," one freshman girl said. Another problem, she said, is that several girls have a Biology lecture that is at 10 a.m. and another which is at 10:30 that has to keep Pullman. However, the buses are typically 10 minutes or 15 minutes late.

Concerning the people at the University of Idaho, the girls said the boys seem to be more friendly than the girls. "The boys will say hello to the guys and a lack of personalized service," one freshman girl said. "They will say hello to the guys and a lack of personalized service, and make an effort to schedule," another freshman girl said. Census planned of U of I deer

A deer census is planned to determine the population of a herd of white-tailed deer on the University of Illinois' campus. The study will be conducted in a week's time and will include checking the deer for signs of pregnancy.

The study will also provide information on the health of the herd and the availability of food for the deer. The information will be used to help determine the best management practices for the herd.

The census is scheduled for later this month and will be conducted by expert wildlife biologists. The results will be used to help determine the best management practices for the herd.
